Baling Silage

Baling Silage and storing the bales in plastic covered stacks or trenches is one of the newest ideas in forage preservation. And different as the idea may seem, it could be mighty useful in the future on many Minnesota farms. Rodney Briggs, University of Minnesota agronomist, is testing this scheme around the state this year.

Here's how it works: The hay is cut and wilted to about 40 percent moisture. Then, with the baler set to make bales as light as possible, the hay is baled and the bales are stacked on one end of a big sheet of plastic. The loose end of the plastic is pulled over and all sides are fastened down securely to make the "plastic silo" completely airtight. Another way would be to put the bales in a trench and cover the trench with plastic.

Forty percent moisture wouldn't work with grass silage in a conventional silo. The silage would spoil whenever it came in contact with air. But with all air sealed out, the organisms that cause spoilage can't function. Fermentation, though, takes place without air.

Few farmers would want to handle all their grass silage this way. But it would be an easy way to put up hay for which there was no room in conventional silos. The bales are easy to handle if made small enough, and there is no difficulty in making a good silage stack with them. Also, they are easy to feed; cows can tear the bales apart. And best of all, if the plastic is sealed properly and there are no holes punched in it, there is no spoilage whatever. That's important when you consider that spoilage often causes a 10-15 percent loss in conventional upright silos.

Of course, this whole idea is only experimental at this stage, and Briggs and his co-workers are waiting for final results.

"I REMEMBER"

BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Mrs. Florence Webb, Inkster, Michigan: I remember 33 years ago in the hills of Pineville, Kentucky when I attended school in a small one-room schoolhouse.

My elder sister and I walked about six miles through the woods and over cliffs and past different kinds of snakes. We lived on Pine Mountain and snakes were plentiful there at that time.

We didn't have raincoats and when it rained my Mama would make us wear straw hats and winter coats. We were ashamed for the other kids to see us and we would hide them before we got to the schoolhouse.

We took our lunch in a 4-lb. lard bucket, cooked Irish potatoes and a glass of fruit, and on top of our potatoes and fruit we would put our spoons and biscuits. There were about 35 lard buckets bunched up in the corner of the schoolhouse. One day I slipped a look inside my teacher's bucket—and she had a box of snuff in her box. She would take a walk in the woods at noon to use her snuff.

In the winter we took corn bread and souse for lunch. My Mama made souse out of hogs heads and feet. Part of the time we had corn bread for breakfast and white butter, and blackberries.

Land Contract Gains Popularity in State

The "land contract" method of buying farm land is gaining popularity in Minnesota, according to H. W. Baumgartner and Philip M. Raup, agricultural economists at the University of Minnesota.

They point out that 37 per cent of the sales reported by Minnesota farm real estate brokers during the first six months of 1957 were financed by land contracts, also called "contracts for deed."

Twelve years ago, only 20 per cent of all farm sales were financed by land contracts.

These facts are reported in the current issue of "Minnesota Farm Business Notes," a University agricultural extension publication.

With a land contract, unlike a mortgage, the title to the land remains with the seller until final contract payments have been made. The buyer purchases the land on the "installment" plan; he makes a down payment, usually with the balance plus interest to be paid in stated installments over a set period of years.

In a 1956 study of 205 persons buying land on contract for deed, the respondents reported that down payment requirements under this plan were low—about 30 percent. Annual payments on the principal averaged 4 percent.

The buyers most frequently mentioned these ways to safeguard a contract purchase: Make as large a down payment as possible, preferably a third or more; have small annual payment over a long period of time (20 to 25 years), and set up prepayment privileges that permit the buyer to make payments in advance of the repayment schedule in a good year.

Baumgartner and Raup add that it's also advisable from the buyer's standpoint to have a sliding scale of repayment that allows him to pay more in good years and reduce the payment in poor years. Also, there could well be a provision permitting the buyer to convert the contract into a mortgage after he has raised his equity to approximately half the purchase price.

Advantages of a land contract to a buyer are that it lets him get started with a relatively small initial outlay and, if drawn properly, can give him sufficient security to start farming as an "owner." That can aid in getting production loans and operating capital. Also, buying on contract is often better than renting, especially in a period of rising farm prices.

The land contract has advantages for the seller, too. It allows him to keep an investment in a business in which he is familiar, and the contract payments may be geared to his income needs. Also, a seller who receives a down payment of 30 percent or less may spread any capital gains from the sale over the years specified in the contract. If he has little or no other income, he may be able to claim this capital gain as tax-exempt income. In this way the sale of the farm can provide a form of retirement income for the seller.

Deer Hunting by Bow and Arrow Is on the Increase

Bow and arrow deer hunters took to the woods in ever increasing numbers during the October statewide season, if the final figures from the Camp Ripley game refuge are any indication.

Game officials operating a checking station at the main gate of the camp report 6,750 bowmen and women stalked deer there during a season which was open for the first five days of the month and each remaining weekend.

They were successful in bagging 148 deer some of which were mighty big. Fourteen bucks weighed in excess of 200 pounds. One trophy buck weighed 255 pounds field dressed and was taken by Al Farmes of Minneapolis.

Eight tagged deer were also taken, thus adding more links to the chain of information being gathered on deer movements.

Hunters, please use caution!

Don't Overdrive Lights, Is Warning

60 mph. at Night Too Fast, Says Highway Department

If you drive 60 miles per hour or more at night, you're overdriving your headlights. That's the warning of the Minnesota highway department.

Department traffic engineers point out that the national uniform vehicle code recommends that an automobile's bright lights should be capable of illuminating an object 350 feet ahead. But at 50 miles per hour, a passenger car's stopping conditions, under ideal conditions, is 366 feet.

Therefore, the engineers point out, it would be impossible for the average driver to stop his car in time to avoid colliding with an object on the roadway. He cannot stop his car in the distance he can see that object.

Drivers were also cautioned to use their headlamps rather than parking lamps at dawn and dusk—the most dangerous hours of the day. "If it's dark enough for parking lights, it's dark enough for headlights."

430 Students at Convention Held Last week

Student Council Members Praise TRF Hospitality

A total of 430 students and faculty advisors from thruout the state assembled in Thief River Falls last last week for the annual state convention of the Minnesota Student Council association.

Accommodations were found for all the students in local homes, and the visitors were generous in their praise of the hospitality extended them. The Chamber of Commerce found quarters for all foreign exchange students in attendance.

In the annual election Saturday morning, Cathedral high school at St. Cloud was awarded the presidency, while Greenway high school at Coleraine will name the vice president, Austin high school the secretary, and Brooten high school the treasurer. Austin will be the site of the 1958 convention.

An interesting feature of the program was a panel discussion by eight foreign exchange students, who shared their views on educational institutions in their native lands as compared to the United States.

A highlight of the convention was a tape recording of an address by U. S. Senator Hubert Humphrey, who was scheduled to appear in person, but was stormbound at Duluth.

Asserting that 150,000 high school graduates were unable financially to go on to college, he said that the shortage of American scientists and technicians is dramatized by the success of the Russian satellite Sputnik.

The Soviet Union, he declared, is waging an all-out war on the United States, but that we can win it if we make up our minds to compete. He endorsed the statement of DFL Rep. John Blatnik that "We need more egg-heads in Washington, and fewer fat-heads".

The senator said he will continue in the next session of Congress his efforts to set up 40,000 federal scholarships.

He urged the student leaders to join in an effort "to develop systematic procedures to steer promising students into college," and suggested that they "mold student-body opinion into a more favorable climate for the egg-heads in your midst."

"You student leaders have a real challenge," Humphrey said, "to help mold public opinion into a realization that many American high school students can take a richer diet of education—seasoned considerably more heavily with the physical sciences."

Jaycees Sponsor Democracy Event

Entries to Be Received until End of November

At a meeting of the Junior Chamber of Commerce last Thursday evening in the Legion club rooms, Charles Ferguson reported that the deadline for entries in the local Voice of Democracy contest had been set at November 30, and the group voted to give a $25 savings bond as first prize, and $5 gift certificates for second and third prizes.

Charles Samuelson reported that the Jaycee Halloween party at the golf club November 2 was a huge success.

Following the meeting the members adjourned to Lincoln high school to transport delegates to the state student council convention to their lodging places.

Volunteers from Six Counties to Plan 1958 Campaign in Rex Cafe

Mrs. Bert M. Count, state women's advisor of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis from Minneapolis, will be the principal speaker at a meeting of March of Dimes workers to be held in Thief River Falls at the Rex Cafe Tuesday, November 19, according to Larry H. Rieder, state representative of Northern Minnesota.

In making the announcement, Mr. Rieder pointed out that the coming campaign receipts will be used to help tens of thousands of polio victims left in the wake of the vaccine's conquest of the polio virus.

He said, "No victory is worthwhile unless it is a complete victory and we shall not have a complete nor a meaningful victory over polio until the post-polios of our country are given a fair chance to combat the after-effects of this disabling disease. There are 300,000 such persons in the nation."

Mrs. Count has served in the volunteer position with the March of Dimes for five years and has recently been awarded a citation for these services from the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Seven such meetings will be held in the northern half of Minnesota prior to the 1958 March of Dimes which will be conducted from January 2nd through the 31st. Burglars Steal 2 Adding Machines at Oklee Monday

Two Machines Valued at $580 Are Taken from the Oklee Lumber Yard

Red Lake and Polk county authorities are investigating the burglary of two Oklee business firms last Monday night and an attempted entry of one Trail firm, says the Oklee Herald.

Entered were the Oklee Lumber Yard where the burglars made off with two electric adding machines valued at $580.00, and the Oklee Cleaners where they took sweaters and an undetermined number of other articles of clothing.

In both places the thieves ransacked files and cabinets presumably searching for cash, leaving paper and other articles strewn about the places.

Entry was gained into the lumber yard office by forcing a rear window and into the cleaners by forcing a side door.

At Trail the burglars (presumably the same persons) were attempting to force their way into the Arne Berge grocery store at 2:45 a.m. when they unwittingly aroused Mr. Berge who was sleeping in the building. Mr. Berge was able to give authorities a description of the car.

Polk county sheriff Carl Knutson took casts of tire marks in Trail. Red Lake County Sheriff Carl Kankel and Oklee constable Tom Toulouse are working with the Polk county sheriff in continuing the investigation.

Jobs Incorporated Arranges Financing Dow Key Co. Building

Arrangements were completed Thursday between officers of the Dow Key Company of Warren and Jobs Incorporated of Thief River Falls for the financing of the location and enlargement of the company's factory in Thief River Falls. Under the terms of this agreement Jobs Incorporated will make available to the Dow Key Co. the proceeds of a bond issue to be sold to local members.

Gordon Dow, president of the company, and Harry Helgeneseth told a times reporter this morning that negotiations have been completed for the purchase of the building now occupied by Helgeneseth, Inc., east of the city on highway 59. Under the terms of this agreement Dow Key will rent back to Helgeneseth, Inc. a petition of the building and this business will continue to operate as before.

Signing the agreement for Jobs Incorporated were William LaFave, president, and Robert J. Lun, secretary.

Mr. Dow stated that the remodeling of the building will be started at once and should be completed by the middle of December. He hopes to be operating in the new location by January 1.

The Dow Key Company located in Warren seven years ago and has enjoyed a steady growth, the original product being the Dow telegraph key. Experiments started in 1952 resulted in the perfection of a silent operating current relay and it is in this field that the company is now expanding. It is anticipated that most of the staff of 14 employees will move to this city.

Helgeneseth, Inc., has operated successfully in the plumbing and heating field. The four members of the corporation are Harry and Ernie Helgeneseth, Harold Larson and Albert Swenson. Their building has 4,400 square feet of floor space, and, according to Harry Helgeneseth, is much too large for their operation

Humphrey Flays Secy. E. Benson

DFL Bean Feed Hears Tape Recording

The Eisenhower administration in general and Agriculture Secretary Benson in particular were castigated for their inaction in making flood relief available for flood-harassed farmers in northwest Minnesota at a DFL bean feed held in the Thief River Falls armory here Friday evening.

U. S. Senator Hubert Humphrey was scheduled as the main speaker but was unable to appear personally before the assembly of about 300 persons from several northwest Minnesota counties, due to bad weather which grounded his chartered plane at Duluth and made surface travel dangerous.

However, Humphrey spoke to the crowd by making his scheduled speech by transcription via telephone to KTRF recording instruments.

In his speech Humphrey said there has been repeated flooding in the Ruffy Brook-Lost River areas and that a flood control project is in order in that area. The 1957 flood was the worst in several years and served to emphasize the need for such a project in the area damaged by the floods, he said.

Humphrey outlined his attempts to secure relief for the stricken farmers in the Ruffy Brook-Lost River area and northwest Minnesota in general and acused Secretary Benson of doing nothing in the situation.

Only one farmer out of 114 who made applications for flood relief in northwest Minnesota was granted a loan, Humphrey said. He said he had been assured by the Farm Home Administration that no needy farmer would be denied relief but claimed that agency has proved to be totally inadequate in its handling of needed flood relief.

Among other things Humphrey called for was a livestock feed program and a program to help farmers get flooded land back into condition to raise future crops.

Humphrey said the American public has been given an "overdose of public relations and an underdose of action" by the Eisenhower administration and said Benson has a lot of questions to answer concerning flood relief when he returns from his current world trip to open new markets for American farm products.

Not only did Humphrey castigate Benson for inaction but went on to blast at the Eisenhower regime for inflation and the tight money policy, as well as loss of prestige abroad, loss of the space satellite race, etc.

Education Week

Whereas, public education has been a principal concern and its support a sustained policy of our city, state, and national governments from the beginning of the Republic.

Whereas, it is becoming increasingly recognized that ignorance and freedom are incompatible, and an efficient school system in each community is vital to the preservation of our American way of life.

And whereas, the observance of a special education week each year affords opportunity for parents to visit schools, for community leaders to discuss critical school problems, and for a general re-appraisal of public education with a view to its betterment.

Therefore, I Dr. Orion D. Beich, Mayor of Thief River Falls do proclaim November 10-16, 1957, to be American Education Week in this city.

Arrangements are also being made to have these names posted, too, according to James Roche, Chamber of Commerce secretary. It will not be necessary for winners to be present at the time their names are announced, he said.

AMERICAN EDUCATION WEEK

NOVEMBER 10 to 16

Roger: Future Mining Engineer?

You'd like Roger.

He's bright and friendly, and you ought to see him build things in the back-yard, fix things around the house.

He can grow up to become a great engineer, a great help to his country . . if he gets the education he deserves.

It is our growing concern that the supply of skilled engineers does not, and will not in the foreseeable future, meet the demand. The schools and citizenry must make special efforts to meet changing manpower needs.

Your visit to the schools this week will give Roger the assurance of your faith in his power to achieve along the pathway of learning as far as his integrity and abilities will permit him to go.

Will Sandra get to be a nurse?

You can tell — just by watching her take care of baby brother — that Sandra has a sure and gentle touch, much patience, and a tender concern for anyone who needs help.

"She'll make a wonderful nurse," you'd say.

Much groundwork for a skilled professional career can best be laid during the elementary and secondary school years.

As this society becomes increasingly complex, however, both our economic welfare and our security become more dependent upon national health. Hospitals everywhere must be adequately staffed with the best nursing services. So Sandra must not miss any developmental opportunities that a good education will offer her . . . Encourage her by visiting her classroom this week.

Bobby: Mayor in 1988?

Mayor . . . Governor . . . senator . . . Why not? Our Bobbies of today are our leaders of tomorrow!

That's why Bobby and the 32,000,000 other boys and girls from whose ranks will come the leaders of our land need first-rate schools.

The skills and knowledge necessary to fulfill the responsibilities of citizenship have expanded enormously as America has grown, and society's responsibility to its youth has correspondingly increased. As Bobby passes through the ever widening circles of maturity and experience, he will be enabled to grasp the concepts of democracy as they operate in our times.

The challenge of preparing tomorrow's leadership must be mutually shared by Home, Church, and School.

Help these Bobbies! Visit your child's classroom this week.

Good Teachers

In all our efforts for education — in providing adequate schools, research and study — we must never lose sight of the very heart of education: good teaching itself.

Good teachers do not just happen. They are the product of the highest personal motivation, encouraged and helped in their work by adequate salaries and the respect, support, goodwill of their neighbors. The quality of American teaching has never been better. But the rewards for too many teachers are not commensurate with their work and their role in American life.

It is my earnest hope that, along with progress in other aspects of education, the states and communities will give increasing attention to this taproot of all education — good teachers, and hence good teaching.

—From President Eisenhower's Message to the Congress, January 12, 1956.

GOOD SCHOOLS

Good Schools should be the vital concern
Of all who cherish liberty.
From here the growing mind shall learn
How knowledge makes man truly free.
By lighting of thought today
For those tomorrow's world shall need
Our schools must lead the way
In sowing Freedom's precious seed.
In passing on those great ideals
Of justice and equality,
The basic goodness that appeals
To every youth's integrity,
We must make sure when we invest
In classrooms that we understand
What constitutes the very best
In Education for our land.
We must act on the vital truth,
That Freedom is essentially
The priceless heritage of youth,
And our responsibility!

Vincy Wilder.

Will Nancy get to be a teacher?

Nancy's smart and Nancy likes school. She already has her heart set on being a teacher—

Every classroom in America deserves a competent, interested and qualified teacher.

It is the teacher who awakens joy in knowledge, who provides an ideal for her pupils, who inspires effort and encourages achievement.

There is always a storage of these quality teachers; today there is both a quality and quantity shortage.

The good schools of tomorrow will need Nancy and thousands of other first-rate teachers. She deserves your whole-hearted cooperation. Visit your schools this week. Nancy will be looking for you.

Are we keeping Tommy from becoming a Doctor?

No! Tommy's the kind of a kid who'd make a great doctor. Tommy doesn't know it right now, of course, but someday he can have an M.D. after his name.

His admiration for the doctor whose services are so vital to his wheelchair mother, have made Tommy dream of helping others. His chances for being that great doctor cannot be assured through his family finances, but within available educational opportunities that lie in wait of his quest for power, knowledge, and skills. Scholarship programs are meeting many Tommy's with that chance to realize his dreams and develop his fullest potential.

Tommy will be glad to see you on Visiting Day in his school.

Billy: Scientist in 1988?

Billy's bright, likeable kid. Seems as though he's always puttering around his basement doing experiments with his chemistry set. You might say he's the neighborhood's budding young scientist, and he should be given every encouragement to do so, because today there is an estimated unfilled need for 50,000 additional scientists. The varied science courses he takes throughout his school years will be the preparatory background for his specialized college training.

American scientists of tomorrow must excel in knowledge and performance, if we, as a nation, are to cope with the Sputniks, Mutniks and whatniks of the day.

Back Billy and his teachers by visiting schools this week.

Beware Icy Streets, Chief Warns Drivers

City motorists were cautioned by Police Chief Elton Cummings this week to use extra care in driving in the city, now that the first winter weather has arrived here in the form of snow and slush, making driving conditions uncertain in the city area.

Cummings said that posted speed limits apply to the maximum allowable speeds under ideal driving conditions and that less speed is often advisable under winter driving conditions.

"Stopping distances required under slippery road conditions are much higher than for dry pavement," Cummings emphasized, adding that drivers should keep this factor in mind at all times when driving in the city under such unfavorable conditions.

Another factor in safe driving in winter is the fact that conditions are unpredictable. Drivers should always adjust speeds to road conditions, regardless of posted speed limits.— the fact a driver did not exceed the posted limit does not rule out the possibility of arrest if involved in an accident, in which speed too great for existing road conditions is indicated, Cummings said.

Special caution should be used during traffic rush hours and at times and in areas where school children are going to or coming from school.

State Wool Garment Contest Set Nov. 18

Crowning of "Miss Bo Peep of the Golden Fleece" for 1958 will climax the second annual Minnesota Make-It-Yourself-with-Wool style review to be held on November 18. Thirty-three girls and women will model garments of 100% wool which they have made themselves and have been judged best in their district. The style review will be held in Dayton's Skyroom at 3:30 p.m. The Minnesota Farm Bureau and the Minnesota Wool Growers association are co-sponsoring the event.

More than 450 girls and women participated in the contest this year which encourages more sewing in the home with wool, an important Minnesota agricultural product. There are three main divisions: Junior, 14-17; senior, 18-22; homemaker, over 22.

The top junior and senior winners will win an all expense-paid trip to Phoenix, Arizona, in January. They will compete in the national style show and have an opportunity to win a trip via Pan American Airways to the fashion capitals of the world. F. W. Woolworth Company sponsors the trip to Phoenix. The Singer Sewing Machine company is offering three portable sewing machines as additional prizes. Minnesota business concerns are presenting many of the awards which are being given to all thirty-three district winners.

Maynard Speece of WCCO-Radio will be master of ceremonies and Mayor P. Kenneth Peterson will welcome the group. Climax of the show will come with the crowning of the senior winner as "Miss Bo Peep". The style review is open to the public.

The thirty-three contestants include: In the junior division Clare Gustafson, Gonvick; Kathleen Braberg, Hibbing; Judith Tebolt, Moorhead; Mary Rowe, Wadena; Barbara Cathy, Appleton; Linda Rogers, Tracy; Judith Ann Bergland, Scandia; Judy Tuberg, Mankato; Joyce Schottler, Austin; Deanna Handrum, Forest Lake; Jean Louise Santo, St. Paul.

In the senior division Mary Jane Mahola, Crookston; Janet Sippola, Cloquet; Louis Sundberg, Fergus Falls; Sharon Kleinschmidt, Long Prairie; Mary Ellen Manthei, Denube; Gail Aune, Hendricks; Marcedes Eich, St. Cloud; Connie Pugsley, Elmore; Carol Sander, Dodge Center; Barbara Mejda, St. Olaf College; Emma Jean Oliankelo, Minneapolis.

In the homemaker division Mrs. Murray Warren, Crookston; Mrs. Paul Lukema, Hibbing; Mrs. John Anderson, Fergus Falls; Mrs. Howard Smith, Crosby; Mrs. Don Holtman, Dawson; Mrs. Norman Timm, Marshall; Mrs. Richard Studer, Avan; Mrs. Arthur Bagnason, Bricelyn; Mrs. Winston Hammersby, Gordonville; Mrs. Wayne Brown, Hastings; Mrs. Robert Quist, Minneapolis.

Tunberg Shows '58 Mercury Tuesday

Twenty Models Comprise New Line of Automobiles

With a big new "super Mercury" series called the Park Lane, and major styling and engineering changes in its full line of cars, Mercury for 1958 will blanket the whole medium price market with a total of 20 models. The new line will be shown Tuesday at Tunberg Motor Co.

The new Park Lane, with three models, is the biggest and most luxurious Mercury ever built. It has a wheelbase of 125 inches and it is 220.2 inches long—nine inches longer than the 1957 Mercurys.

"By extending our car line into the upper-medium price bracket, Mercury for 1958 offers a big car with matching power and performance throughout the entire range of the medium price field," said James J. Nance, vice president of Ford Motor company.

Matchless performance throughout the entire driving range is provided in a series of four new Mercury Marauder overhead valve V-8 engines with horsepower ranging from 312 to 400. These new engines feature such unique engineering concepts as water-jacketed intake manifold and combustion chambers in the engine block rather than in the cylinder head.

Christmas Seals Go out Friday to Local Residents

Funds Raised to Support Nation-wide Campaign Against Tuberculosis

Nearly every family in the nation will be opening a letter Friday, Nov. 15, containing Christmas Seals and an appeal for support of the program to wipe out tuberculosis.

In Minnesota's 84 rural area counties, 770 Christmas Seal chairmen and their committees are busy with last-minute preparations for the annual fund-raising and TB-education campaign, it is reported by the Minnesota Tuberculosis and Health Association.

"Our Christmas Seal dollars," says the letter which will go out to people in this county, "are put to work fighting tuberculosis—the disease that killed 115 Minnesota people last year and 14,000 in the nation—the disease that strikes more than 80,000 Americans in a single year."

Funds raised through purchases of the Christmas Seals will help finance health education in schools and communities, aimed at teaching all people how to safeguard their health and that of their families; tuberculin testing and chest x-rays, to find TB cases early, and thus prevent spread of infection; and research, to discover new and better ways of preventing and treating tuberculosis.

Flying Club Plane Damaged in Crash

Makes Forced Landing South of RLF Airport

Bad luck continued to dog the Thief River Falls Flying Club the past week but luckily no one was injured when the club's Aeronca Champion crashed about 1 p.m. Saturday south of the Red Lake Falls airport.

Bernard Johanneck, Red Lake Falls, was piloting the plane at the time of the crash. According to Johanneck, carburetor icing caused engine failure, forcing him to land in a swamp.

Considerable damage was done to the nose of the plane, as well as wing struts, windshield and landing gear. No accurate damage estimate was available today.

A general club meeting has been called for 8 p.m. next Friday evening at the airport cafe to discuss whether to repair the plane or sell it, and all members are requested to be present.

MINNESOTA WRITES MANY SERVICE RECORDS

Who says it's a young people's world? Statistics would be interesting on the number of 50-year veterans in proportion to population; Minnesota would very likely lead, certainly would rank high among states and nations. At Rochester Oscar H. Olsen relinquishes a Great Northern throttle after half a century of railroading; F. V. McCue, retiring as Burlington agent in Winona, has spent 52 years with the same railroad; Fred W. Beyer rounds out 50 years with the Milwaukee, 43 of them in Albert Lea, where he expects to stay on still a few more years. . . . Mrs. Esther V. Boder renews her subscription to the Dassel Dispatch for the 52nd year. . . . "I had my fill of it the very first day," says Roy Hodrik of Lyle, "but decided to stick it out a month so nobody could call me a quitter." Nobody will now, for 58 years later at 75, Mr. Hodrik still cuts a snappy whisker and rounds a neat neckline at his Lyle barber chair.

a peek at THE STARS

BY LYN CONNELLY

MICKEY BRADDOCK never had any closer association with the big top than attending one as a spectator, but producers felt he was a "natural" for the role of the elephant boy in ABC-TV's "Circus Boy" series, which made its debut this fall . . . QUESTIONS answered for VETERANS

Additional information or assistance on veterans benefits may be obtained by writing or visiting the VA Contact Representatives at the Minot VA Hospital, or the Bismarck or Grand Forks VA offices.

Q—I understand I can get my GI loan entitlement restored if I have to sell my house because of getting transferred to a job in another city. But what if I'm transferred to another job in the same city, on the other side of town? If I sold my house, could I get my loan rights restored?

A—Generally a change of jobs within the same metropolitan area would not be considered a reason for restoring your loan rights. However, restoration might be approved if you could show compelling proof that the change of job location involves substantial increase in the time or cost of transportation to and from work.

Q—I have a World War II term insurance policy. If I needed a loan, could I borrow on this policy?

A—No. World War II GI term insurance has no borrowing value. However, your World War II term policy may be converted to permanent insurance, which does begin to build up a loan value after it has been in force one year.

Q—A friend of mine recently lost his sight as a result of a World War II combat injury. What is his deadline for obtaining a VA grant to buy an automobile?

A—He has three years from the time his blindness occurred to file an application for a VA grant for an automobile.

Q—I am a disabled Korea veteran taking vocational rehabilitation training. Will my monthly subsistence allowance end as soon as I am declared rehabilitated?

A—No. It will go on for two months after you are declared rehabilitated.

Soils, Fertilizer to Be Topic at 'U'

Short Course Scheduled in St. Paul December 9

How careful fertilizer use can boost farm crop yields and farm income will be explained to persons attending the soils and fertilizer short course Dec. 9 on the St. Paul campus of the University of Minnesota.

All interested Minnesota farmers and fertilizer dealers are invited to attend the event, according to J. O. Christianson, director of agricultural short courses. Curtis Overdahl, extension soils specialist at the University, is program chairman.

The event will feature a half dozen reports on major soils and fertilizer problems and a series of brief reports on "What's New" in the fertilizer business and field crop problems.

Major topics will include a talk on soil fertility problems, by W. P. Martin, head of the University's soils department. George Stanford, TVA official from Sheffield, Ala., will discuss new fertilizer materials and A. C. Caldwell, University soils researcher, will tell visitors about starter fertilizer needs where bulk spreading is popular.

"When does fertilizer cost and when does it pay?" will be a topic for L. M. Day, USDA economist at the University.

State Pays U. S. $1.2 Billion Taxes

1957 Tax Payments Were up from Previous Year

Minnesota contributed $1,215,503,000 to federal tax collections for the fiscal year of 1957. A total of $80,172,000,000 was collected in the entire nation.

Minnesota's tax collections had gone up from $1,151,297,000 in fiscal 1956—an increase of 5.6 per cent as compared with the national increase of 7 per cent.

Wisconsin collections were $1,455,149,000 for 1957, as compared with $1,350,491,000 the previous year.

North Dakota figures were $78,960,000 and $68,065,000 respectively, while South Dakota's were $81,578,000 and $79,036,000.

The bulk of all federal tax collections, as usual came from income taxes, totaling $45,810,000,000. Corporation income and profits taxes accounted for $21,531,000,000. Alcohol and tobacco taxes totaled $1,378,000,000.

Manufacture of the new structural metal called titanium sponge is expected to open a substantial new market for bituminous coal. Experts predict demand in this market for one million tons of coal a year by 1959 and an eventual market for 25,000,000 tons annually, in the form of electric power.

Burglars Shoot at R.L. County Sheriff

Red Lake County Sheriff Carl A. Kankel said the man who fired two shots at him early Sunday morning near the Plummer Grain Co. must have been a good shot or else was awfully lucky.

The would-be burglar put two of the three shots he fired at Kankel within 19 inches of each other in the door of Kankel's car as Kankel started to get out of the car to investigate a noise he heard behind him, he said.

Kankel said in an interview this morning that there has been a series of robberies in small towns in Red Lake and East Polk counties and that he was sitting in his car by the Plummer elevator just in case the burglars should make an attempt to rob a Plummer firm. He had been on the lookout several nights last week, he said.

That he was parked by the elevator was pure coincidence, Kankel said, adding that it merely appeared to be the best place to hide his car while he was watching the town, about 3:40 a.m. His car was facing north and as he sat, motor running and radio playing, the to burglars apparently drove in from the south with their lights out, he stated.

Apparently the one burglar had been standing watching Kankel for some time, the Red Lake county lawman said. The noise Kankel heard prompted him to get out and investigate and as he opened the door bedlam broke loose. One of the shots fired at him broke the vent glass and showered glass fragments into Kankel's face, another imbedded itself in the door proper and one shot missed completely.

Kankel then unlimbered his own .38 Special, firing two shots at the gunman and four at the dark, old-model car the two thugs used in making their getaway, which emptied his gun.

The gunman and his accomplice made their getaway by driving without lights, turning east about two blocks south of Plummer and heading for Oklee. Kankel was handicapped because of this and the fact he had to turn his own car around before he could give chase.

A jimmy or pry bar was found where Kankel believes the gunman fired the shots at him. The spot was about 100-ft. from where Kankel's car was parked. No empty cartridge casings were found at the spot, leading Kankel to believe the shots were fired from a revolver, probably a .32 or .38 caliber weapon, more likely the latter.

Kankel said there was little left to go on, other than the jimmy he found. He was unable to identify the make or model car the burglars used or guess the approximate ages of the men.

The sheriff was apparently undaunted by the experience, although he admitted in this morning's interview that he was "mighty lucky and happy to be alive" to tell about it.

Two Hamel Men are Hurt in Car Mishap

Two Others Slightly Hurt in Middle River Accident

Two Minnesota hunters were seriously hurt and two others suffered minor injuries in an accident at Middle River Sunday according to officials at Northwestern Hospital here.

The accident occurred as the car in which the four hunters were riding went into the ditch when they turned off a highway at Middle River to go east on the Gatzke road. The men were brought here by Gulbranson ambulance.

In serious condition at the hospital here are Willard Baumeister and Gerald Johnson, both 21, and both of Hamel, Minn.

Discharged after treatment were William D. Johnson, 26, Minneapolis, and Darrell Dodds, 22, Osseo.

Marshall County Sheriff Oscar Erickson investigated the accident.

LOREN (SID) VRAA

The Moorhead State Teachers college Dragons produced a major upset in the state college football ranks on Saturday night when they defeated the MIAC champion Concordia college Cobbers, 10 to 9. And instrumental in giving the Dragons their win over the Cobbers was Loren (Sid) Vraa, the Prowler football all-state selection in 1954.

Sid booted a conversion point in the third period, giving the Dragons a 7 to 6 lead; and in the fourth period, with six minutes of game-time remaining and the Dragons trailing by a 9 to 7 score, he place kicked a field goal for a 10 to 9 win for M.S.C.

Sid attended the University of Minnesota last year, but this year he transferred to M.S.C., where he is a sophomore.

Two Deer Hunters in Area Are Killed

Warren and Erskine Men Are Week-end Victims

Nine Minnesota deer hunters are dead since the opening of the deer season Saturday, although only four of the hunters died of gunshot wounds. The other five apparently died of heart attacks brought on by overexertion.

Two of the dead are northwest Minnesota men. Joe Kresl, about 40, of Warren was fatally wounded by a neighbor while hunting near Shotley in Beltrami. The neighbor's name was not disclosed by authorities, who said he was suffering from shock and was unable to give details of the mishap.

The other area man killed in a hunting accident Saturday was Orville Hallebrot, 20, Erskine. Hallebrot, who was hunting near Debs, Minn., about 20 miles from Bemidji, was shot in the hip by a companion, Raymond Klassen, Bemidji.

After the shooting Klassen ran a mile to get his car but by the time Klassen and another hunter in the party, John Cook, Erskine, got Hallebrot into the car to take him to a hospital he was dead.

State Cities Get More Plants for Sewage Treatment

Board of Health Reports 297 Cities Today Are Equipped with Plants

Municipalities and industries in Minnesota are making marked progress in the provision of treatment facilities for municipal sewage and industrial wastes, according to a report contained in a recent issue of the Minnesota Department of Health's publication, Minnesota's Health.

In 1927, only 83 municipalities in the state had sewage treatment facilities; in 1951 there were 213. Today, 297 or 75 per cent of the 393 municipalities with sanitary sewer systems, have sewage treatment plants. These 297 municipalities served by sewage treatment plants represent 90 per cent of the total population of the 393 municipalities with sewer systems. Plans have been prepared, engineering reports made, or funds set aside in more than 60 per cent of the remaining communities without sewage treatment facilities.

There are many types of treatment plants each designed for a particular situation. The minimum degree of treatment approved by the Minnesota Water Pollution Control Commission for municipalities is the so-called primary treatment. Primary treatment plants are capable of reducing the strength of the sewage 25-40 per cent and are used where dilution provided by streams is high and public uses are limited. There are 175 such treatment plants in the state at the present time.

In other municipalities where stream conditions are more critical, and sewage requires additional treatment before being discharged into the stream, secondary treatment is provided. Secondary plants, of which there are 99 operating in the state, are capable of reducing the strength of the sewage up to 95 percent.

Keeping Score with "Huck" Olson

It Could Be

Now that the Minnesota Gophers have lost three conference games, and with those losses their hopes of winning the Big Ten title and a trip to the Rose Bowl, the anvil chorus of criticism will be forthcoming. The lyrics will probably be like this: Good-bye Warmath, good-bye Armstrong, good-bye Rose Bowl, and good-bye Bob Cox' All-America prospects.

From out point of vantage, and after watching the Gophers in a pair of televised games, it appears that the pre-season ratings were unrealistic and overly optimistic. It appears, too, that the squad isn't a happy squad, and it could be that the boys are giving Bobby Cox the "treatment."

Cox has been the subject of nation-wide publicity, being dubbed the nation's best quarterback, etc. From all reports and accounts, Cox isn't the type who will instill his teammates with love and affection, and if you can't do that you won't be an All-American. Fact is, All-American ratings are pretty much the result of eleven-man play. It could be that the Gophers, as a squad, resent the undue praise that has been lavished on Cox. It's happened before, you know.

It is so apparent that the Gophers respond much more readily to the direction of Dick Larson and Jim Reese than they do the quarterbacking of Cox.

But this is nothing to get unduly excited about, for although Big Ten football is "big business," football is only a game.

Not Surprising

That the Moorhead State College football Dragons should defeat the Concordia Cobbers, as they did on Saturday night by a 10 to 9 score, was surprising; but that it was Loren (Sid) Vraa's educated toe that provided the winning points for Dragons is not surprising. Sid booted a conversion point, and, in the final minutes of the game he kicked a field goal to give the Dragons their win over the Cobbers.

We thumbed through our records of the 1954 Prowler football season, the year Sid set a number of individual scoring for the locals and was named to Ted Peterson's all-state team. In that season, during which the Prowlers won seven games and lost but one, Sid booted the conversion points and he posted a record of twenty-one conversions in twenty-nine attempts.

In addition to those twenty-one conversion point, Vraa tallied eighteen touchdowns to amass a total of 131 points, setting a school record.

Quote Of The Week

The quote of the week must be cr[illegible] Garner W. I feel more like I do now than I did when I came in."

Big Fish

Albert Cork, who last week was mentioned for bagging a banded mallard duck, proved to be a versatile sportsman, for on Thursday morning, fishing the pool below the dam, he caught a pair of fine walleyed pike.

Using a daredevil lure, and casting from the west side of the river, he caught a 3 lb., 14-oz. walleye, and a short while later he added a 6 lb. 5 oz. walleyed pike. They were fine specimens, too, being plump and fat.

And speaking of banded ducks, Al Berge, getting in on the blue bill flight that passed through here last week, bagged a banded blue bill.

$325 Damage in 2 Traffic Accidents

Two Other Area Mishaps Are Reported Locally

Two accidents have been reported in the city over the week-end, neither of which resulted in injuries to occupants of cars involved, although one of the cars was extensively damaged.

About 12:40 p.m. Thursday Dona Mae Cloutier, city, driving north on Arnold ave. collided with another car driven east on Zeh st. by James H. Nelson. The Cloutier car sustained about $225 damages while only $20 was caused to the Nelson car.

Sunday, Joan Wollsbeck, city reported to police an accident at 521 Wewey ave. The mishap occurred about 12:25 p.m. when John W. Grindeland, city, backed out of the driveway into the alley at 521 Wewey av. and into the side of a car driven through the alley by Amorin Olson, city. No damage was reported to the Grindeland car but about $80 damages were caused to the door on the right side of the Olson car.

In the Thief River Falls area over the week-end two Goodridge men, Duane Englund and Harold Sievert, were involved in an accident at Four Town on highway 89. Northwestern Hospital officials reported to police here the two men were being treated there for minor injuries. No details were available.

Another accident on which no details were available was that in which a city resident, Haakon Storhaug, suffered slight injuries near Bemidji. The highway patrol here notified Mrs. Storhaug that Storhaug was being treated at a Bemidji clinic.

Nice Catch!

Albert Cork, the versatile sportsman mentioned in Huck Olson's column today, proudly displays the two plump walleyes he caught below the dam last Thursday morning on a Daredevil. Weights were 3 lbs. 14-oz., and 6-lbs. 5-oz.

CENTENNIAL TO SHARE IN TOURNAMENT OF ROSES

William C. Figge, president of the Theo. Hamm Brewing Co., announced today that Hamm's will enter a float in the 1958 Tournament of Roses parade in Pasadena, Calif., New Year's Day as a salute to the Minnesota Centennial. Figge stated his firm is sponsoring the entry in behalf of the St. Paul Winter Carnival whose Queen of Snows—Miss Eva Wicker—will ride the float.

Hunters, please use caution!

More than half of the annual bituminous coal output of United Electric Coal Companies goes to electric utility generators. In 1956 the company's mines produced nearly 4,000,000 tons.

A private "turnpike" more than three miles in length has been built by Amherst Coal Co. in West Virginia to speed up haulage of coal from mine to preparation plant.

In case you think you might be stung

Some people seem to feel that prescriptions are outrageously priced. The truth of the matter is this: Last year the average American bought about 3 prescriptions for a total cost of around $7.50. An average of less than $3.00 per prescription. Sure, some drugs cost a lot. So do television tubes—for the same reason. They're expensive to manufacture. New and improved production methods, however, bring prices down. Penicillin, for example, costs only a small fraction of what it did when it first came out. Your pharmacist has a professional knowledge of drugs and can tell you this. They are fairly priced. You get what you pay for. We are always pleased to serve you.

Medical Assn. Warns of Carbon Monoxide

Modern man may die within five minutes after being affected by the fumes from an automobile motor running in a closed garage. Ancient man died from the fumes of an improperly ventilated fire in his cave. Both are forms of combustion. Carbon monoxide poisoning can occur whenever persons come in contact with the fumes from any form of combustion.

Carbon monoxide poisoning is highly dangerous because of its colorless, odorless, and tasteless characteristics. Early symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning include headache, nausea, weakness, and vomiting. Carbon monoxide does not actually poison the tissues, but causes death by depriving the blood of necessary oxygen supplies warns the Minnesota State Medical association. Good ventilation at all times is recommended as the best carbon monoxide poisoning preventative.

In spite of the simplicity of carbon monoxide prevention, statistics show that in a recent year, gas poisoning, which includes carbon monoxide victims, took 26 lives in Minnesota.

The Minnesota State Medical association offers these simple suggestions in the interest of modern carbon monoxide poisoning prevention.

The wise home dweller will check to see that all forms of combustion—gas furnace, water heater, clothes dryer, space heater, fireplace—in the home are properly ventilated at all times.

He will see that all burners are in proper adustment.

He will consider increased ventilation needs when building a new home.

The motorist will fasten open has garage doors before the automobile motor is started. His car should be kept in good repair to prevent carbon monoxide. He will not park in his car with the motor running and the windows closed.

The wise sportsman will not use make-shift heating devices in his fish house or hunting lodge.

The wise farmer will not operate tractors or other combustion motored equipment within an enclosed barn or shed. He will see that supplementary heating devices in chicken coops and other buildings are properly ventilated.

Fresh air is the best antidote or carbon monoxide poisoning; then call your doctor.

Public Asked to Attend Session to Be Conducted in the St. Paul Hotel

Students, parents, teachers, school administrators, Sunday School teachers, and all interested citizens are urged to attend a teen-age code workshop to be held November 25th at the St. Paul Hotel in St. Paul.

Robert W. Johnson, Anoka county attorney, workshop general chairman, says the workshop is intended to provide more information about the widely heralded Minnesota teen-age code, its effectiveness as a standard for social conduct, and the best procedures of establishing a code at community level.

The session opens at 9:30 a.m. with an outline of youth responsibility in the Workshop by Jay Bambery, a St. John's University freshman, vice president of the Governor's Youth Council. The keynote address by Governor Freeman will follow. The Workshop will then break up into ten panel sessions, each headed by youths, parents, teachers and leaders who have had experience with the code. More than one hundred schools throughout the state have adopted social codes by the Governor's advisory council on children and youth in September of 1956.

The purpose of the morning panels will be to enduce first hand information from communities which have had actual experience in establishing Codes. An Award Luncheon will be presided over by Philip Pickman, President of the Governor's Youth Council. Honored on this occasion will be several groups which have contributed greatly to the success of the Code throughout the state.

Panel sessions will reconvene after lunch, and will attempt to spell out the individual roles of youth, parents, teachers, and school administrators, and their responsibilities in the implementation of a social code once it has been established in their respective communities.

The one-day session will conclude with a summary by Judge Theodore B. Knudson, Chairman of the Governor's advisory council on children and youth. The judge has stated that the workshop should aid in gathering much useful information for compilation as a valuable guide in setting up teen-age social codes."

Thanksgiving Day Parade in St. Paul

Institution Planned for Terminal Cancer Treatment and Research

The cornerstone of a one-million-dollar "rampart against the advance of a dread enemy of mankind" has been laid at the University of Minnesota.

The "rampart" is the Masonic Memorial Cancer hospital, first in the state dedicated to terminal cancer treatment and research. It is the gift of Minnesota Masons.

Leroy E. Matson, associate justice of the state supreme court, laid the cornerstone on behalf of the grand master of Minnesota Masons, George R. Wilson of Brainerd. Wilson turned the gravel over to Matson as chairman of Masonic Cancer Relief Committee of Minnesota, Inc.

Chief speaker at a dinner in Coffman Memorial Union attended by campaign workers following the ceremony was the Rev. W. Harold Young of Toronto, president of the board of colleges and schools of the United Church of Canada.

"You have addressed yourselves to one of the most urgent problems of our day, for cancer is the most deadly scourge in our present world", Dr. Young told the approximately 1,000 fund raisers.

Dr. Charles W. Mayo of Rochester said in a message sent to the campaign workers:

"The men and women of Minnesota Masonary have created an enduring monument which is a measurement of their faith in the future.

"Their Masonic Cancer hospital at the University of Minnesota is needed. Within its walls, men and women will find comfort and hope; and, within its laboratories, new things will be discovered which will redound to the benefit of mankind everywhere."

Progress of the successful campaign to raise the million dollars for the hospital was reviewed by Clyde E. Hegman, organization chairman of the Minnesota Masonic Cancer Relief committee; President Morrill; representatives of the medical school and members of the Masonic cancer committee's board of directors.

With each pass of its 55-cubic yard dipper, the new Peabody Coal Co. shovel, the "River Queen" takes up enough overburden to fill a room 14 feet by 12 feet by 9 feet, or 1512 cubic feet.

State's Property Tax Near New Peak

12.62 Mill Levy is 2d Highest in History

The Minnesota state property tax levy for 1957, payable in 1958, has been set at 12.62 mills, the second highest rate in history and 3.47 mills above the current rate, State Auditor Stafford King announced. Only the 1935 rate of 13.57 was higher.

"This excessive property tax rate, effective throughout Minnesota except in the Twin Cities and Duluth, follows the 1957 legislative session which opened with existing balances and windfalls of $54 million," Norman A. Borgen, executive secretary of the Minnesota Taxpayers Association, said today.

"The legislature not only reenacted existing temporary taxes and surtaxes, used up all balances and windfalls but has brought the state levy on overburdened property to near a new high mark. The legislature considered a report of the Tax Study Committee which recommended substantial relief to the personal property taxpayers. Its action, however, was to increase this tax which has been condemned as unjust and inequitable.

"With local governments, including school districts, counties, cities, towns and villages, depending on property taxes for most of their revenues," Mr. Borgen said, "it is indeed unfortunate that state spending reached such vast proportions that the legislature saw fit to increase the property tax burden.

"It has been accepted in many states that property tax levies should be left to local communities. It is regrettable that the Minnesota trend now seems to be in the opposite direction."

An item omitted from many history books is that a major objective of the 1492 voyage of Christopher Columbus was to open up new markets for the sherries, steel, olive oil and other products of Spain.

"The river of time sweeps on with regular, remorseless current. There are hours when we would give all we possess if we could but check the flow of its waters, there are other hours when we long to speed them more rapidly; but desire and effort alike are futile. Whether we work or sleep, are earnest or idle, rejoice or moan in agony, the river of time flows on with the same resistless flood; and it is only while the water of the river of time flows over the millwheel of today's life that we can utilize it. Once it is past, it is in the great unreturning sea of eternity. Other opportunities will come, other waters will flow; but that which has slipped by unused is lost utterly and will return not again."

Self-Help Gains Support

Senator Hubert Humphrey, speaking at the convention of the National Milk Producers federation at Cincinnati last week, advocated producer controlled commodity marketing organizations to obtain a fair price for farm products. At the same time Glenn Talbott, president of the national Farmers Union, told North Dakota members of the organization, holding their state convention in Bismark, much the same thing.

This is an interesting and encouraging development. Senator Humphrey and the Farmers Union have been long-time advocates of high rigid price supports for farm commodities. The Senator was one of the early supporters of a soil-bank program and the Farmers Union has favored various plans for price and marketing controls under government direction. The shift to the self-help program is therefore especially significant.

Such a reversal of position by the Farmers Union may make possible that much-to-be-desired united action by the three large farm organizations of the country. Impartial observers have agreed that the farm program has bogged down largely because of the failure of the leading farm organizations to agree upon a program. The farm-bloc in Congress has lost much of its effectiveness because the leaders who speak for agriculture have been unwilling to compromise their differences and unite in a common effort.

Costly Conniving

"The whole state should be gratified to learn that the projected expansion of the University of Minnesota campus across the Mississippi river is now moving into the land-acquisition stage" purrs the Minneapolis Tribune. "The state's gratification should result from the knowledge that this expansion has been planned with the utmost care as one means of keeping the University great and strong", it points out.

Well the whole state is not now and probably never will be gratified with this development. There was strong opposition to the proposal in the legislature and it probably would not have been approved if it had been considered on its own merits.

In a letter to his constituents following the last legislative session, Representative John Fitzgerald of Scott county, had this to say about the act and the manner in which the Minneapolis slickers took their country cousins for a ride. Observed Mr. Fitzgerald:

> "One appropriation item which slipped through during the waning days of the regular session and then had to be repassed during the special session was an appropriation of a million and one-half dollars earmarked for land acquisition by the University of Minnesota on the West bank of the Mississippi. This item was buried right in the middle of the fifty million dollar building appropriations bill, even though this land acquisition had absolutely no tie-up with any other item contained in this building appropriations bill.
> "Being strongly opposed to the "blank check" which the University has been demanding and getting from our legislature in recent years and further feeling that many would get better value received on our tax dollars spent for education if we developed more fully our state colleges and junior colleges for undergraduate work, I opposed both in the regular session and in the special session this log-rolling on the part of certain Minneapolis senators and University officials.
> "Because of the fact that many legislators feared a prolonged special session and wanted to get back home as quickly as possible the bill passed during the special session. However, in my opinion it is worthwhile to note that 42 members in the house cast their vote against this bill, most of them I am sure because of the authorization to the University to cross to the West bank of the Mississippi."

There are several directions in which the University could expand, if expansion were necessary, without crossing the river, and with better results at far less cost. But crossing the river served better the special interests of Minneapolis. This is a piece of chicanery that should be corrected in the next session. So far the state's loss will be only one and one-half million dollars. If we do not write that off at once as an expensive mistake our loss will grow to many times that sum in continuing higher operating costs.

Unity Has Limits

Discussing the Eisenhower-Macmillan meetings and the common interest our two countries have in defending western Europe from Soviet aggression, the Wall Street Journal properly points out that the interests of the two countries are not the same on all of the problems that are a threat to world peace. It would be a mistake, thinks the Journal, to consider any program for Anglo-American "unity" in foreign policy without recognizing the problems on which our views differ as well as those on which there is agreement. Says the Journal:

> "It is essential to remember that the foreign policies of the United States and Britain can't be coordinated on all issues. Britain's Asian policy, especially regarding Red China, is different indeed from ours. The two countries do not regard the Middle East in the same light, nor are they regarded in the same light in the Middle East.
> "No good will come from any attempt to try to sweep these differences behind a front of unity. Harm is much more likely to come, as it did a year ago when the United States Government was shocked by what its allies were doing in the Middle East and its allies professed to be shocked by Washington's stern condemnation of their activities.
> "Nor does it strengthen us in the cold war against Russia to pretend there is unity on issues where none exists. There are plenty of things on which the United States and Britain are realistically united. The most important is their determination to resist Soviet aggression in Western Europe. If they concentrate on reinforcing that determination, they will impress the Russians much more than if they attempt to make the preposterous claim that nothing divides them anywhere in the world.
> "The Soviets apparently think they are now in a position to bluster the free world into concessions or submission. It is important for the United States and Britain to get together, in science and diplomacy, and show the Russians they can't do it. And these unity efforts will only be the more successful if both the United States and Britain realize that unity has limits."

SCANNING THE NEWS

IT WILL take a long time for either official or unofficial Washington to get back to norm after the short but electrifying visit of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II, and her Royal Consort, Prince Phillip with their retinue of British officialdom.

For Britain's Queen, young in years and experience, most certainly possesses the qualifications for her position as the reigning monarch of the United Kingdom and the British Commonwealth of nations—poise, beauty, tact and a wisdom beyond her years; regal in bearing, but with a wistful smile and a democracy of action which quickly captured the hearts of a million people who saw her and the thousands who were privileged to greet her at a round of state dinners, receptions and visits-from childrens hospital to the Maryland-North Carolina football game, and two churches—The Washington Cathedral, her own Episcopal Church of England and the National Presbyterian church, the church of President Eisenhower and his First Lady, and of Her Majesty's Scotch forebears.

About 2,000 newspaper, radio and TV representatives and press photographers were privileged to shake her hand at the tremendous press reception which jam-packed the Presidential Rooms of the Statler Hotel. And these hard-bitten gatherers of the News Media were completely captured by her graciousness and democracy and cheered her time and again.

It is said the British Queen reigns, but does not rule. Of course no one knows what Her majesty and the President talked about behind the snowy walls of the White House, but that there was grim talk behind the glittering facade of a social whirl must be supposed, for immediately these things happened.

The British Foreign Secretary Mr. Selwyn Lloyd, and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles had a long private meeting after which it was announced that the British Prime Minister Mr. Harold Macmillan would come to Washington for official discussions. It was announced by our Ambassador to the United Nations, Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., that debate over the serious Syrian question would be taken up on the floor of the General Assembly of the United Nations; Defense Secretary Neil H. McElroy, although briefly in office, announced that he was taking personal charge of this country's ballistic missile program and would require weekly progress reports from the Army, Navy and Air Force, and on Project Vanguard, our Satellite program; Announcement was made that the nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization would immediately discuss undertaking a pool of scientific and military projects, to be formed for a "crash program" much on the line of the old Manhattan Project which delivered the first Atomic Bomb during World War II; it appeared that at long last the Allied nations might close ranks over the Middle East powder keg and that despite the bubbling of oil out of the sands of Arabia and other Middle East nations, it might be better to patch up our fences among the democratic nations of the world—Turkey, Greece, Israel, Italy, France, West Germany and the United Kingdom—than to keep trying to satisfy the insatiable demands of the dictators in Saudi Arabia, Egypt and others in the Arab world.

REPORT from the GOVERNOR

by Orville L. Freeman

Last year Minnesota hunters harvested about 3.5 million game birds and animals. This hunting bag included 70 thousand deer, about a million pheasants, 370 thousand grouse, and about a million waterfowl. It involved uncounted millions of hours of recreation in the outdoors. And it is estimated that it probably also involved the spending of more than 25 million dollars.

Game "Crops" are Different

Our game crop, from which this harvest comes, is unique. It is mostly a secondary or "dividend" crop, harvested from lands that have other principal uses. Most deer and other forest game are raised on lands dedicated to the production of timber, and most pheasants on farm land. The game animals occupy chinks and corners in the areas used by foresters and farmers, and their thrive on by-products and unplanned crops of the land. Deer browse on the forest brush. Pheasants roost in winter in the farmer's grove, and live on weed seeds, insects, and gleanings from the field.

Conditions Changing

But as we become more efficient in farming and forestry, sometimes conditions become much tougher for game. Clean farming and modern forestry leave fewer chinks and corners for wild animals. The trend is toward the utilization of every inch of land for its primary use. In a dense pine forest there is little browse for deer, and clean farming often allows little winter cover or nesting area for pheasants.

Game Management

This changing pattern of land use is the basic problem in game management. To maintain hunting, space must be found in which game animals can live and take care of themselves. The value of maintaining a game crop is now generally recognized by foresters, and it is hoped that in the future more and more farmers will be interested in planned game production.

How can we help game? First, proper protection is a must. Game seasons should allow an adequate harvest, but one that does not deplete breeding stock. To do this we must know a good deal about our game populations.

Space Needed

But protection and controlled use are not enough for the future. Space for game, which is now being lost, must be provided. Great extensive tracts are usually not necessary,—but game must have chinks and corners in the over-all land use pattern. One way is to buy scattered wildlife and wetlands areas. Another is the wise use of game refuges. But even with these, much of our future hunting will have to come from game raised on forest and farm lands,—on which game is incidental to the main crops.

Research

It is the responsibility of the game biologist to find and develop methods by which some space for game can be included in the primary land-use pattern. How do farm crop patterns and rotations affect game? What kind of winter cover is best for pheasants? How far apart should cover plantings be? How much would pheasants be helped if corners of hayfields were left unmowed? What about flushing bars on mowers? Are winter food patches necessary? What forestry methods will help deer? These are some of the questions for which the game biologist must find the answers.

Detective Work

Research and investigations are concerned with these and many other matters;—often with seemingly little things that may be very important to our future game populations. Biological detective work is a most important function of the Bureau of Research and Planning in Minnesota's game and fish division.

Centennial Group to Get Symphony

Man from Princeton 'U' Engaged to Compose Work

Roger Sessions, internationally recognized composer and professor of music at Princeton University, has accepted a commission from the Minnesota Statehood Centennial to write a symphony for Minnesota's 100th birthday celebration.

Mr. Sessions' selection and acceptance were announced this week by Gerald Samuel, associate conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, and James Lombard, director of University concerts and lectures. Mr. Samuel is chairman of the Centennial Music Committee, a subcommittee of the Centennial Committee on the Arts which is headed by Mr. Lombard.

The 61-year-old, Brooklyn-born composer has indicated he will write a symphony of three movements, 20 to 25 minutes long, to be played first by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra in the fall of 1958. Mr. Sessions was chosen after the music committee considered virtually all recognized contemporary composers.

Earlier, Harold Saeverud, Norway's leading composer, was commissioned to write a Centennial Symphony which is to be conducted by Sixten Ehrling, a top Swedish musician.

Contests also are being conducted currently among Minnesota composers for another symphonic work and also for a work of chamber music for any instrumental combination of not more than five pieces.

The WORLD OUTDOORS

MAN'S noble companion and friend, the dog, is an excellent partner for almost any type of hunting venture. From the "just plain dog" type that is usually so efficient when the game is squirrels, to the beagles that put the rabbit on the run and the setters and pointers that hold to a covey of quail, a hunter and his dog make a pretty picture in any outdoor setting.

If you own a hunting dog, you're proud of him. You do not hesitate to boast of his accomplishments in the field and you feel a sort of personal failure when he appears to perform poorly. But don't feel badly if your dog has an occasional bad day. He isn't a human being, but he has his faults just the same.

A cold or respiratory ailment is a serious affliction for a hunting dog, for vision is not a dog's best sense. No pun intended, the dog's nose is his strongest asset. The dog uses his eyes to avoid obstacles, not to observe details. This explains why he will fail to see a rabbit running away, but pick up the chase the moment his keen nostrils pick up the scent.

The vision of different dogs may vary, even in the same breed. Some can see a moving object 800 yards away, but probably do not recognize it at more than 150 yards. Large dogs usually have better eyesight than smaller ones.

Quick recognition depends upon motion. A dog will recognize his master by his gait, last of all by his face.

So, don't be upset too much if Old Faithful doesn't perform to standard on a particular day, even if it is a day on which you wanted to impress a fellow hunter with the dog's skill. He may be having trouble with his sniffer. Next time out, he will probably perform feats which will leave even you surprised and amazed.

Family Farm to Be Topic Nov. 14-15

House Group to Conduct Fergus Falls Hearing

Congresswoman Coya Knutson has issued a call to the public to state their feelings on the farm problem at committee hearings in Fergus Falls, Thursday and Friday, November 14th and 15th.

"We want both your attendance and your testimony," Mrs. Knutson says to farmers in the area. "The facts, the conditions, the future of the family farm as a way of life will be affected by forthcoming legislation, which in turn, will be affected by the testimony you make in these hearings."

The hearings, by the family farm subcommittee of the House Agriculture Committee begins at 10 A. M. Their purpose is to gather factual data which will help determine future farm legislation.

Mrs. Knutson asks that those interested in testifying contact her at her new office in Crookston. Last minute speakers are welcomed, but are requested to put their testimony in writing in case everyone can not be heard because of time limitations.

BEST WISHES

When publishing matrimonial notices, the nineteenth-century newspaper editor often took the opportunity to add his personal congratulations and those of the community to the newly married couple, or to make a joking comment about the match. It is not unusual to find some such pleasantry as "The beauty, grace and charm of the bride are far in excess of our friend's deserts," following the announcement of a marriage.

C. W. Kenton, editor of the "Monticello Times," added the following wildly metaphoric congratulation to a wedding announcement appearing in his paper on January 5, 1860: "May the happy couple, ever, as now, enjoy unallowed happiness, and may their honey-moon never set, nor their train of felicity never fly the track."

Upon the marriage of his colleague, the editor of the "St. Anthony Express," Kenton remarked, "Well, there, Brother Quill, married — just because we did. We can't say that we're astonished!"

CROW WING VARIETY STORE

A reminder that a busy village was once located at the junction of the Crow and Mississippi rivers may be found in an advertisement which appeared regularly in many Minnesota newspapers during the 1850s and 1860s. Clement H. Beaulieu, proprietor of the Crow Wing Variety Store, in Crow Wing village, advertised "Dry Goods and Groceries, Provisions, and Indian Goods." He professed himself willing to "dispose of them at a fair rate for cash or furs."

He also had "constantly on hand Bark Canoes, fitted up with Oil Cloths, Tents, etc. to sell or hire to persons wishing to visit the Pine region above, explore that vast country lately ceded to the United States by the Chippewa Indians, or make a trip up the Mississippi and across to Fond du Lac." Beaulieu did not hesitate to say that "The traveler desirous of witnessing the most interesting portions of the wilds of America, should by all means take this trip."

Apparently, he also ran a sort of employment agency. "Guides or Voyageurs," he said, "can always be furnished to travelers, who are perfectly familiar with those routes — making the journey perfectly safe."

In 1860 Crow Wing had a resident population of only two hundred, but as a trading and outfitting center, it served a constant stream of Indian and white visitors. After 1870 the village declined, and by 1880 it was virtually deserted.

PIPESTONE TO WASHINGTON

Set into the interior walls of the Washington Monument at Washington, D. C., are more than a hundred and fifty testimonial stones presented by individuals, groups, states, and foreign countries to honor the "Father of the Country." Many of them bear appropriate sentiments and designs.

Minnesota is represented by a piece of red pipestone, inscribed simply, "Minnesota." No better stone could have been chosen, for the famous Indian quarry at Pipestone is one of the few places this type of rock is found, and the legends surrounding the quarry are among the state's most precious traditions.

Henry H. Sibley was the person responsible for sending the pipestone to Washington. On September 21, 1849, he wrote a letter to the Minnesota territorial legislature saying that he "had caused to be procured from the quarry, about two hundred miles distant, a specimen of the Red or Pipe stone, which is peculiar to our territory," and that he hoped the legislature would present it officially to the Washington National Monument Association.

"The slab," Sibley said, "is about two and a half feet in length, and a little over one and a half in breath, and two inches in thickness." Though the stone was not thick enough to fit the monument association's specifications, Sibley explained that "apart from the impracticability of transporting a huge mass of stone, weighing nearly . . . half a ton, if of the dimensions stated, to so remote a point as Washington City, it is known that the strata of pipe stone rarely, if ever, exceed three inches in thickness." But Sibley said that the pipestone could be used if it were backed with another stone.

The legislature approved Sibley's choice on September 21, and when he went to Washington as delegate to Congress from Minnesota Territory, he may have taken the stone with him. Today it may be seen on the Twenty-second landing of the stairs inside the Washington Monument.

NO SCHOOL

"Is there to be a school in town this winter?" was a question which must have plagued the citizens of many frontier towns, as it did the editor of the "Sauk Rapids Frontiersman." Writing in the issue of October 27, 1859, he said that "The question has often been asked us recently by people of both sides of the river, who have children to send to school.

"If there is to be no public school," he said, "cannot a private one be started and sustained? This is a question of the greatest important to every citizen of Sauk Rapids, especially so to those whom devolves the responsibility of rearing children." The editorial ends on a clarion note: "Are we satisfied to let our children come up in ignorance?" it asked.

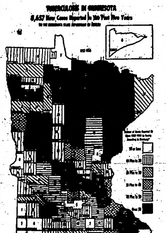
TUBERCULOSIS IN MINNESOTA

8,657 New Cases Reported In The Past Five Years



Tuberculosis is still the major public health problem among communicable diseases. A total of 8,657 new cases was reported to the Minnesota Department of Health for the five-year period 1952-1956. The numbers on the above map, prepared by the Minnesota Tuberculosis and Health Association, show the cases reported from each county. Many persons are being returned to everyday living who—not many years ago—would have been doomed to die from tuberculosis. Improved treatment, both in drugs and surgery, has increased the life span of persons who have had TB. Nevertheless, tuberculosis is still a long-term, relapsing disease. One out of every four persons in Minnesota is harboring TB germs in his body. Christmas Seals provide a state-wide effort to find the people who are TB-infected before they have spread the germs to others.

ACROSS the DESK

ideas from other editors

From the Tallassee Tribune, Tallassee, Alabama: The more you buy locally, the more money local people will have to buy from you.

Money that is earned working for an employer . . . should be spent here, insofar as possible, so that it will stay here and go into more local pay envelopes.

Buying from home merchants, so that home merchants can buy from you, is the greatest thing you can do to build prosperity for yourself and your community.

On the other side of the coin is the obligation of those of us in business to furnish the fertile soil in which these dimes can grow. So if your merchant doesn't carry the type and quality of merchandise you want to buy with your hard-earned money, why not tip him off. If he is not on the ball enough to be awake to your shopping wants, then of course you may take it for granted that he doesn't care to have your trade.

From the Barnesboro Star, Barnesboro, Pennsylvania: A group of high school students in Maine have shown what results teenagers can achieve once they take the initiative and lead the way.

Rather than nearly complain about poor movies, television programs, magazines, comic books and recordings, they decided not long ago to do something constructive. They appealed to adults to respect their rights to better entertainment and literature.

Their demands made many older people sit up and take notice. Better still, they got results. Here is the list of their sensible and urgent requests.

1. Give us decent motion picture and television shows.

2. Give us respectable place of amusement.

3. Give us a chance to show that we can be responsible, orderly, law-abiding citizens.

4. Give us clean, wholesome newsstands and drug store magazine racks with inspirational stories that can help us in our lives, instead of the trash that now blares at us daily.

5. Give us magazines and books that encourage us to follow high ideals, instead of those that glorify sex, make of crime and graft a breathtaking adventure, and picture wealth and pleasure as the one and only aim in life.

6. Give us your support and example. If through youthful weakness or ignorance we ask to attend these questionable movies or begin to read these questionable magazines, please have the courage to say "no" to us.

WASHINGTON Quiz

Q—Do I save any money by paying my GI life insurance premiums in advance?

A—Yes. About 60% of the 4,837,000 GI policy holders do pay in advance. Contact any local VA office or the office which services your policy for information as to the amount of savings.

Q—My World War II GI term insurance policy lapsed about two months ago. I want to reinstate and, at the same time, convert to a permanent plan. What premium will I have to pay?

A—You will have to pay one monthly premium at the term rate plus the first premium at the rate required by your new permanent policy. Also, you must sign a statement that you are in as good health as you were when the term policy lapsed.

Q—What was the date President Truman was first sworn in as President?

A—On the evening of April 12, 1945, the day President Franklin D. Roosevelt died, after serving 12 years, one month and 8 days as president.

Q—Has a President ever been elected without a majority of popular votes over his nearest opponent?

A—Yes. In 1876 Rutherford B. Hayes, Republican was seated as President although he had only 4,033,950 popular votes as compared to 4,284,757 for Samuel J. Tilden, his Democratic opponent. Florida, South Carolina, Oregon and Louisiana election returns were disputed. An Electoral Commission was created by Congress to decide the disputed cases. The Commission gave the disputed 22 votes to Hayes which gave him 185 electoral votes over 184 for Tilden. The Congress in joint session March 2, 1877, declared Hayes elected. The Senate was Republican, the House Democratic, and the next day, March 3, the House declared as a separate body, that Tilden was elected on the face of the returns. Abraham Lincoln, in his first term, 1860, did not receive a majority of the votes cast, but did get a plurality over his nearest opponent. Lincoln's popular vote was 1,866,352, while his two opponents, both Democrats, Stephen A. Douglas received 1,375,157 and John C. Breckenridge received 845,763 a total of 2,220,920.

CONCRETE STREETS— An Extra Measure of Protection

Pedestrians and motorists both have an extra measure of protection on concrete streets. Concrete's gritty texture is highly skid-resistant, wet or dry, so a driver can stop quickly and safely in emergencies.

Concrete streets offer an extra measure of protection at night, too. Their light-colored surface reflects more light than any other pavement. You can see farther and better on concrete, whether you're walking or driving. Remember, if you can't see, you can't be safe!

So put safety first. You, your family, your friends and your neighbors will get an extra measure of protection, night or day, rain or shine, if your streets are paved with the safest of all pavements—concrete.

Your municipal officials are planning the 1958 improvement program. Support a modern street paving plan — insist on concrete.

Appearing in newspapers of the Minnesota Editorial Association through the cooperation of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service and the University of Minnesota Institute of Agriculture.

"Gullies present last spring before a terrace was constructed have now healed completely," reports Leo Meier, cooperator in the Stearns county soil conservation district. Meier had received help in terrace construction from Russell Jongewaard and Vernon Nieters, U. S. Soil Conservation Service. Without the terraces, Meier says, heavy 1957 rains would have washed much of his topsoil away.

Everett Schaffer, Dodge County farmer, asked the U. S. Soil Conservation Service to help contour his farm three years ago, after he had tried without success three times in one spring to get a corn crop growing. Ernest Schober, SCS worker, helped set up a conservation plan. Schaeffer now says, "I wish I had laid out strips sooner. I have no more trouble with washing in the fields or replanting now and the crops look fine."

Twenty-five acres of slough have been set up as an area for upland game and waterfowl on the Floyd Dumow farm near Dovray. According to William Oemichen, Slayton, SCS worker, Dumow built a dam to put more than 4 feet of water over the area and fenced the livestock off. He protected the area from erosion by contour strip cropping, building grassed waterways and using good crop rotations on the 240-acre watershed above. The Murray county soil conservation district helped plan the pond construction.

Fireguards Help protect woodlands, a paper company at International Falls has found. In fall, 1956, one fireguard ditch was installed on a trial basis with engineering assistance from Merle E. Rundell, SCS worker. It was so successful that the company plans to construct more this year, in cooperation with the Koochiching soil conservation district.

"Ain't Misbehaven"

David or Lisa are considered misbehaving when whatever they are doing is other than what the adults around them think they should or should not be doing. Therefore it takes at least two to make a behavior problem: one to do and one to criticize. Automatically such a definition of misbehavior brings into play all of the values, attitudes, aspirations, wishes, and fears of the critic as well as the doer. He also lessens the possibility of defining behavior problems in ethical or moral terms, or even of arriving at designation of specific acts becomes:

"How the neighbors children behave."

"David's noise when I have a headache."

"Lisa won't eat her spinach and I think she should."

"Tom runs across newly-sown grass seed."

"Johnny isn't reading as well as Ann did at seven."

There are, of course, many generally accepted ways of doing things to which children will some day have to conform. But if many of the other things, which do not really matter, those things which children do because they are being themselves could be overlooked, tolerated, or accepted good-naturedly, family life would gain.

Especially in those cases where the discrepencies as logically lie with adults, children deserve a better "break." David at two cannot understand why his stomping and "choo-choo-choo" call for punishment on headache days and smiling approval otherwise. Lisa may not know that it is spinach; all she knows is that mother is upset and is roughly spooning it into her mouth and the whole effect is "icky". Tom has run across the same lawn many times to a friendly "Hi Tom" but today someone scolds. Johnny isn't reading because he cannot as yet do so.

Like the parlor game played with the sentence—"Our very large cat anxiously watched the parrot"—there are over 80 ways to arrange these words and still come out with a good logical statement. Behavior is like that too. Some actions have many meanings, and many meanings may be read into same acts. Tolerant understanding explains discrepancies, makes them seem less forbrooding, or may even reveal that, like the song, the "ain't misbehavin" after all.

Turkeys Are in Ample Supply in November

An abundance of turkey to suit both large and small families will be on the market not only for Thanksgiving, but all during November, reports Mrs. Eleanor Loomis, extension consumer marketing agent at the University of Minnesota.

Turkey and cranberries head the U. S. Department of Agriculture's list of plentiful foods for November, and they're accompanied by many other foods which will help to round out the feast on Thanksgiving Day and all the other days of the month.

Turkey raisers have produced more birds this year than ever before and cranberry growers are harvesting their largest crop in several years, one of the largest on record. Most of the turkeys will be of medium and large sizes.

Broiler chickens and pork are both plentiful. Marketings of young tender chickens are expected to exceed those of a year ago and thy will be selling at price levels appealing to thrifty shoppers. Marketing of pork is increasing seasonally, and large supplies should be at meat counters during November, with prices reflecting the abundance.

Most abundant vegetables this month are potatoes—especially for mashing and baking—and canned, frozen and dry peas. The late crop of potatoes is reported to be larger than the total amount Americans usually eat.

Look for a variety of fruit items on November markets. Besides cranberries and cranberry products, there will be winter pears, apples, canned purple plums and grape juice, jam and jelly. The state of Washington has a crop of grapes 55 percent larger than last year, much of which will go into popular grape products.

This years' large crop filberts, almonds and peanuts will provide plenty of nuts for the nut bowl and for cookies, cake and candies.

For lunch boxes and snacks, there's an abundance of peanut butter.

Surface mining operations in Ohio produced nearly 28,000,000 tons of bituminous coal in 1956, of which nearly 7,000,000 tons were mined in Harrison County.

Tuesday afternoon United States Senator Edward J. Thye will discuss farm problems as viewed in Congress. Thye serves on the Senate agricultural committee and is ranking minority member of the U. S. Senate of the select Committee on small business.

Max Cullen, assistant general manager of the National Livestock and Meat Board, will highlight Tuesday's Commodity Breakfast. Cullen will report on the Board's activities and give a meat cutting demonstration. Princess Kay of the Milky Way, Judy Merritt of Lakeville, will appear at the breakfast.

U. S. Is Looking for Operators of Office Machines

Applications are now being accepted for office machine operators and supervisors at salaries ranging from $264 to $284 a month, according to Clarence C. Knudsen, local civil service representative.

He pointed out that these positions offer further opportunity for operators and supervisors to improve their skills. Agencies of the federal government have some of the most modern and complete office machine installations in use today.

Interested persons may contact Mr. Knudsen, in the local postoffice, for application blanks.

Services to Be Saturday for W. H. Kinghorn

Former Mayor and Member of County Board Dies Nov. 13

Walter Harry Kinghorn, retired Soo Line locomotive engineer and public spirited resident of Thief River Falls since 1911, succumbed Wednesday morning in Northwestern Hospital at the age of 79.

Funeral services will be conducted Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Community Methodist church, with the Rev. E. C. Mead officiating. Interment will be in Greenwood cemetery.

Mr. Kinghorn had served the public in a variety of capacities. He was elected a county commissioner in 1932 and served one term. From 1936 thru 1941 he held the office of alderman-at-large in Thief River Falls, followed by a term as mayor in 1942 and 1943. He was appointed to the Greenwood cemetery commission in 1949 and served until recently.

Born in Shakopee, Minnesota, September 1, 1878, Mr. Kinghorn attended school and grew to manhood there. In 1904 he began his long career with the Soo Line railroad in Minneapolis, being transferred in 1911 to Thief River Falls, where he served as locomotive engineer until his retirement in 1944.

In addition to his other duties, Mr. Kinghorn served in 1944 as president of the Thief River Falls chapter of the National Aeronautics association, and in 1945 was guardian of Jobs Daughters.

In March, 1905, he was married to Anna Burrell, and the couple celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1955. Mrs. Kinghorn survives his death, together with a daughter, Mrs. Elmer Johnson of Seattle, Washington; two sons, Ronald and Walter Jr. of this city; and six grandchildren. He was preceded in death by one daughter, four brothers and three sisters.

Farm Planning Meeting at Court House on Tuesday

Two 'U' M. Specialists to Discuss How to Run Farm for Greater Profit

A farm planning meeting will be held Tuesday, November 19, at 8 p. m. it was announced today by County Agent Paul Stelmaschuk. Attending the meeting will be two University of Minnesota specialists in farm planning, Hal Routhe and Paul Hasbargen. The theme of the meeting is "How can farming operations be adjusted to produce more profit?" The meeting will be in the courthouse meeting room.

[illegible] scientists have compiled information on how much crop and feed a particular soil can produce. On the basis of the type of soil it is possible to calculate the numbers of dairy cows, beef feeders, hogs, or sheep a farm can carry. After calculating the productive capacity of the farm, it is possible to predict the economic success of the farm over the long run as well.

Farmers are asking questions whether they should soil bank the farm or keep on farming? Whether or not dairy should be expanded? Whether a beef or lamb feeding program would be adviseable? Whether production of beef and hogs would be better dairying? Whether dairying would pay off better than livestock enterprizes? Whether grain farming, supplemented by some off the farm work in the winter would be feasible?

These are basic decisions which each farm family faces and they determine the economic success of the farm and the farm family. Families are encouraged to attend this meeting, adds Stelmaschuk.

PRODUCTION CREDIT ASSN. MEETING THIS AFTERNOON

The Thief River Falls Production Credit association is holding its annual meeting this afternoon in the American Legion club rooms. Secretary Robert J. Lund will submit his report, and two directors will be elected.

Soil Bank Benefits 'Rotation' Farmers under New Contract

Died Wednesday

W. H. KINGHORN

Retired Soo Line locomotive engineer and former mayor and county commissioner, who died Wednesday morning in the local hospital at the age of 79.

Farmers can now put an acre of nondiversion cropland in the conservation reserve for each acre of cropland put in the program at the regular annual payment rate, according to Oscar J. Houske, chairman of the county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee. The Soil Bank base established for a farm represents the average acreage on a farm devoted to grain and cultivated crops, the chairman explained; it does not include the acreage devoted to hay or land which is normally idle in the rotation being followed. The regular payment rate applies to land placed in the conservation reserve when this results in less land used for the production of Soil Bank base crops. Pasture which is not cropland cannot be put in the conservation reserve.

Since the Soil Bank base for most farms does not include all cropland because some acreage is devoted to rotation uses, the new provision permits farmers to put an additional acreage in the program at a lower rate of annual payment. Some farmers may find this to their advantage since they may want to retire more acreage from production at the lower rate of payment.

The annual rate of (nondiversion) payment for conservation reserve land which does not call for a reduction of the harvested acreage on a farm is 30 percent of the regular rate. If the land on which the lower rate applies is planted to trees or shrubs or the entire eligible acreage is put into the Soil Bank, the county ASC committee may increase the annual rate to 50 percent of the regular rate provided such increase can be justified by the productivity and value of the land.

Details are available at the County ASC Office, which is now accepting conservation reserve contracts to go into effect in 1958.

Mrs. Emil Hedlund Chairman of Yule Seal Drive in TRF

Mrs. J. E. Bloomquist Is County Chairman of This Year's Campaign

You can help the Christmas Seal organization help you—at very little cost, says Mrs. Emil Hedlund, chairman of the Christmas Seal sale in Thief River Falls.

Starting Nov. 15, the organization is launching its annual drive to raise funds for fighting tuberculosis. The cost is small to the individual, yet collectively, the Seal money can do much toward safeguarding all people from TB infection and from active disease, she said.

Proceeds of the Christmas Seal sale are spent for tuberculin (Mantoux) testing with follow-up x-ray—both TB helath indicators. The purchase of Seals also helps pay fo rhealth education in the school and in the community, and for tuberculosis research.

Mrs. Hedlund is working with her committee in organizing this once-a-year appeal for funds. Serving with her are Mrs. J. E. Bloomquist, county chairman; E. O. Peterson, treasurer; Norman Holen, publicity; Don Olson, radio, FTRF; Mrs. Cliff Bjorkman; Mrs. Leonard Hanson; Mrs. Leo Ellingson of Goodridge; and H. A. Budahl, St. Hilaire.

1958 Auto Plates Go on Sale Friday

Office Is in Basement of the Union State Bank

1958 motor vehicle license plates, bright and new with blue letters, will be seen on vehicles in this area on Friday, November 15, predicted C. I. Richards local deputy registrar. The new plates will first be issued at 9 a.m. the morning of November 15 at his office located in the basement of the Union State bank.

Richards believes the pent-up demand will make the 15th a record first-day in registrations and may exceed 700, the first-day registrations in 1956. By an act of the 1957 Legislature, the new plates may be attached immediately.

The local office will be open daily from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

The 1958 tax is payable between November 15 and January 1 when it becomes due. Delinquency and penalty for late payment begin on January 11 when $1.00 additional will be charged. An additional $1.00 penalty will be assessed on January 21 and 50 cents more on February 1.

Vehicles kept in storage from January 1 to April 1 may be registered after April 1 without penalty but the full year 1958 tax must be paid.

Washington Open House Today Will Conclude Series

Large Attendance Was Registered at Other Schools Earlier in Week

The last in a series of successful open houses being conducted in the local schools in connection with the observance of American Education Week will be held this afternoon from 1 to 4 o'clock at the new Washington school. Coffee will be served in the school cafeteria at 3 o'clock.

Good attendances were registered Monday afternoon at the Knox school, and Tuesday afternoon at Northrop.

A large number of citizens turned out Wednesday evening for a "Back to Classrooms" program at Lincoln Junior-senior high school and the area vocational school. All teachers were at their regular stations and available for conferences with parents.

It was the first opportunity for many to view the facilities of the vocational school, and the visitors were highly impressed by the attractive and efficient layout.

Firemen were called Tuesday evening at 6:30 to the main Land O'Lakes plant on Atlantic av., where a motor used to operate an elevator burned out and caught fire. The flames were confined to the motor.

To Arrange '58 Polio Campaign Here Tuesday

Workers from Six Counties to Meet in the Rex Cafe

Officials of polio chapters in six Northwest counties will work out details of the 1958 fund campaign to open January 2 at a dinner meeting in the Rex Cafe next Tuesday evening, November 19, at 6:30. Counties represented will be Pennington, Red Lake, Marshall, Kittson, Polk and Norman.

Mrs. Bert M. Count, state women's advisor of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, will be the principal speaker, according to Larry H. Rieder of St. Cloud, Foundation representative for Northern Minnesota.

To combat an immediate emergency need for funds, National Foundation chapters with dollars not now needed for patient care or other commitments have been directed to send this money to national headquarters to be made available to destitute Chapters.

President Basil O' Connor has informed chapters that despite a significant drop in new polio cases, the National Foundation's patient aid needs for 1957—primarily the cost of care for post-acute polio patients — have plunged many hundreds of chapters into debt.

"By early fall," Mr. O' Connor said, "national headquarters had sent $3,000,000 to chapters that had emptied their treasuries providing help for patients."

Although there are dramatically fewer cases of new polio, Mr. O'Connor said, this year chapters are providing huge sums for financial aid for some 53,000 post-acute cases and an estimated 4,800 new cases.

High School Principal Lauds Public for Part in State Convention

F. Miles Nelson, Lincoln high school principal, today addressed the following open letter to the people of Thief River Falls:

I should like to personally congratulate the people of Thief River Falls for the great success of the state Student Council convention. I do not intend to thank you because each of us was an equal partner in the project. When asked to house the delegates of the convention without pay, you came forward to offer rooms in your homes. When you heard that we were having difficulty because of the flu, you really flooded us with homes for housing—so much, in fact, that we did not have to use all of the rooms available.

When called upon, the organizations such as the Chamber of Commerce, provided housing among you for the foreign exchange students. Transportation was provided in adequate supply when we were in great need here at the school, when great numbers of students needed to be moved.

When you accepted students into your homes, you made their visit a very pleasant and memorable one, by the students' own statements. You went all out in your hospitality. You proved by all of this that Thief River Falls is a wonderful place in which to live, because the way to judge a town is by its people.

Not to be outdone by the adults of the community, a group of the students of Lincoln High, about 250 strong, pitched in to make the convention a memorable one. In my teaching experience I have never been as proud of a group of students as I am of the students of Lincoln for the part that they played in the project.

They arranged for housing and placed students in homes. They transported students to these homes with dispatch. They decorated the gym for for the delegate dance better than it has ever been done before. They planned and arranged for a banquet and a luncheon for the delegates. They transported chairs and other equipment when it was needed. They greeted delegates and answered their many questions. They provided entertainment at the programs and sessions. They served as recorders for the discussion groups and did an excellent job of writing up these reports for a book to be published later.

This was a student proect and they did it with a bare minimum of supervision of any kind. This was all accomplished in spite of the handicap of illness that thinned the ranks. When one group dropped out, because of illness, another group promptly took its place to carry on.

School Board Plans Change in Insurance

Agrees at Meeting Monday on Change in Form of Policies

The Thief River Falls board of education at its November session Monday evening reached agreement on a new arrangement for handling its insurance policies, and decided to secure the services of an appraisal firm to put a value on local school property, provided that the cost of the appraisal is found to be reasonable.

It is planned by the board to reduce the present numerous policies for extended coverage on school buildings to one or two, and the writer of the policies will be selected on the basis of proposals by the insurance companies.

The arrangement calls for the agent writing the policy to receive five per cent of the gross commission as a service fee, with the remainder of the commission to be divided among 11 agencies currently sharing in the business.

The new policies will take effect January 8, 1958, and will be written on a five-year basis, with the premiums payable in annual installments.

On policies covering school buses, boilers and public liability, the arrangement calls for the agent writing the policies to receive ten per cent of the gross commission, with 11 agencies sharing in the balance.

Supt. Irwin Mickelson submitted a list of recommendations made by the state department of education following an inspection of the local school system October 3. Principal items were a full-time elementary librarian, improvement of the Washington school grounds, and improvement of general maintenance and boys' dressing room space.

Named to serve on the advisory council for distributive education were Sidney Lieberman, R. S. Eldevik, Cliff Bjorkman and Andy Williamson, alternate, representing cooperating business firms; and Miles Nelson, principal, and Wilfred Raeker, instructor, as faculty representatives.

4-H Members May Enter 16th Radio Speaking Contest

Pennington County Club Members Invited to Join in Contest This Winter

The sixteenth annual 4-H radio speaking contest is open to any Pennington county 4-H members between the ages of 14 and 21, County Agent Paul Steimaschuk announces.

The topic for this year is "Our Country's Most Important Problem Today—What Can I Do About It?"

County contests must be held by February 14. The state contest is scheduled for March 8.

Contestants prepare original speeches suitable for radio use. They must be five to seven minutes in length. Speeches are judged on originality, composition and delivery.

Last year 16 club members from Pennington county were among 700 4-H'ers in the state who participated in the radio speaking contest.

Clubs may want to have a "brainstorming" session before members write their speeches in order to get as many ideas as possible, Steimaschuk suggests. For further information on the contest and for a list of reference material, they may consult the county extension office.

The University of Minnesota Agricultural Extension Service, in cooperation with the Minnesota Jewish Council is again providing nearly $1,500 in awards for county, district, and state winners.

Shootin' the Breeze

BY Mack Draper

Normally this column runs Mondays but this week is different . . . we didn't have time to write it in time for Monday but we have an item we think is too important to wait until next week.

So, here goes!

Do you remember reading in the Times last February about the George Erickson family that was burned out of their farm home in Wyandotte township.

You'll probably remember that St. John's Lutheran church gave the Ericksons a house that was on the lot where their nearly-finished church stands today.

A local house-mover hauled the house to the Erickson farm, charging only for actual expenses. Neighbors chipped in and helped put the house on footing, then put up cash along with their labor to make the house livable.

Local merchants donated household items with which the Ericksons furnished the house so that, instead of giving up and moving back to George's native East Grand Forks, the Ericksons continued to farm.

George wasn't born and raised on a farm. He's a city boy to whom farming appears as the ideal life. After his discharge from the service, where George flew C-47's in the Troop Carrier Command in Europe, he and his wife decided they'd fulfill their ambition and go farming.

They didn't make the move right away, though. George's Dad wanted George to take over his share in a going farm implement business in which the elder Erickson was a partner, but the Ericksons were adamant and in 1949 or 1950 moved to the farm they now occupy.

Things weren't easy. George had to build up a dairy herd and equip the farm from scratch, with little to use for capital. Nevertheless, by hard work and determination they began to make the farm pay off, by using every known means of producing farm income.

They won the respect of their neighbors by their efforts.

This year, just as things were beginning to look up, and the dairy herd built up to where production was beginning to meet acceptable standards, the Ericksons began to have bad luck.

First, the house burned. This obstacle they overcame, with the help of neighbors and friends for miles around. This summer George didn't have a bumper crop—but he did get all of it.

In fact, things were beginning to look bright again. He was planning improvements on the farm and looking ahead to next year's crop, after working on the house this coming winter.

Then the blow fell.

George, as we said before, didn't have much money to start with. As a matter of fact he had to buy the farm on contract for deed, in order to get it at all. At this time he has it nearly half paid for.

But, not quite.

Now the owner of the farm figures to resell the farm at a nice figure and the Ericksons have to vacate it before the end of November.

George needs $4,800 to pay off the balance on the farm. He has paid over $4,000 into it so far.

But, with the farm situation what it is, and with our current "tight-money" policy now in effect, he can't raise the whole $4800. And if he can't raise it. . .

Well, Pennington county is going to lose an up-and-coming young farmer if that money isn't forthcoming soon. The sale date has already been set for his machinery and stock but it still isn't too late.

We'd like to see George stay here in Pennington county. He has a nice little farm just east of highway 59 in Wyandotte, and he's doing a good job of working it.

He doesn't want a hand-out—all he wants is enough money so he can keep the farm. He'll do the rest himself, with the help of Mrs. Erickson and a husky son just now coming of age where he can be a lot of help around the place. Then there are some other little Ericksons who'll be coming of age to give more help later.

What can be done we don't know. But, we hope someone will have a heart and help the Ericksons realize their ambition to be a successful farmers.

If someone will help the Ericksons we'll all benefit from it. They're family farmers with the will to win. We could use more like them.

SO LONG!

Lincoln Principal Thanks Public for Aid to Convention

What were the results of the convention? It changed an impression of students from other parts of the state. Yes, many came with a poor impression and left with a good one. It was the best advertising that our community has had in a long time. Those visitors liked the people of Thief River Falls, with whom they became acquainted, both students and parents. They were impressed with your generosity and the warmth and genuineness of your hospitality. You did a bang-up job of public relations. It is a great pleasure to be counted as a member of this community. Miles Nelson, principal.

Centennial Celebration

Minnesota has a rich history, and over its one hundred years of statehood, which will be celebrated next year, there have been many changes and remarkable progress. As the "old-timer" look back they see few things which are still done the same as they were in the days of the past. Many items in machinery, farm equipment, household appliances, building materials, crops, and ways and means of doing things are completely new. They are not just change overs. They are new in principles and designs because of research and developments in science and technology.

The centennial celebration will highlight the developments and changes over the years. It will, in many cases, reconstruct historic developments in communities. It will point to the significance of the many industries in the state and the importance of these industries to the people of this state of Minnesota. Minnesotans have traditions and a heritage they are justly proud of and we will want to speak of all these things in a clear and proud voice so that the citizens of the State and the Nation may come to know and appreciate Minnesota even more than they have till now.

The centennial celebration is an every citizens project. It belongs to each and every man, woman and child in the state and every organization dedicated to the state of Minnesota.

Since we have seen startling and important changes in agriculture over the years it is well to look back and see the road we have traveled on. A glance backwards may also serve as a look ahead since trends, and changes may be better anticipated and their outcomes appreciated to a greater degree.

Because of the importance of agriculture, we have a special interest in studying the changes in agriculture and their implication for the future. To serve the functions outlined above, a series of notes will be included in this column from time to time in recognition of the importance of the 100 years of growth and progress of the State of Minnesota.

4-H Council Adopts Theme

The leaders of the sixteen 4-H clubs in Pennington county have adopted the centennial theme for their activities in the year 1958. At the last meeting held on November 4, the leaders of the clubs decided to canvass each community served by the club for articles and ideas which could be used in the centennial celebration. The leaders will contact their neighbors and the 4-H'ers will request their parents for articles, tools, clothing, and any other exhibits which may be used to portray the life and work of pioneers and the changes to the present day. If you have tools, household articles, or farm equipment contact the 4-H leader in your community, so that items may be listed. The items will be safeguarded from damage and will be properly cared for.

Calf Feeding

Regardless of how you feed it later on, every new born calf needs all of the "first milk" it will drink to get a good start in life.

This first milk, or colostrum, is full of antibodies that a day-old calf needs for protection against ailments. It's also rich in vitamins A and D and other nutrients.

Leave the calf with the cow for the first two or three days, then feed whole milk at about one-tenth of the weight of the calf daily. Feed it two times a day.

After the calf is two weeks old, the way you feed it will depend on the milk available. The skim-milk plan works well on farms selling cream. Under this system, gradually replace whole milk with an equal amount of skim milk fed twice daily. Feed this way until the calf is about four months old. Feed top-quality hay and grain as soon as the calf will eat it.

Limit the grain to about four pounds daily. Almost any mixture suitable for the milk cows will be all right for the calf when skim-milk is fed.

For farms selling whole milk, a minimum-milk calf starter plan often works well. This requires less milk but more care than skim-milk feeding. This plan calls for feeding whole milk daily during the first 6 to 8 weeks, or shifting to reconstituted skim-milk or buttermilk when the calf is about 3 weeks old. Or, if the price of milk is high enough so that milk replacer pays, you can start feeding the replacer to calves only a few days old.

Feed either of these products until the calf is eating at least one pound of hay and two pounds of grain mixture daily. Start hay and grain when the calf is only a few days old. The best starter mixtures for calves on this plan contain 10-30 per cent dry skim-milk or powdered buttermilk.

As you shift from milk to starter, encourage the calf to eat more of the grain mixture, up to four pounds daily. After weaning and until the calf is about 3½ months old, feed up to four pounds daily of the same concentrate mixture as before.

No matter what feeding plan you use, keep the calf in a clean dry pen free from drafts. Keep the feeding pails and mangers clean and avoid sudden feed changes.

Looking for FREEDOM?

Not even the largest unabridged dictionary can hold all the definitions of FREEDOM.

There is the freedom that is expressed and documented. There is the volatile freedom that slays tyrants. There is the every-day freedom that is a way of life. And there is the freedom that is still a dream.

Freedom is an active word with as many meanings as there are people. When we want a partial definition, we use the dictionary. But to get the feel of freedom, to experience it, to perpetuate it, we use our schools.

Millions of Americans are returning to their schools this week. With their children, they are sharing in an expression of freedom . . . and moving toward the freedom that is still a dream.

"THERE'S NOTHING NEWER IN THE WORLD OF STYLE!"
"THE WHOLE WORLD [illegible] WITH FORD'S NEW INTERCEPTOR V-8 ENGINE!"

The 58 FORD is here now...
there's nothing newer in the world

There's bold, new styling—new Interceptor V-8 Power—new Cruise-O-Matic Drive—new Ford-Aire Suspension! The 58 Ford is the only car ever to meet a world-wide test and win world-wide approval before its public premiere!

You could search the world over and never find a car to match this 58 Ford's new beauty . . . new power . . . new ride . . . all at the low Ford price. We know! We tried it!

In Paris . . . the most style-conscious fashion critics in the world had a deep, low bow for Ford's latest style creation. In the mighty Himalayas, Ford's new Interceptor V-8 engine with Precision Fuel Induction won the day!

Then there's nothing newer than the true air ride of Ford-Aire Suspension. It's like riding on a cloud! But, you don't have to go to foreign soil to drive this newest Ford. We'll gladly save you the trip. Come in today!

From London to Bangkok...the whole world loved it!

The 58 Ford stopped traffic in Trafalgar Square when it passed through on its round-the-world trip. And that was typical of the excitement this Ford caused in Paris . . . Rome . . . Athens . . . Istanbul . . . Calcutta . . . and Bangkok. For this Ford was proved around the world in the toughest "shakedown" cruise in history.

With all that's new for a world of difference

You'll ride in a new world of fashion with Ford's [illegible] styling. From new Power-Flow hood to Safety-Twin Taillights, Ford's world-ahead styling is a standout! There's a new Slipstream roof . . . a new Sculptured rear [illegible] that's out of this world.

You'll be ahead with Ford's new Interceptor V-8 and Precision Fuel Induction. Gives you up to 300 hp. Smoother power . . . [illegible] power . . . from less gas! The secret is Precision Fuel Induction, [illegible], fuel feeding, and combustion system.

You'll get up to 10% more gas savings with new Cruise-O-Matic Drive teamed with the new Interceptor V-8. New D1 position, used for normal driving, lets you move smoothly—with a touch of your toe—from solid-feeling take-offs right up to highway cruising speeds.

You'll ride on a cloud instead of a spring with Ford-Aire Suspension. This is the way you've dreamed of driving—floating on air! Four air pillows literally soak up any sign of a bump. Car relevels every time someone gets in or luggage is loaded.

You'll steer with a feather touch with Ford's new Magic-Circle Steering. Nothing rolls like a ball, and that's the secret of Ford's handling ease. Free-moving steel balls in the steering gear are virtually friction-free—give you the closest thing yet to power steering!

Your night driving is safer with Ford's Safety-Twin Headlights. You get safety you simply can't get with single lights . . . special light for high beam . . . special light for low. It's the biggest advance since the sealed-beam! It's high style, too.

Smooth as they come . . . newest as they go. The Fairlane 500 takes the 58 styling note, going every [illegible] driving, too!

COME IN . . . SEE THE CAR THAT WAS PROVED AND APPROVED AROUND THE WORLD!

EGF Man to Head Potato Committee

John P. Bushee Named Chairman at Meeting

John P. Bushee of East Grand Forks was elected chairman of the Red River Valley potato committee at the board's organizational meeting recently. Oston H. Pladson, Hatton, North Dakota, elected vice chairman, and, Bennitt Aurestad, Halstad, elected secretary-treasurer.

In other business, the committee decided, after reviewing the 1957 crop conditions, and potential potato shipments, not to ask for any tighter grade and size restrictions at this time because it was the opinion of the committee that with the size of the crop in storage and the potential higher than normal shrink that growers should be able to market their crop with a reasonable return without restricting any more of the crop than will be done with the present grade regulations.

The committee pointed out that in addition to the acreage that was abandoned due to excess water conditions, 7,240 acres of harvestable potatoes were frozen in the ground and will not be harvested.

Due to anticipated reduction in the number of shipments from the Valley, the committee found it necessary to reduce the appropriation set up for advertising and promotion of Red River Valley potatoes from $70,000 to $55,000.

Roland L. Powers, representative of the Fruit & Vegetable Division, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., also attended the meeting and discussed the operation of marketing agreements with the committee.

The arc welding course at the Northwest School of Agriculture, Crookston, will not be started until Monday evening, November 25, at the Engineering Building at 7:30 p.m.

Registrations will be taken and the class organized at this time. Interested persons may write or call the Northwest School—B. C. Miller or Harry Soderburg from the farm shop department. The cost of instruction is $20 for the course, which includes 24 hours of instruction and practice in arc welding.

QUESTIONS answered for VETERANS

Additional information or assistance on veterans' benefits may be obtained by writing or visiting the VA Contact Representatives at the Grand Forks VA offices.

Q—Since my firm is transferring me to another city, I want to sell my GI house and get my loan rights restored so I can buy another one. How do I get things started?

A—Write a letter to your VA Regional Office explaining the situation. Include your certificate of eligibility for a GI loan, if you have it, or else your discharge paper. Also include a statement from your employer to the effect that you are being transferred. VA will tell you what else is needed, after you have taken this first step.

Q—Is it possible to start school under the War Orphans Education program if a young person is under 18 years of age?

A—Yes, if he or she has quit or graduated from high school, is above the age of compulsory school attendance in his State, and VA finds it would be in the applicant's best interest to begin training before he reaches age 18.

Q—I am a totally disabled World War II veteran. I want to convert my GI term insurance policy to a permanent plan. Will my disability limit the choices of permanent plans that are available to me?

A—Yes. Endowment policies are not available to totally disabled veterans. However, you do have a choice of ordinary life, 20-pay life or 30-pay life.

Q—I am enrolled in school under the Korean GI Bill and I want to change my course. I have never changed courses before. Could I take VA vocational counseling to help me make sure my new course will be the best for me?

A—Yes. On the VA form for changing courses, indicate that you want vocational counseling. VA will set up an appointment for you.

Warren Juniors Offer Class Play

"Our Hearts Were Young and Gay" by Cornelia Otis Skinner and Emily Kimbrough, junior class play at Warren high school, will have its debut in Warren on Friday, Nov. 15, at 8:15 p.m. in the high school auditorium. The play is a three-act comedy and is directed by Miss Karen Garrison and assistant director Romelle Vanek.

Cornelia Skinner played by Pat Wilson, tries to be cosmopolitan, and Emily Kimbrough, played by Jean Wood, is very naive but makes up a combination that adds spark to this comedy.

Donkeys Provide Hilarious Evening at Plummer

Here are three of the participants in an evening of fun enjoyed by Plummerites, as they pose during one of the quieter moments of the evening. This pictures Kenneth Laufman, Plummer High School FFA chapter member, and Elaine Koskila and Madonna Delage, PHS FHA chapter members astride their mounts before the beanball polo game which followed the regular donkey basketball game.

In beanball polo the participants try to knock a beanball over the goal with toy brooms as they ride their balky mounts over the playing area. Two boys and two girls played on each team.

In the donkey basketball game the Plummer alumni defeated the Plummer FFA 8 to 2—although the score meant little. The game was more of a battle between players and their mounts than it was between teams and, as could be expected, the donkeys held the upper hand.

Donkey Ball Player Dismounted

Scenes such as this kept approximately 150 persons howling with glee during the course of the donkey basketball game in the Plummer gymnasium Tuesday evening. This unidentified player has just been bucked off by his mount, a jenny which kept everyone who attempted to ride her busy getting on, falling off and picking themselves off the floor where she usually deposited them. At right another player on the opposing team takes the easy way out by leading his mount around the floor.

Believe it or not, during the course of the game a total of five goals were shot by participants of the game, won by the Plummer alumni, 8-2. The razor-backed, unpredictable donkeys make a poor platform from which to shoot goals, the players discovered.

Embury Is Named President of TRF Golf Club Tuesday

Nearly 50 members turned out Tuesday evening for a highly successful annual meeting of the Thief River Golf club in the club house, starting with the serving of a turkey dinner. In the election of officers, Russ Embury was named president, succeeding L. L. Tygeson. Otis Wold was elected vice president, and Norris Melander was retained as secretary-treasurer.

Appearing in newspapers of the Minnesota Editorial Association through the cooperation of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service and the University of Minnesota Institute of Agriculture.

If University of Minnesota research workers have their way, our forest products may some day be used to improve soil in the North Star state. Wood chips are one example of the possibilities along this line. Soils scientists have already increased potato yields by applying wood chip bedding, together with nitrogen fertilizer, to the soil.

These tests were conducted in 1956 at the University's North Central Experiment Station, Grand Rapids. The scientists compared adding untreated wood chips, chips used as bedding and straw bedding, with field areas that received none of these organic matter treatments. They also compared nitrogen treatments of 60 and 120 pounds per acre.

Where the land received 60 pounds of nitrogen and wood chips bedding, potato yields were boosted to 363 bushels per acre. This was 25 percent higher than where no nitrogen or organic matter was added. The same amount of nitrogen and straw bedding raised yields by 31 percent. Adding nitrogen alone, though, without chips or straw brought much smaller yield increases. Also, the 60-pound nitrogen rate brought better results than did 120 pounds.

The practical application is obvious. Wood chips make good bedding and are more absorbent than straw. Also, straw isn't always available as bedding anyway. This research shows that many farmers might find it profitable to buy chips for bedding and get repaid in higher yields per acre by later spreading the bedding on the land. This would help the farmer and give Minnesota forest owners one more market outlet for their products.

Pyroceram, a new glass material harder than steel, lighter than aluminum, and 15 times as strong as plate glass, has been developed.

First Reports

While we have received but scattered and meager returns from the outlying precincts, the reports that we have been able to compile seem to indicate that the 1957 deer hunting season, in these parts, will be rated as fair to poor.

As expected, and predicted, the Mud Lake refuge (and what's this we hear about changing the name of the refuge to Kuriko or Whiskey? Some merit in the suggestion, too), due to the high water level, failed to be the producer of former years. Perhaps it was an error to open Mud Lake this season, for the deer that were in there would have provided a "feeder" for the adjacent territory.

Fortunately, and it was perhaps one of the reasons why the conservation commissioner was prevailed upon to issue his order No. 1487, the Marshall county and Rocksbury-Smiley statutory game refuges were declared open. Hunters who worked over these two refuges reported numerous deer, but they were handicapped somewhat by the fact that they were limited to shotgun slugs in the Marshall county refuge.

There weren't many complaints about the early opening of the deer hunting season, with the late-November weather that prevailed on Saturday making the hunting comparable to previous years. The only valid objection we heard to the Nov. 9th opening was that it snuffed out the duck hunting season, and that's too short anyway. In ordinary years, the duck hunters can enjoy their sport until mid-November.

Called to Action

The state's high school basketball squads were called into action on Monday for their opening drills in preparation for the 1957-58 season. The squad will have a couple of weeks of practice before they begin play on their 1957-58 schedule. Coach Al Adams' Prowlers will open their season on Friday night, Nov. 29, when they play the Roseau Rams at Roseau.

According to our reckoning, and a study of the various squad rosters, it appears that the following teams will be district favorites: Bemidji, district 29; Fosston, district 30; Thief River Falls, district 31; and Hallock, district 32.

The V.F.W. Camp

The V.F.W. deer camp, or as it is more familiarly called, the Bull Moose camp, located two miles north and five miles east of Grygla had, as of yesterday, three deer hanging from the meat pole. It's quite a camp that the boys have set up on the old homestead site of Harlan Huseth's grandfather.

The membership of the club (and there is a waiting list a half-block long) recites like this: Huseth, Earl Gjernes, Roy (Bush) Olson, Bob Carlson, Morris Efteland, Am Wysoski, Arnold Kelly, Bill Reed, Donovan (Three-two) Liden, and Jim Miramontes.

We have received reports from hunters, who are in parties adjoining the Bull Moosers, that they, the Vets, have a unique method of hunting, or so it appears. It appears that these Bull Moosers use eight or nine posters and one driver on their drives, and the driver is usually Morris the Mouse Efteland.

And what's this we hear about the group, on Saturday night, dedicating a song to Earl Gjernes?

On the All-State Squad

Don Green, a member of that contingent of Prowler athletes in attendance at Concordia college, was a valued member of this season's state championship Cobbers.

Don, who was captain of the 1949 Prowlers, played at a guard for the Cobbers, and so effective was his play that he was named to the All-State squad as a second team guard.

Casualty

This week, since Monday, we have been under the influence of a flu bug, or a reasonable facsimile.

Programs at High School Are Held on Veterans' Day

Veterans' Day was observed Monday afternoon in Lincoln high school with identical programs being presented to students in both the senior and junior high school under the sponsorship of the local American Legion post. Commander Bob Bredeson presented the Rev. Otto Dale, Ninth district chaplain of the American Legion, who discussed the significance of Veterans' Day. Songs by the high school chorus completed the program.

Garden Valley Phones to Get New Numbers

According to Carl M. Ostby, manager of the Garden Valley Telephone company, subscribers of the company will shortly be assigned new telephone numbers. The new numbering system is a necessary part of the operating plan whereby this country will be provided with cross country toll dialling or "DDD" as it is sometimes called and meaning direct distance dialing.

Under DDD it will eventually become possible for people wishing to call cross country to do so automatically with a minimum of operation by telephone personnel. By installing certain equipment and using the proper telephone numbers Garden Valley will have done its part toward setting up of the nationwide DDD system.

By December 15th, directories carrying the new numbers will be in the hands of subscribers in Goodridge, Grygla, Oklee, Plummer, Red Lake Falls and St. Hilaire, and the number plates on all phones will have been changed.

By February 16th 1958 the following exchanges will have their new numbers and new directories: Beltrami, Erskine, Fertile, Fosston, Gully, Lengby, McIntosh, Mentor and Winger.

Under the new system each exchange will be given an exchange name such as are used in the Metropolitan areas and these will precede the usual number as for example, the Red Lake Falls exchange will bear the name Alpine and the prefix 3 and a number that now reads 2345 will be listed in the directory as ALpine 3-2345. Anyone calling the number now listed as 2345 would, under the new dial system, dial AL3-2345.

Below are given the prefixes that have been adopted or are soon to be adopted for the Garden Valley exchanges in this locality: Oklee, SWiftwater 6-; Goodridge, FRontier 8-; Grygla, CYpress 4-; Gully, AMherst 8-; Plummer, INgersoll 5-; Red Lake Falls, ALpine 3-; St. Hilaire, YOrktown 4-.

Telephone users who may have in mind ordering up letterheads, advertising or other materials carrying their telephone number should keep in mind that their number may be changed on the date of the scheduled cut over to the new system of numbering. Other changes may have to be made in numbers now in use besides just adding the exchange prefix. Subscribers wishing for some reason to get advance information as to their number should contact their service man or the company's office at Erskine.

Bagley, Clearbrook, Gonvick, Leonard, Minerva, and Shevlin went under the new system on October 20th. However the benefit to be derived from the new approach to telephone usage will not become effective until the Northwestern Bell Telephone Company completes the necessary installations. This will be some months hence.

Iron Ore Royalty Payments Are up

Iron ore royalties and rentals from state-owned lands amounted to $2,232,815 for the three months ending September 30, 1957, Ray D. Nolan, director of the division of lands and minerals reported today.

This is almost a million dollars more than for the same period one year ago, when the amount was $1,300,000.

The iron ore royalties were collected on 2,777,000 tons of ore which were taken from 29 mines on state lands.

Highway Crews Get Weekend Workout

First Snowfal of Season Creates Much Activity

Minnesota's first solid taste of winter driving conditions last weekend gave maintenance crews of the state highway department a thorough workout for the months ahead, especially in the northern half of the state. There, a snowfall of up to four to six inches in some localities brought out the snowplows on several trunk highways.

Rain and wet snow, icing as it fell, made driving hazardous, especially in the northeastern section, where glare ice was practically continuous on some highways. Sanding operations were partially nullified by brisk winds blowing the sand off the roads as fast as it was spread. However, highway department officials reported little serious delay in traffic movement.

In Minneapolis the Third Ave. bridge over the Mississippi had to be closed for a time Friday morning because of a traffic jam. The highway department's Safety division said the incident provided a warning for motorists that, to avoid traffic bottlenecks and delays, they should adjust driving schedules to changed driving conditions. Start trips earlier in winter, was the department advice.

Wife of Bemidji College Head Dies as She Hunts Deer

The wife of the Bemidji State college president died of a heart attack while hunting deer 15 miles north of Bemidji Monday.

Her death raised the state's death toll in the first three days of the nine-day deer hunting season to 12.

Mrs. Charles Sattgast, 55, wife of the college president, collapsed while hunting with her son, Lawrence, a Robinsdale school teacher, and a party of friends near Hines. She died as she was being taken to a Bemidji hospital.

Mrs. Sattgast was a member of the Minnesota youth conservation commission and active in civic affairs. She was a graduate of Sioux Falls, S. D., college.

She is survived by her husband and two sons, Lawrence and Morris, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Public Can Still Benefit from Use of Flu Vaccine

State Board of Health Says Vaccination Will Be Good 6 Months Later

Minnesotans can benefit from Asian influenza vaccinations even though a statewide outbreak of infection is underway, Dr. Dean S. Fleming, director of the division of disease prevention and control of the Minnesota department of health, said today.

"Vaccinations will offer protection for many who haven't yet had Asian influenza," Dr. Fleming said. He pointed out that recent studies indicate influenza outbreaks last on an average of 13 weeks or longer. "Our epidemic began about October 1 so persons who are vaccinated now can expect several weeks of protection during the current outbreak," he said.

In addition, vaccination now will be good six months from now should the state experience a recurrence of influenza later in the winter or spring. About 20 per cent of the persons in the state may have had Asian influenza, leaving 80 per cent who are potential victims during this or a later epidemic.

Since the infection is caused by a new strain of virus, persons have had little chance to build up natural immunity through previous exposure to the strain. The only known preventive for this strain of virus is the Asian influenza vaccine. Dr. Fleming advised vaccine protection for housewives and family bread-winners, particularly. Most doctors have an adequate supply of the vaccine and protection given now will continue into spring.

Help Needed for Selp-Help

Government purchases of surplus dairy products are increasing. Since April 1 the department of agriculture has bought more than 125 million pounds of butter and has disposed of 85 million pounds. A year ago the government held no butter in storage and now it has 60 million pounds on hand.

In a nation of 170 million people that probably should not be looked upon as a large surplus. And it wouldn't be if the industry itself would take steps to control the marketing of this product. By withholding from the market a small percentage of the total production producers could get a fair price for what they sold. The gain, we are assured, would offset the loss several times over.

Senator Hubert Humphrey and the Farmers Union could perform an outstanding service for the industry if they would put such a self-help program into effect. The industry does not seem to possess the leadership within its own ranks to provide for its own marketing needs.

By-product of Prosperity

During the first ten months of this year there were 11,824 bussiness failures in the country, an increase of about seven percent over the same period of the previous year. This upward trend, that has continued several years, has been studied by the Bureau of Business Research of the University of Pittsburgh, and the findings of these economic specialists have recently been made available by the Government's Small Business Administration.

Most of the failures are attributed to bad management, and, according to Dr. A. M. Woodruff, director of the Bureau, the bad management in many instances is the result of too much prosperity.

"In periods of prosperity some executives tend to become complacent," he says. "They overlook dangerous management traps which are always ready to ensnare the unsuspecting. The dangers are greatest in small business."

The report lists a large number of causes for failure. Most of them were considered to be self-inflicted.

This recognition of financial distress as a by-product of prosperity deserves the emphasis that is placed upon it. The easy dollar is an invitation to foolish spending, and that applies to management in a home as well as to management in a business.

The Pittsburgh report probably will not be popular. Politicians will find many things wrong with it. But under normal, healthy business conditions we can reasonably expect some failures. When any person, regardless of his competance, can be successful in business, then the economy is seriously out of adjustment and we are headed for trouble. The present upsurge in failures has not reached the stage where it might be considered alarming and probably is a necessary step in a natural adjustment back to better operations.

The Liberty We Seek

Big business is constantly seeking to become bigger business. Two large steel companies are trying to merge and officials of two already-large eastern railroads are exploring the possibilities of combining.

Most of such proposed mergers are being opposed by the government on the grounds that they would not be in the public interest. Company advocates point to economies that could be effected and argue that more efficient operation would be in the public interest.

Each application of this kind must necessarily be considered on its own merits, and some of them probably have considerable merit. As a matter of general policy, however, we believe it would be in the public interest if big business were not permitted to get bigger.

Under this policy we believe it would be in the public interest if big labor were also restrained from becoming bigger. Neither big labor nor big business have conducted themselves in a way that has earned for them public confidence. And in several fields of operation they both are already too big.

Bigness, in itself, is not an evil. Mass production methods are essential to our industrial economy and the high living standard which it has brought to us. But also essential to our economic system is competition, and, to whatever extent big business or big labor restrain or stifle competition, they must be looked upon as evil.

The alternative to competition in the economic system is socialism, and socialism is a step in the direction of government control, which in turn is a step toward dictatorship. Competition, is essential to freedom, and any compromise with the principles of freedom must be carefully weighed before it is accepted. Unrestrained freedom is anarchy. Some place between the extremes of anarchy and regimentation is the liberty we seek.

Gas Hope Dims

Hopes for the early importation of gas from Canada dimmed last week when the new prime minister stated that it would be the policy of his government to grant no new export permits until a thorough study of the available supply in relation to Canada's domestic needs had been completed. One Canadian oil magazine thinks the study, now under way, may be completed in 18 months.

This information is not disturbing to our community. Whether or not we will want gas when it is made available will depend on its cost in relation to other fuels. Based on the prices that have been asked in other areas where gas has been offered in recent months as a new fuel, it can no longer be classified as a bargain.

Sloppy Dressing Out?

At a Red River Valley Teachers convention down north in the province of Manitoba last week action was taken to put an end to sloppy dressing by high school students. According to the Winnipeg Tribune, black-leather jackets, duck-tail haircuts, chains and slim jims are going to be discouraged. The teachers are going to ask for cooperation from school officials and parents in enforcing reasonable regulations in wearing apparel.

From our observation, there has been a noticeable improvement in the appearance of our high school students. A few years ago freak clothes were common and a large percentage of our blonde boys developed greasy, black hair. Now the freaks are few and far between, and we are regaining some of our former faith in the youth of today.

Without Fanfare

(The Toronto Globe and Mail)

Reports on the launching of Sputnik II obscured another event in the field of science which was of more immediate and practical importance to Canadians. Without fanfare, a controlled chain reaction was initiated in the N.R.U. (National Research Universal) reactor at Chalk River. Six years in the building, this $57,000,000 piece of apparatus is regarded as the free world's most versatile and powerful tool for the study of nuclear processes.

The primary purpose for which the reactor was built, is research in and development of methods by which nuclear power can be generated and applied to peaceful uses. The Ontario Hydro Commision has contributed much of the money for the machine in the hope of satisfying perpetually increasing demands for electrical energy.

Gradual depletion and eventual exhaustion of their fossil fuels—oils, gas and coal—will forcibly acquaint Canadians with the importance of such devices as the N.R.U. reactor. Meantime, they can be thankful that farsighted scientists and administrators are putting it to work.

Weather Gives Hints to the Careful Driver

Like money in the bank for a rainy day, a motorist's preparation of his vehicle will save him from headaches and grief when winter conditions prevail during the months ahead, Harry A. Sieben, Minnesota's highway safety director, declared today.

"The lower temperature readings are a tip-off to even lower temperatures in the near future," he said. "The careful motorist will make sure that his oil is right and that his radiator has anti-freeze protection."

The safety director pointed out that reduced visibility occasioned by earlier darkness and adverse weather conditions is a tip-off to even worse weather to come. He recommended making certain that windshield wiper blades and arms and defrosting equipment be checked for the increased use they will have over the winter.

"Frost is a tip-off to the falling of snow and the formation of ice on street and highways during coming months," Sieben advised. "To be safe on slippery roads, tires must have good tread and brakes must be in tiptop shape. Tire chains should be carried in every vehicle as 'first aid' equipment for use when needed for dangerous snow or ice conditions."

Sieben described the work of the Committee on Winter Driving Hazards of the National Safety Council, which has been working on weather hazards for twenty years.

The committee has urged everyone to have cars "Winterized" before winter comes, by checking to make sure they are ready for whatever winter has to offer.

Winterizing, according to the committee, means putting these things into condition: Anti-freeze, lights, battery, voltage regulator, wiper blades, heater, defroster, tires, tire chains, brakes, steering equipment and muffler.

Cite Regulations on Taking Muskrat

Illegal to Destroy Any Muskrat or Beaver House

Special attention is called by game and fish officials to that part of the regulations for taking muskrats in the vicinity of muskrat houses. The regulations emphasize that — "no persons shall set traps within six feet of any muskrat house or molest, injure or destroy, any muskrat house or beaver house or beaver dam or any burrow den or other abiding place of beaver or muskrat."

The trapping season for muskrats opened November 9 in the southern zone and will close December 1. The muskrat season in the northern zone opened November 2 and will close November 24.

The line of demarcation between the northern and southern trapping zones begins on U. S. highway 210 at the west boundary of the state at Breckenridge; thence along U. Bar Association Officers to Meet

19th Annual Conference Set for St. Paul Friday

Bernard H. Ridder, Sr., of St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press, will be the luncheon speaker at the 19th annual conference of district bar association officers at the University Club, St. Paul, on Friday, November 15.

Attorneys who will participate in the discussions are: William H. DeParcq, Hayner N. Larson, Sen. Daniel S. Feidt, Verne W. Moss and Glenn D. McCarty of Minneapolis; Dean William B. Lockhart of the University of Minnesota Law School and James H. Geraghty and Jerome Hoffmann, St. Paul.

It is expected that more than 100 officers will attend the conference, President Nye said.

Convincing talk

We're talking about the door-to-door salesman who is selling vitamin preparations these days. He sounds mighty convincing, perhaps because he's memorized a fancy sales talk. One way to stop him in a hurry: Just ask him to wait while you check with your physician. Or invite him to stroll down to our pharmacy and, while you watch and listen, show us his wares. We have a notion he'll go away quickly and bother you no more.

HOW SMALL, YET HOW BIG

How small a man seems—walking down a lonely road on a rainy day, with gaunt trees towering over him.

How small man is, and how frail in body. The trees in the picture and even the chimneys on the old house will probably long outlive the man.

Yet how big man is—in the things that are not of the body, but are of the mind and soul. God has not made man mammoth. But He has made him potentially great—if he will but accept the blessings given him, and use the tools of Christian teachings.

Man finds in the Church, the encouragement and the instruction to enable him to make from his God-given divine spark something great and enduring—and of benefit to all human-kind.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

"Who takes all those pills?"

This is often the question when a customer sees the shelves in our pharmacy. Row on row on row of bottles, boxes, canisters, tubes, vials, jars . . . about 2,000 items in all. Good question. Who are they for? The answer, of course, is you. Say you go to a physician and he writes a prescription which you bring to us to be filled. We can't tell what the ailment will be—there are thousands, and we don't know what medication the doctor will prescribe. To provide prompt pharmaceutical service we have to be ready for just about anything. Which we are.

Grain Sanitation Awards Given 4-H

Kratka 4-H Club Was Runner-up in Contest

Three 4-H clubs have been named winners in the statewide grain sanitation contest for 1957. They are the Albin Go-Getters, Brown county; Hi-Lighters, LeSueur county; and Westbrook Willing Workers, Cottonwood county.

The Union Clover Blossoms, Houston county, and the Kratka 4-H club, Pennington county, were named runners-up.

The three top-winning 4-H clubs will receive cash awards of $100, $50 and $25, respectively. All five clubs will receive trophies and will be entitled to send several adult or junior leaders to Minneapolis this winter for an educational tour of the grain exchange and grain marketing facilities. Awards are given by F. H. Peavey company, sponsor of the contest with the University of Minnesota Agricultural Extension Service.

Purpose of the grain sanitation program is to focus attention on recommended practices in handling and storing grain to keep it clean. Members of the winning clubs have inspected grain storage on farms in their home communities, have carried on intensive rodent control programs and have given demonstrations and shown slides at meetings to emphasize the importance of proper handling and storage of grain.

Assesed Values in County Rise to $5,073,000 in 1957

Increase Due Largely to Higher Assessment on Lakehead Pipeline Co.

The state board of equalization made virtually no changes in assessed valuations of Pennington county real and personal property as turned in by the county board, County Auditor C. W. Rodekuhr has been advised.

Assessed values for the county as a whole mounted from $4,901,476 in 1956 to $5,073,278 this year. Most of the increase resulted from additional installations in the county by the Lakehead Pipeline Co., which increased the firm's assessed valuation from $59,370 in 1956 to $180,656 in 1957.

Valuations in Thief River Falls increased only slightly from $2,745,363 in 1956 to $2,769,641 this year, while township valuations rose from $2,087,100 to $2,235,552.

1-3d as Many Deer Are Taken This Season at Mud Lake as Year Ago

A total of 139 deer were taken in the Mud Lake game refuge during the hunting season this year, compared to 375 last year, it was announced Friday by Herb Dill, refuge manager.

During the season 1,133 hunters were in the field, making a success ratio of 12 per cent, compared to 19 per cent in 1956, when more hunters were in the field. The poorer success this year, said Dill, is due to boggy conditions which prevented hunters from getting to the game. He added that approximately the same number of deer was in the refuge this year as in 1956.

By days the bag was as follows: Nov. 9, 630 hunters got 81 deer; Nov. 10, 327 hunters got 42; Nov. 11, 97 hunters got ten; Nov. 12, 48 hunters got five; and Nov. 13, 31 hunters got one deer.

Of the hunters, 41 per cent were from Marshall, 17 per cent from Pennington, 17 per cent from Polk, 8 per cent from Hennepin, with the remaining 17 per cent scattered.

During the season, two game law violators were apprehended by Warden Carl Sundstrom.

County Youth Espies Strange Sight in Air

A rural Thief River Falls youth, James Legg, 15, reported to police here early Saturday morning, that he and his girl friend, Carol Halvorson, Viking, had been badly frightened by a strange flying object when on their way to the girl's home from a movie in this city, about 11:45 Friday evening.

Legg told police about 12:15 a.m. Saturday that he and the girl were parked about 5 miles east of Viking on a gravel road when they heard a tapping noise under the car. He said he got out to investigate the noise and even turned the car around but saw nothing.

It happened a second time, only this time the car was shaken as well as affected by a tapping noise, and again, Legg said, he turned the car around to see if he could locate the cause of the noise and shaking.

It was then that he and the girl saw the object in the air across the road from the car, Legg stated. He estimated the distance at 150-200 yards away, just over the treetops and rising very rapidly without any noise.

Legg described the object as having four red lights arranged in a square on the bottom, two fore and two aft. It also had spotlights in front and what appeared to be portholes giving off white light all around it.

It was circular in form, was Legg's impression.

Legg, the son of Bruce Legg, rt. 3, city, and a senior at Lincoln high school was very scared when he arrived home that night, according to his mother. He also said another youth, Dale Nelson, told him he had seen a similiar sight Sunday night but hadn't reported the incident. The second sighting had been when the object was about a quarter of a mile away, Nelson stated.

'Farm Planning' to Be Topic of 'U' Men Tuesday Evening

Two 'U' of M. Specialists to Speak in Meeting Room in Court House Basement

On Tuesday evening, Nov. 19, farmers of the area will have an opportunity to visit with farm specialists from the University of Minnesota. The theme of the meeting, "Farm Planning," will be discussed by farm management specialists Hal Routhe and Paul Hasbargen. The meeting will be held in the court house meeting room at 8:00 P. M., states County Agent Paul Stelmaschuk.

Many farms can increase farm income thru adjustments in farm operations. This usually does not mean an increase in farm size or more labor. It may mean a different use of resources on the farm. The change may mean different cropping practices, different livestock program, different numbers of livestock or a different combination of productive factors. Sometimes the best choice for a farm is livestock, sometimes its crops, and sometimes its a combination of these. The farm program depends on the type of soil on the farm, the amount of labor available, and the credit availability.

After a detailed study of productive and cost factors a farmer decides on the program best for his farm. Farmers are invited to attend the farm planning meeting to review their present operations and take a look at the alternative possibilities.

Dr. A. Schindler, NMEA Speaker, Is Accident Victim

Best-selling Author, Who Spoke Here in October, Dies in Wisconsin Crash

Teachers and others who attended the final session of the Northern Minnesota Education association convention here in October didn't know it at the time, but they were hearing one of the last lectures delivered by the convention's main speaker, Dr. Albert Schindler, noted author, lecturer, and physician.

Dr. Schindler died Saturday after the car he was driving struck a bridge abutment near Monroe, Wis., where he was cofounder of the Monroe Clinic.

The accidental death of Dr. Schindler will probably come as as a shock to those who heard his address here, in which he outlined the new concept of mental health as being the "maturity concept."

In his book, "Woman's Guide to Better Living", Dr. Schindler dealt with such occurrences as his own death, saying, "The mature attitude recognizes first that certain true dangers exist to ordinary living such as ill health, auto accidents, fire and so and then takes a reasonable precaution to avoid them."

In another part of the book, he added: "The bigger difficulties that fate twists into our lives are best met stoically."

Dr. Schindler wrote the popular book, "How to Live 365 Days a Year", in 1955 and had planned, but not started, a third book directed at men.

U. S. Education Aid Topic at Meeting of Young Republicans

A good turnout of Young Republicans attended a meeting of that organization at the Rex Cafe Wednesday evening, although unfavorable weather cut attendance below expectations in regards to out-of-town persons at the meeting.

Dr. William Feigal, acting president of the Pennington county Young Republicans presided at the meeting and introduced the guest speaker. The group heard Thomas M. Dale, Minneapolis attorney associated with Kalman & Co., a firm which deals in school bonds and similiar investments, speak on "Federal Aid to Education, Present, Past and Future."

Dale explained the issue of federal aid to education. Actually, he said, the issue is a dead one, since the last aid-to-education bill in congress was defeated, and is unlikely to come up again in the near future unless exceptional circumstances arise.

Differences in the two bills sponsored by the GOP and the Democrats in congress were outlined by Dale, the main difference being that the GOP bill encouraged self-help to schools in communities to the greatest extent, while the Democrat bill offered more of out-and-out help without demanding so much local initiative.

Whether the country should, or should not, have federal aid to schools, Dale stated, is a moot point—federal aid to education is here already in several forms. The question really is, "how

Farm Hearing Conducted in Fergus Falls

Woes of Family-size Farm Operator Cited at Congress Hearing

Preservation of the family farm will be among the aims of farm legislation drafted by the next session of Congress, Rep. Thompson (D-Tex) said Friday.

Thompson, chairman of a House Agriculture subcommittee which wound up two days of hearings on the family farm situation at Fergus Falls Friday, believes the family farm is vital concern to America.

Rep. Coya Knutson of Oklee served as honorary chairman of the hearing.

"Unless the family farmer is protected by basic provisions of new farm legislation, I believe there will be special measures aimed at helping the family farmer," Thompson said.

On the basis of testimony presented at the hearing, and extensive hearings in the South and Southwest in 1955 and 1956, Thompson said he believes the family farmer wants only a fair share of the economy.

"The family farmer doesn't want a handout. All he wants is a chance to stay on the land and legislation to help him do so," he said.

Rep. Otto Krueger (R-ND), the only Republican among the subcommittee members here, said there is no disagreement.

"Certainly there must be adjustments, a turn toward consolidated farm operations," in view of modern farming techniques, Krueger said.

"But, the farmer can make a living only if he plans his operations in the right way," he added.

Thompson defined the family farm as one which, during normal times, supplies a decent living for a family. 'It has nothing to do with the size, but rather with the ability of the family to make a living on the farm.'

Two major themes advanced as a solution to the family farm problem by witnesses at the hearing were limitation of subsidies to farmers, ranging up to $25,000, and some form of direct production payments, or payments to farmers on the basis of

Janet Carol Solem, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Solem of this city and Orvin Drangstveit, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orin Drangstveit of Goodridge, were united in marriage Monday evening, November 4, at Trinity Lutheran church. Rev. Otto Dale performed the double ring ceremony before an altar graced with baskets of white and lavender mums and lighted candelabra.

The bride given in marriage by her father was attired in a chapel length gown of white nylon lace over satin featuring a matching jacket with short sleeves. Her fingertip veil of illusion net was held in place by a crown of seed pearls. Her only jewelry was a rhinestone necklace and earring set, a gift from the groom. Shootin' the Breeze

BY Mack Draper

Believe I said it before, but it's worth saying again . . . time plays dirty tricks on man kind, at times, especially when there's a lot to do and someone keeps a person waiting.

We wonder how many other folks use this as their favorite peeve?

It is strange, though . . . time flies when a person is having a good time; drags when one is anticipating a good time in the future.

It also flies by when one is trying to accomplish a lot of work within a certain time . . . and creeps when one has to look for something to do before quitting time.

On the face of it one probably should do as much as possible as quickly as possible every day and have a crackin' good time doing it if he wants the time to pass quickly.

But, according to an old saying, the spirit is willing but the flesh is weak!

Not criticizing our local deer hunters or anything but . . . why is it a man will walk past a nice, warm meat market, just full of choice cuts of goodies.

Then pay $3.50 for a license to carry a heavy rifle days, even weeks in the cold, through heavy brush, snow and icy water just to get some meat that's tough, stringy, rank and strong—as often as not—and have to clean and carry it, perhaps miles, on top of that.

Still one could probably never convince a single confirmed deer hunter of the futility of his pastime!

Last Thursday night was a big event at our place. The little Lord and Master of the Draper domicile slept through his usual nightly feeding for the first time since he was born.

Better not say too much though—the wife will be pointing out to me that I didn't loose much sleep getting up anyway.

Instead of crying over the Russians putting the first man-made satellite in an orbit we should have taken some of the wind out of their sails by showing them we have a rocket that can destroy Sputnik, by doing so.

Higher taxes are in the wind. Sputnik gave the bureaucrats an excuse to start asking higher taxes.

As usual, the price of guns is up, the price of butter is down. The bureaucrats want us to pay for a war, whether we are having one or not. The gravy train must be slowing down!

Ike, though, says we aren't going to raise taxes to pay for an earth satellite program, but are going to do without some luxuries instead.

Bureaucrats, perhaps?

Cheer up, be happy . . . you may be in the red now, but just wait until after Christmas! So Long!

YEAR END TAX TIPS NUMBER 1

Act Now To Trim Your Federal Income Tax Bill

This is one of a series of four articles on federal income taxes. The articles are based on information provided by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants and the Minnesota Society of Certified Public Accountants.

You still have time—but not much time—to do a little year-end tax planning and assure yourself of the best possible break when you file your tax return next April.

Millions of high, low and middle income taxpayers, realizing that careful planning of their financial affairs between now and the first of the year can pay off handsomely when the tax collector calls next spring, have already begun to establish those extra deductions and special exemptions that will reduce their tax bills.

You can do this too, but you must act no later than December 31.

To alert you to the tax-saving steps you may be able to take before the end of the year, this newspaper is printing a series of articles prepared with the help of the national and state organizations of certified public accountants. These articles—if you keep them and follow their advice—can save you money.

Evaluate Income Prospects

If you are like most individual taxpayers, your goal at this time should be to level out income for this year and next year. Needless or careless bunching of income in either year can be costly. The sharp bite of today's progressive tax rates—which you can assume will be as high or possibly only slightly less in 1958—makes it much better to have an income of $5,000 in each of two years, rather than [illegible] in one and $10,000 in the other.

Taxpayers who are in danger of being whiplashed from one tax bracket to another because of wide fluctuations in their 1957 and 1958 income should act before December 31 to try to average out their taxable earnings. This can be done by careful shifting of income and deductions from one year to the next.

How to Shift Income

For example, if your two-year income estimate shows that your income for this year will be significantly higher than next year's, you should take immediate steps to throw as much income as possible from 1957 to 1958—and you should speed up the payment of all expenses that can be deducted on your 1957 return. By concentrating deductions in the higher year and switching income to the lower, you will keep your taxes for both years in the lowest possible tax bracket.

Should you be faced with the more desirable problem of a sizeable increase in your 1958 income, reverse this procedure—delay expenses and speed up income if you can.

Timing income and deductions to gain a tax advantage is not too difficult for the millions of taxpayers who file returns on the basis of cash receipts and disbursements. "Cash basis" business and professional men can shift income by simply delaying or speeding up the collection of accounts receivable near the end of the year. Salesmen and contractors can do the same thing by extending or closing deals that may be pending in November or December.

Farmers who operate on a cash basis can accelerate or postpone income by proper timing of the sales of their crops or livestock. While their income will be taxable in the year cash is received, the full costs of raising crops or cattle are deductible for the year in which the costs were paid.

Special Income Situations

There are special situations in which it can be advantageous to bunch income in a single tax year. For example, a husband and wife can file a joint return to gain the benefits of income-splitting. Should one of them die, the survivor may file a joint return for the year in which the spouse died and also for two succeeding years under certain conditions. Thus, a widow or widower may profit by throwing more income into this year and less into next if his or her spouse died in 1955, since the privilege of filing a joint return will be lost in all cases in 1958.

If you are planning to be married in 1958, remember that the income-splitting privileges you gain will act like a rate cut for you. At $7,000 of income, your taxes will be $210 less than if you were single, assuming that you take the standard deduction and claim only exemptions for you and your wife. For this reason, young couples planning marriage might consider postponing income from 1957 to 1958, while accelerating deductions from 1958 to 1957.

much federal aid to education?" rather than "should we have it."

The Eisenhower policy on aid to education was outlined by the speaker as being along the lines of the GOP-sponsored bill which was defeated.

In addition to his address, Dale joined the local group in discussing topics that could be scheduled for discussion to arouse interest and stimulate attendance at future meetings of the Pennington county Young Republicans.

He emphasized that the round-table type of discussion as a method is preferable to an individual speaker in order to get and hold interest of persons attracted to the Young GOP organization.

A definite date for the January meeting will be announced later.

Bridgeman Truck Rolls over Today

Lloyd Zutz, Driver, Hurt North of Strathcona

One accident was reported today by the highway patrol here today, the only mishap reported on highways in the area over the week-end.

A Bridgeman Creamery truck driver, Lloyd Zutz, about 30, was treated for lacerations at Northwestern Hospital here after the truck he was driving left the road and overturned in the ditch about 4 miles north of Strathcona about 5:30 a.m., Monday.

Details of the accident were not available, although it is believed the condition of the road may have had some bearing on the mishap.

The full extent of Zutz' injuries is not known, although they are not believed serious. The accident was investigated by a highway patrolman from Roseau.

Miss Rustan, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Rustan of Oklee, expects to take an overseas assignment in the near future.

In September the government's cost of living rose for the 13th consecutive month, and was 3.4 per cent above the level of a year earlier. There were declines in food prices, but these were more than offset by increases in the cost of housing, clothing and other commodities and services.

Superior General to Be Honored in Crookston Nov. 24

Operetta to be Offered by St. Joseph's Academy Pupils to Honor Leader

The high school girls of St. Joseph's Academy in Crookston will present the operetta, "In Grand Old Switzerland," the evenings of November 24 and 25 at 8:15 in their school auditorium. The operetta will honor the Superior General of the Sisters of St. Joseph, Reverend Mother Raphael who is here from France on a visit of her convents in the United States and Canada.

Reverend Mother Raphael was born in Switzerland and came to the United States as a young Sister in 1927. Ten years later she was made a naturalized American citizen. In 1930 she became Superior of St. Joseph's Academy in Crookston, which post she held until 1949 when she was named the first Provincial Superior of the formed Crookston Province of the Sisters of St. Joseph.

The spring of 1956 found her in France attending the General Chapter of her Congregation in Bourg. The delegation of Superiors present nominated her Superior General to govern all the convents of their sisterhood located in France, Belgium, Luxembourg, Italy, Switzerland, the United States and Canada. Her trip back to America now is her first as Superior General.

Proceeds from the sale of tickets for this operetta will be given by the students to the building fund for the new novitiate and provincial house which the Sisters of St. Joseph are now constructing to miles east of Crookston and which will be ready for occupancy in 1958.

Farm Hearing Is Concluded Friday at Fergus Falls

the difference between a free market price and parity."

Both Thompson and Krugger agreed that there was only a remote chance that a direct payment plan would pass Congress. If it did, Thompson said, it would have to be part of an omnibus program.

"The farm problem will never be solved until the farmer—and that includes the family farmer—is made a permanent part of the economy, with a voice that will balance other parts of the economy that have bargaining power, such as labor and industry," Thompson said.

The soil bank program received considerable criticism as did acreage controls which were said to hurt the small operator but not, as intended, reduce surpluses.

The Rev. Edward C. Ramacher, rural life director of the Roman Catholic diocese of St. Cloud, Minn., told the committee the soil bank program did not help curb the loss of family sized farms.

"On the contrary, the soil bank program aided this trend . . . since under its provisions many of our farmers had their farms absorbed by land holders who live in town and place idle acres in the soil bank," he said.

This was echoed by other witnesses, mostly farmers, who said small farmers are being swallowed by assembly line operators who benefit from current farm programs.

State to Send Yule Tree to Capital

Sixty-foot Tree Coming from Border Paper Firm

Senator Edward J. Thye, today announced that arrangements had been completed for shipment of a "Minnesota Tree" to Washington as the national Christmas tree for the Christmas "Pageant of Peace" in the nation's capitol.

Thye was contacted through his Washington office by the Pageant of Peace officials to ascertain whether the state of Minnesota could donate a 60 foot tree to head the Christmas "Pageant of Peace Avenue of Trees."

Thye immediately contacted the Minnesota Junior Chamber of Commerce with the request, since the Jaycees had corresponded with the Senator in connection with supplying smaller trees for the pageant. The chain reaction reached the Minnesota Ontario Paper Company which agreed to fell a tree which would meet the specifications of the Pageant committees.

Thye's Washington office was notified of the favorable response late Thursday and the pageant commitee was then informed that its search had come to an end.

The Minnesota tree will be a focal point of the pageantry and the lighting of the tree by President Eisenhower will herald the opening of the Nation's Holiday Season. Minnesotans will see their tree during the televised portions of the pageant.

Commitee Makes Farm School Study

Hears Plea for Junior College at Crookston

Whether or not the University agricultural schools should continue the present program, be converted to junior colleges or whether junior college programs should be added to their present curriculums, is now under study by the legislative commission on agricultural schools. Its first out-state meetings were held in Crookston and Grand Rapids during the past week.

Civic leaders at Crookston believe that the youth in the surrounding area should have equal opportunities for post-high education, which they are presently denied because of the long distances to public or private colleges. They expressed a strong desire for the establishment of a junior college either at the present agricultural school or at a new location.

At Grand Rapids, the local leaders stated that better service could be performed a the agricultural school by the addition of a vocational program to meet the needs of the local business and industries. Particular mention was made of courses for resort managers and forestry technicians.

Eight of last season's eleven lettermen—Jim Bennes, Dave Hanson, Daryl Williamson, Keith Johnson, Dean Bergland, [illegible] Rasmussen, Phil Hanson, [illegible] Jones, Lynn Nicholson, Ken Dunlap and Dick Hanson—reported to varsity coach Alan Adams last Monday as the Prowler cagers began practice in preparation for the 1957-58 season.

Williamson, who graduated; Johnson, who transferred to Grafton; and Bergland, who did not report, are the three lettermen from last season's 31st district championship club who will not be available for this season's campaign.

Where is the peddler when you want your money back?

We hear that fast-talking peddlers are going through the neighborhood, selling vitamin preparations door-to-door. If you should buy and then be dissatisfied what could you do about it? Not a thing—peddlers change towns the way we change shoes. So it makes sense to do business with an established firm, here today and here tomorrow. Besides, a pharmacy is the only proper place to get vitamin preparations, many of which lose strength if handled or stored improperly.

Newfolden Cagers Meet Strandquist to Open Season

Newfolden Coach John Junker said his young team will concentrate on a deliberate offense, with an occasional fast break, when it opens play in the 1957-58 basketball at Newfolden Friday, against Strandquist.

Junker is fielding a team that includes only two seniors and is handicapped by lack of height, but one which has plenty of spirit and finesse. "We'll give someone plenty of trouble before the end of the season," Junker predicted.

Not shown is Dennis Bakke, a regular who missed practice because of a broken pelvis suffered in an accident. His return later in the season will give Newfolden a needed lift, Junker said.

Sunshine Is Scarce in Area During Week

The weatherman didn't play any dirty tricks on the Thief River Falls area in the past week but he certainly has been stingy with the sunshine.

He has maintained the status quo as far as moisture and temperatures are concerned, however, with no precipitation registered the past week except for the fog Thursday and Friday.

Temperatures ranged from 48 above a week ago for the high, to a low of 22 registered here this morning. Generally speaking, the high temperatures were in the low or mid-thirties while the lows were in the twenties except for a very few days.

The Minnesota forecast, according to KTRF, is a rough one but the snow predicted, along with sleet and freezing rain, in the southern parts of the state isn't expected here, unless a fringe of the storm affecting those areas reaches farther than expected.

The forecast: heavy snow over much of eastern and southern Minnesota, occasionally mixed with freezing rain. Sleet, extreme southeast portion of state this afternoon and tonight.

The snow east and south will spread through most of the state this afternoon and tonight with accumulations of 5-10 inches in much of southern and extreme eastern Minnesota.

Increasing northerly winds will cause drifting and blowing tonight.

Snow, sleet and winds will diminish slowly Tuesday. No high temperature forecast was given for today, lows tonight will be 22-30.

One needn't be a pessimist but it wouldn't hurt to keep your storm coat within reach!

Tweten was going across the street from Montgomery Ward to Tunberg Motors when he was hit in the leg by a west-bound car driven by John Wade Knutson, city.

Tweten was taken to Northwestern Hospital by Patrolman Ray Bren and Leslie Tweten, city, father of the injured. The accident victim's injuries were not serious and he was released after examination, although he will be readmitted today for treatment, according to hospital authorities.

No charges were filed in the case.

Flying Club Plans Regular Meetings

To Meet Second Wednesday of Each Month in Future

Regular monthly meetings of the Thief River Falls Flying Club have been set, tentatively, for the second Wednesday of each month instead of being called irregularly by the club's board of directors as it has been in the past, club officials announced last week.

The decision to hold regular monthly meetings was arrived at during the meeting held Friday at the airport cafe, at which 15 members were present. Purpose of the regular meetings is to offer club members planned programs of both entertainment and educational value, as well as conducting club business, club President Kenneth Wendel stated.

Among the tentative features to be offered at the future meetings will be movies and lectures on flying or related subjects, and refreshments after every meeting. Guests are welcome at the meetings, President Wendel emphasized.

A decision on whether to repair or sell the club's Aeronca Champion trainer was deferred until a later date, pending the club board of directors' study of the alternatives and the advantages of each. No responsibility in the crash of the plane Saturday, Nov. 9, was established, as the exact cause of the crash is not known at the present.

The club board of directors will make a study to determine whether the crash was the result of pilot error or mechanical failure, in order to determine responsibility.

Group of Our Own Hardware Men to Meet Wednesday

Sales and merchandising problems will be discussed by the group.

Macalester Man Wins Script Event

Prof. Royal Moore Wins Centennial Contest

A Macalester College history professor, Royal A. Moore, St. Paul, has been named winner of a $1,000 prize television script contest sponsored jointly by the Minnesota Historical Society, the Minnesota Statehood Commission, and WCCO Television.

Professor Moore's script, entitled "They Called It Minnesota", was the choice of the contest judges from among 59 scripts submitted in the competition, which was open to any resident of Minnesota. Honorable mention awards were given Todd Hunt, St. Paul; P. M. Clepper, St. Paul; and Mrs. Raymond Latchaw, White Bear Lake, Minnesota.

Professor Moore will receive $1,000 in cash, and the winning script will be presented over WCCO Television at a time not yet determined before January 1, 1958. It is a dramatic presentation of several highlights in Minnesota's history, and will be presented as a 30-minute television program honoring the state's centennial observance. The author has been a Macalester College faculty member since 1941, and has served as assistant to Macalester College President Charles J. Turck.

Game and Party Night

The local golf club will be host to members and the general public at a dancing and games party at the clubhouse on Saturday, Nov. 23rd. Festivities are scheduled to start at 8:00 p.m.

The primary purpose of the affair, which will be the first of a series of affairs to be held during the winter months, will be to provide entertainment. And, too, it is hoped that these parties will enrich the coffers of the club's treasury.

Arnie (Sociable) Lee will be on hand to defend his pinochle championship. And it is probable, as the night wears away and the dawn comes up like thunder, that Russ Embury, the newly-elected president of the club, will attempt to deliver his inaugural address.

Don't forget. Time, Nov. 23rd; place, local golf club; fun, plenty; cost, nominal.

A Surprise

Harry (Bud) Grant Winnipeg Blue Bombers provided an upset in Western Canada football play on Saturday night when they defeated the Edmonton Eskimoes, 19 to 7. By their surprising win in this, the first game of the series, the Bombers took a one-game lead in the best-of-three W.I.F.U. finals. The second game of the series will be played at Edmonton on Wednesday night, with a third game, if needed, being slated for Edmonton on Saturday night.

Bud Grant, of course, is well-remembered here, having been a member of the Golden Gophers. He has visited the town several times, once he played here as a member of Bill Bye's traveling basketball team.

It's a Jinx

To "make" the cover of the popular national sports weekly, "Sports Illustrated", is apparently a way of becoming jinxed. Last week, Minnesota's Robert Lafayette Cox was the "cover boy", and the Gophers lost that week's game to Iowa, 44 to 20. This week's cover featured Oklahoma University, and carried the captain. "Why Oklahoma is unbeatable." On Saturday afternoon Oklahoma had their 47-game winning streak broken by Notre Dame, losing to the Fighting Irish, 7 to 0. The game was the TV Game of the Week, and from the screen it appeared that Notre Dame was the better team.

Incidentally, the "Sports Illustrated" story on Minnesota's Bobby Cox, and it was very interesting and informative, carried this eyebrow-raising quotation: said Cox when he made his appearance on the Minnesota campus: "I have come to lead you to the Rose Bowl."

We wish to make a long-range prediction to the effect that when and if Cox joins the professional football ranks, he will become a star.

From all the rumors that are being given circulation around the state, and when they reach up into these parts they must have some substance, the Minnesota football squad is racked with dissension. There is reputed to be an anti-Bobby Cox faction; and what's more surprising, is the report that there is a strong anti-Billy Martin faction. Martin, a sophomore from Chicago, and who possesses considerable football talent, apparently hasn't shown the proper respect and humility with regard to the seniors on the squad. That's what we hear.

Interesting Figures

Herb Dill, manager of the Mud Lake game refuge, released the statistics on the deer kill in the refuge during the five-day season. Last year, in a three-day season, 375 deer were taken; this year, in a five-day season, 139 deer were taken. There has been a decrease in the deer kill in the refuge in every year since the refuge was placed in the "open" category.

What to do till the doctor comes

Emergencies strike with sudden swiftness. A slip, a fall, a collision is seldom announced. So be prepared. At least one member of every family should have a working knowledge of first aid. There are books on the subject and the American Red Cross gives classes where such information and training can be acquired. We recommend that you, or someone in your household, acquire the know-how. Another worthy recommendation is to maintain a supply of first-aid medications on hand at all times—antiseptic, gauze bandages, adhesive tape, alcohol, soothing creams, etc. The cost is small and we'll be glad to assist you in your selection.

IN 58 DAYS A '58 PLYMOUTH RAN 58,000 MILES—EQUAL TO
MORE THAN TWICE AROUND THE WORLD

AND IT DROVE EVERY INCH OF THE WAY!

We knew this car was tough.

We designed it that way.

That's why we weren't afraid to give Plymouth the toughest test run of all time... with all America as the "track."

We didn't coddle this Plymouth. Didn't crate it and ship it carefully from place to place. Instead, we aimed it out of Los Angeles one misty morning and sent it through a course that ran 58,000 miles through 37 states.

The time limit? Only 58 days.

A thousand miles a day!

The equivalent of 6 years' driving crammed into little more than 8 weeks!

Three times this Plymouth crossed the Rockies. Three times it wound its way up and down across the country... passing through more than 1200 cities and towns. Whipping over turnpikes... creeping through city traffic... arrowing down super-highways... feeling its way through 500 miles of rutted detours. And when the drivers turned the key to end the marathon, it still looked, ran and rode like new.

This is what lasting value really means. The ability to take everything that American roads and weather can dish out—and come up grinning. Why don't you give Plymouth a test drive yourself—today? You'll see what we mean.

That's the Plymouth "track"... and just look at that route! Every possible road and weather condition. Plymouth ran every inch of that murderous route 3 times in just 58 days. What greater proof of lasting, built-in stamina!

Star of the Forward Look... Plymouth ahead for keeps!

State Medical Assn. Discusses Relation of Weather to Health

Your good health is dependent on what you do in spite of the weather, suggests the Minnesota State Medical association. The key to the doctor's appointment book is very often reflected in the weather forecast of the day.

Blood pressure, pulse, body temperature, and urine are all affected by the weather. Psychological adjustment to weather changes varies with each individual.

Optimistic moods may be expected to be the mode of the day when the weather is warm and barometers steady; despondency with cold weather.

Thin persons who like warm weather and react adversely to cold will often revert to a state of physical and mental fatigue in cold, wet, rainy weather.

Fat persons who adjust favorably to cold weather suffer from extreme heat.

Thunder storms accompanied by abrupt barometric changes can cause asthmatic attacks, increased hear attacks and resulting deaths. The same weather conditions can cause moods of restlessness and irritability.

The association notes that a change in weather is often the difference between sickness and health; the determining factor between life and death in a very sick person.

Head colds and sore throats due to barometric changes are likely to occur when cold weather causes alteration in the mucous membrane of the nose and throat.

Overheating of homes, apartments, shops, and offices during cold weather may cause respiratory infections.

Natural resistance to colds and other respiratory diseases can be affected by nose and body chilling. The chilling process causes contraction of tiny blood vessels in the nasal cavity. Greatest susceptibility to respiratory diseases occurs when a fall in temperature of the nose takes place, due to the shrinking of the membrane from blood vessel contraction. An acute cold may follow when bacteria penetrates the mucus membrane.

The association concludes that it may be easier to make indoor temperature psychologically tolerable rather than attempt to adjust the human nose to withstand weather shock. Effective devices for more clearly adjusting indoor atmospheric temperatures to outdoor weather conditions may be one major step in the direction of cold curtailment.

6,900 Good Jobs Open to Workers

Minnesota Employment Service Lists Openings

Minnesota offices of the state employment service have unfilled job opportunities in the professional and managerial categories for 6,900 qualified applicants, says Commissioner Frank T. Starkey, of the department of employment security. Salaries range from $3,600 to $15,000 a year and, in some cases, employers guarantee transportation and housing for the prospective employee.

Announcement of these openings, Starkey said, is the result of an all out, nationwide effort to utilize facilities of the several state agencies to find applicants having suitable qualifications.

The Minneapolis and St. Paul offices of the state agency have been designated as two of 75 nationally selected centers to speed up the matching of men and jobs in the professional and managerial occupations. However, all state employment offices in the state have complete details, and arrangements have been made to get quick action when a suitable applicant makes his availability known to any one of the 33 local offices in the state, including Thief River Falls.

Listed are openings for nurses, engineers, draftsmen, social scientists, laboratory technicians, social and welfare workers and retail managers. In all, more than 300 different occupations are represented.

To Send Yule Gifts to Mentally Ill in State Hospitals

Eleven thousand mentally ill patients in Minnesota hospitals, many of whom are forgotten at Christmas, will be cheered this year with the help of the Minnesota Association for Mental Health (MAMH) and its Christmas gift committee.

A statewide appeal to citizens for contributions of gifts and money has been announced by the committee, headed by Mrs. Henry S. Crosby, Orono, and Mrs. Brooks Henderson, Jr., St. Paul.

Citizens outside the Twin City area are asked to send unwrapped gifts, with paper and ribbon, and money to the Minnesota Association for Mental Health, 1645 Hennepin Avenue, Minneapolis.

The deadline for contributions has been set for December 8 to allow time to distribute gifts to six hospitals in the state. Money will be used to purchase "ward gifts" such as television sets, radios, phonographs and workshop equipment not provided by the hospital.

Suggested gifts lists, available at the MAMH office, include cosmetics, ties, handkerchiefs, games, toilet articles, socks and other useful, small items. Gifts for elderly patients and men have not been plentiful in the past years, according to Mrs. Crosby.

'U' Gets $300,000 Veterinary Funds

Federal Grant to Be Used for Research Laboratory

The University of Minnesota today was named to receive a $300,000 health research facilities grant from the U. S. Public Health Service, for use by the college of veterinary medicine on the St. Paul campus.

This grant will supplement the $600,000 appropriated by the 1957 Legislature for construction of isolation facilities and an infectious disease research laboratory, according to W. T. S. Thorp, dean of the College.

The additional funds, Thorp said, "will strengthen our veterinary medical research to increase our knowledge of the cause, effect, treatment and control of animal diseases, including those transmissible to man directly and affecting him indirectly."

Thorp added that the additional facilities will enable faculty members of the College of Veterinary Medicine to "explore new reservoirs of disease in animals which may affect man. It will likewise strengthen the present research program on diseases ocurring in the animal industry of Minnesota. Scientifically and technically, the veterinary medical profession's teaching and disease research efforts are the same as the other medical sciences."

Without Sacrifice Again?

President Eisenhower has spoken twice on the need for a reappraisal of our defense program as a result of the Sputniks. In these talks he has acknowledged Russia's present advantage in the rocket field. He will recommend an accelerated program to regain our relative strength—and lost prestige. And he has called attention to the need for greater emphasis on sciences in our secondary schools and colleges.

In these statements there is little cause for disagreement. The need is great and it it also urgent.

There is room for disagreement, however, as to how we are going to meet this need, and pay for the additional costs of an accelerated defense program. The President's comment on this indicated that he favors additional borrowing. He will ask Congress to raise the debt ceiling again. To this approach there is valid objection.

Reasonable alternatives to increased borrowing are decreased spending for non-essentials and greater efficiency in the administration of essential services; or increased taxes. Our guess is that the necessary additional funds required to meet the special needs that have developed can be obtained by curtailed spending for other services.

The President's talks would have been more impressive if they had stressed the need for greater sacrifices by all of us, now. He seems to share with Roosevelt the idea that borrowing provides a painless way for paying the cost of increased spending. He does not seem to grasp the fact that keeping our country solvent is a tremendously important part of our responsibility for keeping it militarily strong.

Our situation probably does not justify a "blood and sweat and tears" appeal such as that which Churchill used to impress upon his countrymen a recognition of their danger. Certainly there is no occasion now, or at any time, for hysteria. But in fairness to ourselves, and to the generation that follows us, there is no reason why we should not so manage our affairs at this time that we will be able to pay as we go.

We all know from personal experience that living within our means requires sacrifice. To whatever extent we must sacrifice at the present time to meet our immediate needs will not be a justifiable cause for complaint.

A Local Responsibility

President Eisenhower has asked each local school board and each Parent-Teacher organization to scrutinize their school's curriculum and standards and then decide for themselves whether they meet "the stern demands of the era we are entering."

Expressing the hope that this request be complied with, the Wall Street Journal observes:

> "The demonstrable fact is that in many grade and high schools the curriculum is soft. Too many courses are elective, too many courses devoid of academic content are offered, too little homework is assigned, too little stress is placed on mathematics and science. The President made this glaringly apparent by reminding us that the Russian high school graduate has had five years of physics, four years of chemistry, one year of astronomy, five years of biology, ten years of mathematics and trigonometry and five years of a foreign language."

We are sure our school system would compare favorably with others in Minnesota, and such a "scrutiny" as the President suggets could be made without reflection on the qualifications of local school officials or faculty members. If it is made then it should be completely objective, keeping in mind the special needs with which we are confronted in the emergency to which the President refers.

And let us keep in mind too, in considering this problem, that our school's curriculum and standards are problems to be dealt with at the local level. The state establishes minimum standards. We have the right to establish higher scholastic standards than the state requires. If our school is not as good as we would like it to be, we have the authority to make it better.

We have the right to insist that high school students carry a work load that requires them to put forth effort. In other words we have the right to maintain a good school, and low minimum state standards do not justify low standards at the local level.

This is what President Eisenhower had in mind we think, when he asked that we "scrutinize" our standards. It is proper recognition of responsibility at the local level.

Is There A Motion?

Bill Adams of the Roseau Times-Region enjoyed the opening days of the deer season in spite of his failure to accomplish his main purpose. The outing did give him material for another good report in his alway-interesting Cornerpost Column, from which we pass along the following paragraph:

> "The big soft-eyed Canadian Jays or Whiskey Jacks are giving hunters the annual looking over too. Don't seem a bit fearfull. They'll float down and plop onto a branch about twenty feet from a person and sit there cocking their heads and sizing things up just as much as to say, "Well, don't you have anything for me?" The Chickadees are busy as ever. Flit from one branch to another in a fever of activity, picking a bud here, finding a seed there and paying no more attention to a man than they think he deserves. They have even landed on some hunters who have sat real still."

The Canada Jays and Chickadees of our northwoods deserve more recognition than they have received, and we would be glad to second a motion that either of them be named Minnesota's official bird. They are inquisitive and friendly, and a few streaks of color in their facial plumage gives them an expression of impertinence that is delightful. They are interesting companions for us Nimrods who do our hunting seated comfortably on a stump.

The Canada Jay, known also as the Whiskey Jack, might be objected to by some because of the names. But Canada Jay should be no more objectionable than Norway Pine, which we have adopted as our official tree.

In favor of the Canada Jay or the Chickadee as the state bird is the fact that Minnesota is their winter home. These are not fair weather friends who leave us for sunnier climes when "the north wind doth blow".

Chain letter racketeers are becoming more greedy. A plan that is reported to be making some progress in Grand Forks requires a sucker investment of $37.50, the cost of two savings bonds. Publicity has been given to a court ruling that chain letters whether or not they are circulated by mail "are both frauds and lotteries".

The air force has checked five recent reports of mysterious lights and strange objects from the sky, and declares that there isn't a flying saucer in the lot. The most vivid of the stories, a Nebraska man's report of being shown around the interior of a space ship by a German-speaking crew, was written off as a hoax. Now we will not have to worry about that for a while again.

The WORLD OUTDOORS

By [illegible]

ONE of the old-time badmen of the once wild and wooly West was credited with saying: "I never pulled my gun that I didn't use it."

What with the hunting season in full swing, this appears a proper time to paraphrase and say, "Never load your weapon until you are ready to use it."

This is good advice for this, or any other time of the year for it is always the "unloaded" weapon that is responsible for an accidental death.

Shotguns and rifles are extremely dangerous. They were made to kill, and they kill human beings as easily as game animals or as easily as they shatter clay targets.

A safe gun is a clean gun, in good repair. When not in the field, it should be carried empty, taken down, or with action open.

A gun that is dropped in sand or mud should not be fired until it has been cleaned and carefully checked to assure that the barrel and action are free of obstructions.

A gun should never be pointed at anything but a legal, fair target. It should never be dropped carelessly against a car fender, a tree, or a fence . . . particularly if it is loaded with ammunition.

Climbing a tree or a fence with a loaded gun is asking for trouble. Shooting at a flat, hard surface, or the surface of water is a highly dangerous practice.

The National Safety Council states that more students are injured playing "ping-pong, football, and volley ball" than are injured in rifle clubs in all high schools in the country.

That's because rifle clubs teach proper gun handling procedure. If you don't belong to a club, follow the rules just the same—just to help keep the statistics down.

REPORT from the GOVERNOR

by Orville L. Freeman

Those of us in Minnesota trade delegation to the Orient have been extremely busy. We have been meeting people and conferring with them from early morning until late at night. Our first few days in Japan resulted in so many impressions of that country that it is hard to know where to begin.

Tokyo

Tokyo is a very large and crowded city. It has grown so fast in recent years that it is now the center of the largest metropolitan area in the world. The streets are crowded with people rushing everywhere. In addition to vehicles to which we are accustomed they have many bicycles, motorcycles, and three-wheel motorcycles serving as trucks.

Education and Schools

Japan has one of the highest literacy rates in the world, and one of the outstanding characteristics of the Japanese people is their desire for education. Schools are regarded as 'very important; and, although buildings and equipment in schools I visited showed physical surroundings far below those in the United States, the children were very eager and interested.'

I visited a dormitory provided by a factory for its unmarried workers. The typical room had very skimpy furnishings,—with only a mat to sleep on and a small desk and chair. But there were at least twenty books in the room,—and pen, paper, and pencil on the dek. It was clear that the most valued possessions in this instance were books.

Food and Agriculture

Only fifteen percent of the total area of Japan (less than that of California) can be cultivated,—yet Japan has a population of ninety million people. Extremely intensive cultivation of the little land they do have results in their producing eighty percent of the food they use. This indicates, not only efficient use of their land, but also the fact that the average Japanese eats less than the average American.

They need to import food, and their needs correspond with product Minnesota has to sell. Soybeans are a staple. Dairy products are important, and the use in Japan of both powdered milk and wheat is increasing. As the Japanese steadily raise their standard of living they will be able to buy and use more of our products, provided they can get dollars by selling some of their products to us. Today they import about a billion dollars annually from the United States, but we import from them only about half a billion dollars worth.

Reaction to Sputnik

It is confusing and difficult for visitors to try to interpret the Japanese reaction to Sputnik and Russian technological progress. Newspapers are full of the subect, and it surely has made an impact. It is my impression that our prestige has been damaged,—but that the Japanese realize that both the Soviet Union and the United States command great destructive power, and that the race to develop weapons of destruction continues.

Practically, what they are interested in is the kind of relationship that will permit them to develop and improve their standard of living and give them freedom. They really want peace.

Cordial Reception

We have received exceptionally friendly treatment here. I am more convinced than ever that an exchange of people can be of utmost value in developing international understanding, friendship, and good will.

When the late Admiral Byrd made his 1926 voyage to the North Pole, bituminous coal was the fuel relied on by the expedition to power the vessel "Chantier." Now, more than 30 years later, the International Geophysical Year expedition to the South Pole has reported discovery of coal "in large amounts."

It now looks as if the St. Lawrence Seaway will cost $473 million—as against an initial estimate of $303 million.

THE MINNESOTA STORY

MAPPING PROBLEMS

When the state of Minnesota was first divided into counties, its actual dimensions and characteristics were little known. The territorial and early state legislatures simply divided the state along lines of latitude or longitude or by well-known geographic features, and they frequently created new counties or rearranged old ones. When the laws relating to county boundaries were brought together and compared, it was found that many of the counties overlapped and that unorganized pockets of land were left in the northern and western part of the state.

When the firm of J. S. Sewall & C. W. Iddings of St. Paul published a map of Minnesota in 1860, they were forced to leave some of the counties undrawn because of the confusion over boundaries. As a result, their map carried the following apologetic "Notice": "The boundaries of the counties of Stearns, Meeker, and Monongalia, are given as described in the law passed at the last session of the Legislature; but have not been ratified by a popular vote, as is necessary for their adoption. The lines previously enacted for Stearns and Meeker Counties, and the South boundary of Toombs County, are impossible, as may be seen by comparison of the Laws with the Map."

Sewall and Iddings requested "All persons . . . to give notice of any mistakes or omissions which they find out."

DOGGEREL NEWS

For a time in the 1870's the "Minneapolis Daily Tribune" carried a page of St. Paul news in its weekly Sunday edition. The page was considerably enlivened by the column of one Ben Wilde, who reported some of the week's events in doggerel verse. An example of his writing may be found in the following poem about the burning of the steamboat "Aunt Betsey," which appeared in the issue of November 8, 1874:

"Captain Smith (not the man whom the young princess freed)
Mourns the loss of his "Betsey," and loss 'tis indeed;
Though she went, like Elijah,
from Earth in a flame,
She wasn't a prophet (profit).
That's where Smith is lame.
Had she prophesied as did Elijah
the good,
Smith would've known this and had her insured all he could."

Making political humor the name of Joseph Wyrzykowski, candidate for alderman in the 1874 St. Paul election, Wilde wrote:

"The poor Fourth Ward voters are breaking their jaws
Hurrahing for a man who desires to make laws;
When their aws are twice broken they easily cry,
Hurrah for our candidate —
Kyrzykowski!"

Though many of Wilde's little poems are no longer timely, the following verse will no doubt be appreciated as long as there are city hall clocks:

"The City Hall clock has been
"fixed," says The Press.
This item has caused a great deal of distress;
But we've ciphered it out, and attention now call
To the fact that it's "fixed,"
'cause it moves not at all."

NO NEWS

The citizens of Minnesota, as did the rest of the nation, awaited with great interest the results of the 1860 presidential contest between Abraham Lincoln and Stephen Douglas. A telegraph line had reached St. Paul in August of that year, and on November 6, election day, a large crowd, including the editors of St. Paul's three newspapers, gathered at the telegraph office in a downtown hotel to hear the news.

To the editors' great indignation, the telegraph operator refused to give them the dispatches about the election unless they each paid him fifty dollars. They decided not to pay him, and the next day they furnished their readers with furious editorials instead of election returns. "If extra charges are to be proposed on every occasion of important news, we will be obliged to have recourse again to the mails," said the editor of the "Pioneer and Democrat."

The hot-tempered Dr. Thomas Foster, editor of the "Daily Minnesotian," devoted most of his second page on November 8 to a condemnation of the "intollerable conduct" of that "insolent monopoly," the telegraph company. The election, he said, had been "pregnant with more far reaching consequences than any decided since this was a Union," and if the telegraph company did not realize its obligation to the public, the state legislature ought to see that it did. "Infamous'," said Dr. Foster, "was the mildest term yesterday applied to both Line and Operator, by men of all parties."

By the next day, the "Pioneer and Democrat" could only says, "By reason of the infamous conduct of the telegraphic operator at this place, we are still left in ignorance of the result of the presidential election." On November 10 each of the St. Paul papers carried the notice that they had all determined to pay no more money to the telegraph company for dispatches of any kind. Dr. Foster's parting shot was: "A word in Mr. Operator Gallup's ear . . . the sooner you make tracks for other parts, the better for yourself and employers."

REAPING MACHINE

The first mowing machine to be used in Minnesota is said to have been a McCormick reaper purchased by Governor Alexander Ramsey in 1852 for use on his farm at Lake Como. The reaper was an object of intense interest in the area, and many people made special trips to the farm to watch it at work. The driver of Ramsey's reaping machine was a young man named Lathrop E. Reed whom the governor had originally hired to do some carpentry work on his house. When Ramsey saw that Reed was unable to drive nails without bending them, he offered him work on the farm. Reed was a good farmer and became a prosperous St. Paul banker.

A peek at THE STARS

BY LYN CONNELLY

A DIME changed the course of Paul Winchell's life when he sent 10 cents for a booklet offered in an advertisement which read "Be the life of the party, throw your voice, learn ventriloquism" . . . This was at an early age and young Paul was fascinated by the booklet, absorbed it completely . . . Then when the star was 15 and a student at New York's School of Industrial Arts, he was assigned a commercial shadow-box display in an advertising course . . . He came up with Jerry Mahoney, his sprightly sidekick who co-stars in ABC-TV's new half-hour weekly variety series, "The Paul Winchell Show."

Paul tried his luck with Jerry on Major Bowes amateur hour, walked off with the first prize and a $75-a-week job with the Major's touring troupe . . . The ventriloquist soon established himself in theatres, supper clubs, the hotel circuit and radio, then entered television . . . His forthcoming ABC-TV show marks his tenth consecutive season in the medium, that record including his own program as well as guest appearances on most of the major variety and comedy hours . . . He has twice received the coveted Look Magazine award as "the most versatile performer in television."

The Winchells live in suburban Larchmont, N. Y., where Paul has a workshop to keep the ever-youthful Jerry in trim . . . The ventriloquist is married to the former Dorothy Morse . . . They have two children, Stephanie, 11, "a pretty good little ventriloquist," and Stacy Paul, 4, who used to tear Jerry's head out of its socket before making the adjustment.

Paul is a rabid boxing fan, keeps in trim through weight-lifting and golf . . . He attributes the 98 he shot on his first time out on a golf course to the coordination he developed from ventriloquism.

For Goodness Sake, Say It!

There is no "children are seen and not heard" era and most of the time we are glad, but there are times when we wish that what we hear from them were different—very different. It is not that what they are trying to say is particularly wrong; it is their "all around Robin's barn" approach.

Gretchen, fourteen, rushes into the house where Mrs. Sheel is reading her mail. "Oh Mom, you know that living doll I told you about; the one whose hair waves sharp like Sal Mineo's. The one who isn't at all a greaser, but wears crew neck sweaters and ivy league shoes. He looks a lot like Bill, but he isn't a make-out like Bill. He looks at you like he's flipping over what he sees, and you feel like you could just lift up your wings and fly right up to Sputnik. Well today he was talking to Margie and he said—Now you know how Margie is—she gets everything umpty-muddled. So maybe he didn't say exactly this, but let this charter member of his fan club dream on—."

Well, by this time Mrs. Sheel is ready to "flip" too, but not over the living doll—her motherly interest in Gretchen's news is just a bit frayed at the edges.

Many such Gretchenian eruptions in the course of a day find mother a shade less enthusiastic, and find Gretchen wailing "No one cares anything about me. You won't LISTEN TO ME."

Now mother is interested and cherishes Gretchen's wish to bring home her confidences. And Gretchen is a normal fourteen and has a laudable urge to share with mother. Mother's impatience is as understandable as Gretchen's being so full of the details of her teen age life. They both have to endure their present touchiness to each other's style and swallow their irritation until life "comes right again. Better still, a generous sprinkling of humor would help.

Oh yes—what WAS Gretchen's breathless news? The living doll had said, "Gretchen still looks human, even with the braces on her teeth."

Over the nine-year 1948-56 period, workers' wages rose an average of 61.4 per cent. Average productivity per worker, on the other hand, rose only 26.1 per cent. The difference was in large part made up by increased prices.

SADDLE BATTLE

By Allen Wishert

SERIOUS friction had developed between two cowboys riding for entirely different outfits. As yet no fateful conflict had broken openly, but the other riders for both ranches looked beyond the horizon and glimpsed the outcome.

The trouble wasn't of the old West brand when stockmen and sheepmen settled their arguments with Winchesters and six-shooters when one or the other would gain grazing land.

The grazing at present was of an altogether different variety. Britt Bennett, foreman of the Bar-M-Bar had lately, and quite frequently, too, visited the Triangle-H. The reason: rancher Hightower's daughter, Wilma, who wasn't at all averse to the visits. In fact, she was always pleased. However, Scott Sulter, the Triangle H. foreman who had been sash-shaying around Wilma for the past several months, didn't appreciate Britt as a guest.

Upon his last visit as Britt rode up to the front porch, he glanced out toward the bunk-house. Scott was shoving a 30-30 Winchester into his saddle holster. Then examining his six-shooter, he mounted and rode out onto the prairie in the direction of the Bar-M-Bar. Britt figured upon returning to his outfit, he would encounter Scott and a showdown would be inevitable.

It came about as expected, they met. The Winchester was still holstered and it was quite noticeable that Scott had loosened his 45 in anticipation of making a fast draw.

Britt reined his pony alongside Scott's and halted.

"Out looking for strays, Scott?" he asked.

"Could be," replied Scott. "There's a stray from the Bar-M-Bar that's been ranging wide lately."

"Meaning: I am wearing that brand, eh, Scott?"

"Could be," he paused. "Now, that you're rounded-up, hadn't you, in the future, better do your grazing closer to your own corral?"

Scott had drawn a line, Britt had to either cross it or back away. The range ponies they were riding sensed the situation, they threw their heads into the air and viciously pawed the earth.

"Reckon," said Britt. "We may as well come to an understanding."

"Couldn't think of a better time," answered Scott. He made a slight change in saddle position. Britt did likewise. The movements gave both ample room for unhampered arm swinging. "Suppose," continued Scott. "We say you've made your last visit to the Triangle-H."

"In that case," replied Britt, not removing his eyes from Scott's pistol-hand. "We'd both be supposing wrong."

The understanding they sought, had now become understood.

Now, it would be only a matter of moments until one or the other toppled from his saddle and a riderless horse would be galloping over the prairie.

Both leaned forward, tensed, their ponies braced and stiff-legged.

Suddenly, the tension was broken and hoof-beats coming from the direction of the Triangle-H caused them to look toward the sound.

Came the realization that Boothill, for the time being, would be minus a customer.

Wilma Hightower rode between them.

"I knew you two would be acting like a couple of locoed rannies. Britt, you on your way. Scott, you're wanted at the Triangle. Both of you ride."

Scott WAS wanted at the Triangle-H. When he arrived the sheriff met him in the corral. The lawman extracted the Winchester from the holster and commanded Scott to pass over his six-shooter.

Scott Sulter had a wife back in Iowa that he had forgotten. The charge was desertion.

THE United States Chamber of Commerce is a powerful business lobby in Washington. Its fluted columned building facing the White House across Lafayette Park. The USCC with its "flying squadrons" of business men is credited with arousing the people to demand cutbacks in government spending to the tune of almost $5 billions of dollars, although not all this year . . . spread out over three years.

In its current publication, "Washington Report" the Chamber says: "Wage increases out of profits? No indeed. The notion is a pretty bauble to lure the unwary into economic trouble."

"Pay of non-government employees increased $91 billion between 1945 and 1955, while corporate profits, AFTER TAXES increased $6.6 billion," says the Chamber. Since the people making up the bulk of employees pay taxes too, about two-thirds of the taxes, their increase AFTER TAXES is not given. . . .

But it's for sure that the $6.6 billion corporate profit was after taxes and also after paying the non-government employees $91 billion. Then the chamber says the real causes of the present inflation are "unjustified wage hikes coupled with "easy money," that is, fiscal policies which increase the supply of money and credit. But the wails from business and others is not easy money but "hard money" fiscal policies which make money scarce and high priced. And the policy of the present administration running our government is "hard money, high interest rates and tight credit. That policy has been in effect since early 1954. Result—$15 billions in increased profits to lending institutions. About a billion dollar increase in carrying the national debt for the taxpayers. No tax reduction. High priced homes for veterans and others. Increased mortgage debt, plus increased consumer debt. Reduced savings, 6.9% of income in 1957 as compared to 8% of income in 1953, etc., etc.

Most of this wage increase, according to the records was passed on to the consumer-like steel, like automobiles, like meat, like most everything else you can mention. And the U. S. Chamber takes great pride in accomplishing the government spending reduction, which came out of the "fat" in defense and security spending for research and development on military items. We all know what these cut backs have done—Witness Sputnik girding the earth every hour or so while USA satellites, missiles and rockets are stored on the ground and in the eyes of most of the world we have lost our scientific leadership. Witness cutbacks in defense contracts, in progress payments, in cancellations of other contracts.

While holding the price index line . . . the Company (Du Pont) improved its earnings for the first nine months of 1957 by increasing operating investment, producing a larger physical volume of sales and the application of improved technology in manufacturing processes. In other words, DuPont not only paid wage increases out of earnings, but increased its earnings per share from $6.00 in 1956 to $6.44 in 1957, and at the same time held the price line.

1280-ton dragline can dig 110 feet below surface; raise 30 cubic-yard load 60 feet above ground to dump into portable screening plant.

"Pay dirt" is 2 years away!

Just north of Hibbing there's an awesome sight: a mammoth dragline at work clearing away waste surface material to open a new iron ore mine.

Everything about this job is "king-size": the towering dragline itself; the conveyor belt that carries three miles to the stripping dump; and the cost: millions of dollars must be spent in Minnesota for labor and supplies before a single ton of ore is shipped from this mine. Furthermore, most of the ore will still need costly special processing to upgrade and improve it to meet steel mill requirements.

It takes huge capital investments to mine Minnesota iron ores . . . and to process the ores after you get to them. If Minnesota is to maintain its place in the world picture as a major iron ore producer, many millions of dollars must still be invested for more research and more new plants. You and your family and all the people of Minnesota have a very real stake in iron ore.

RESEARCH AND INVESTMENT CAN KEEP MINNESOTA'S IRON ORE FUTURE BRIGHT!

SADDLE BATTLE

By Allen Wishert

SERIOUS friction had developed between two cowboys riding for entirely different outfits. As yet no fateful conflict had broken openly, but the other riders for both ranches looked beyond the horizon and glimpsed the outcome.

The trouble wasn't of the old West brand when stockmen and sheepmen settled their arguments with Winchesters and six-shooters when one or the other would gain grazing land.

The grazing at present was of an altogether different variety. Britt Bennett, foreman of the Bar-M-Bar had lately, and quite frequently, too, visited the Triangle-H. The reason: rancher Hightower's daughter, Wilma, who wasn't at all averse to the visits, in fact, she was always pleased. However, Scott Sulter, the Triangle H foreman who had been sash-shaying around Wilma for the past several months, didn't appreciate Britt as a guest.

Upon his last visit as Britt rode up to the front porch, he glanced out toward the bunk-house. Scott was shoving a 30-30 Winchester into his saddle-holster. Then examining his six-shooter, he mounted and rode out onto the prairie in the direction of the Bar-M-Bar. Britt figured upon returning to his outfit, he would encounter Scott and a showdown would be inevitable.

It came about as expected, they met. The Winchester was still holstered and it was quite noticeable that Scott had loosened his 45 in anticipation of making a fast draw.

Britt reined his pony alongside Scott's and halted.

"Out looking for strays, Scott?" he asked.

"Could be," replied Scott. "There's a stray from the Bar-M-Bar that's been ranging wide lately."

"Meaning: I am wearing that brand, eh, Scott?"

"Could be," he parried. "Now, that you're rounded-up, hadn't you, in the future, better do your grazing closer to your own corral?"

Scott had drawn a line, Britt had to either cross it or back away. The range ponies they were riding sensed the situation, they threw their heads into the air and viciously pawed the earth.

"Reckon," said Britt. "We may as well come to an understanding."

"Couldn't think of a better time," answered Scott. He made a slight change in saddle position, Britt did likewise. The movements gave both ample room for unhampered arm swinging. "Suppose," continued Scott. "We say you've made your last visit to the Triangle-H."

"In that case," replied Britt, not removing his eyes from Scott's pistol-hand. "We'd both be supposing wrong."

The understanding they sought, had now become understood.

Now, it would be only a matter of moments until one or the other toppled from his saddle and a riderless horse would be galloping over the prairie.

Both leaned forward, tensed, their ponies braced and stiff-legged.

Suddenly, the tension was broken and hoof-beats coming from the direction of the Triangle-H caused them to look toward the sound.

Came the realization that Boot-Hill, for the time being, would be minus a customer.

Wilma Hightower rode between them.

"I knew you two would be acting like a couple of locoed rannies. Britt, you go your way. Scott, you're wanted at the Triangle. Both of you ride."

Scott WAS wanted at the Triangle-H. When he arrived the sheriff met him in the corral. The lawman extracted the Winchester from the holster and commanded Scott to pass over his six-shooter.

Scott Sulter had a wife back in Iowa that he had forgotten. The charge was desertion.

The USCC with its "flying squadrons" of business men is credited with arousing the people to demand cutbacks in government spending to the tune of almost $3 billions of dollars, although not all this year . . . spread out over three years.

In its current publication, "Washington Report" the Chamber says: "Wage increases out of profits? No indeed. The notion is a pretty bauble to lure the unwary into economic trouble."

"Pay of non-government employees increased $91 billion between 1945 and 1955, while corporate profits, AFTER TAXES increased $6.6 billion," says the Chamber. Since the people making up the bulk of employees pay taxes too, about two-thirds of the taxes, their increase AFTER TAXES is not given.

But it's for sure that the $6.6 billion corporate profit was after taxes and also after paying the non-government employees $91 billion. Then the chamber says the real causes of the present inflation are "unjustified wage hikes coupled with "easy money," that is, fiscal policies which increase the supply of money and credit. But the wails from business and others is not easy money but "hard money" fiscal policies which make money scarce and high priced. And the policy of the present administration running our government is "hard money, high interest rates and tight credit. That policy has been in effect since early 1954. Result—$15 billions in increased profits to lending institutions. About a billion dollar increase in carrying the national debt for the taxpayers. No tax reduction. High priced homes for veterans and others. Increased mortgage debt, plus increased consumer debt. Reduced savings, 6.9% of income in 1957 as compared to 8% of income in 1953, etc., etc.

Most of this wage increase, according to the records was passed on to the consumer-like steel, like automobiles, like most, like most everything else you can mention. And the U. S. Chamber takes great pride in accomplishing the government spending reduction, which came out of the "fat" in defense and security spending for research and development on military items. We all know what these cut backs have done—Witness Sputnik girding the earth every hour or so while USA satellites, missiles and rockets are stored on the ground and in the eyes of most of the world we have lost our scientific leadership. Witness cutbacks in defense contracts, in progress payments, in cancellations of other contracts.

While holding the price index line . . . the Company (Du Pont) improved its earnings for the first nine months of 1957 by increasing operating investment, producing a larger physical volume of sales and the application of improved technology in manufacturing processes. In other words, DuPont not only paid wage increases out of earnings, but increased its earnings per share from $6.00 in 1956 to $6.44 in 1957, and at the same time held the price line.

1200-ton dragline can dig 110 feet below surface; raise 30 cubic-yard load 60 feet above ground to dump into portable screening plant.

"Pay dirt" is 2 years away!

Just north of Hibbing there's an awesome sight: a mammoth dragline at work clearing away waste surface material to open a new iron ore mine.

Everything about this job is "king-size": the towering dragline itself; the conveyor belt that makes three miles to the stripping dump; and the cost: millions of dollars must be spent in Minnesota for labor and supplies before a single ton of ore is shipped from this mine. Furthermore, most of the ore will still need costly special processing to upgrade and improve it to meet steel mill requirements.

It takes huge capital investments to mine Minnesota iron ores . . . and to process the ores after you get to them. If Minnesota is to maintain its place in the world picture as a major iron ore producer, many millions of dollars must still be invested for more research and more new plants. You and your family and all the people of Minnesota have a very real stake in iron ore.

RESEARCH AND INVESTMENT CAN KEEP MINNESOTA'S IRON ORE FUTURE BRIGHT!

Fellowships in Science Offered

High School Science Teachers Are Eligible

Shell Companies Foundation, Inc., announced today that fellowships will be provided for special study next summer to 100 high school teachers of physics, chemistry, and mathematics.

This is a 67 per cent increase in the size of the Foundation's Merit Fellowship program since the first 60 fellowships were awarded in 1956. There were 90 fellowships last year.

The Foundation said the program is designed to help check the nation's shortage of scientists by strengthening the teaching of high school chemistry, physics, and mathematics and thus encouraging more young people to plan scientific careers.

Half the fellowship teachers attend full summer sessions at Stanford University, and half go to Cornell.

Applications for both Stanford and Cornell fellowships close February 1, the Foundation said.

Fellowship teachers receive allowances for travel, tuition, living expenses, and $500 in cash to offset the loss of other summer earnings. Teachers attend lectures and laboratory sessions, hold group discussions with scientists, and visit nearby research installations.

Requests for fellowship applications should be sent directly to the two universities. Teachers living west of the Mississippi should write the School of Education, Stanford University, Stanford, California. Teachers east of the Mississippi should write the School of Education, Cornell University, Ithaca, New York.

Mathematics, physics, and chemistry teachers in the U. S. and Canada with five years' experience and known leadership ability are eligible.

Banks Promoting 4-H Foundation

Seek Funds to Support National Organization

Plans for the launching of a special fund raising effort in behalf of 4-H Club work have been announced by the Minnesota Bankers association agricultural committee. The program got under way November 1.

George S. Henry, vice president, First National Bank, Minneapolis, is again this year serving as chairman for Minnesota banks in the fund raising effort, which is part of a nationwide program being carried on by banks in behalf of the National 4-H Club Foundation.

In a letter to Minnesota banks, Henry said that the National 4-H Foundation is helping with the development of the 4-H movement here at home and providing an opportunity for rural young people to promote world understanding and peace. He recognized that many banks already support local club work and urged them to consider the Foundation for additional support.

The program of the National 4-H Foundation, an educational, non-profit organization, currently includes: (1) the International Farm Youth Exchange under which 300 young people are exchanged each year between the United States and 50 countries of the free world in order that they may live and work with farm families and promote better understanding.

(2) the operation of a National 4-H Club Center in the Nation's Capital, which will serve as a "working" monument to the 4-H movement, with emphasis on citizenship, leadership development, and character education, and (3) a broad program in human development-human relations for training youth leaders in how to work more effectively with young people.

Chain Letters Are Circulated in Area

Savings Bond Scheme Is Used; Practice Illegal

Postmaster General Arthur Summerfield announced this week a revival of chain letter schemes in the nation, and warned that those who take part in such schemes may be subject to criminal prosecution.

Summerfield stated that one version currently being used is a scheme in which savings bonds are being utilized, and in which the list is not sent by mail but is exchanged by hand.

R. J. Dryden, Thief River Falls postmaster, said he had received reports that attempts are being made to operate the scheme in this city, and he warned local residents to be on guard.

Local bankers stated that they have turned down several requests to purchase savings bonds when they had reason to believe the bonds were being bought as a result of a chain letter.

Council Approves 2 Highway Routes

To Reroute Entry into T.R. Falls of 1 and 59 from West

Definite plans for the long pending rerouting of Highway 1 and Highway 59 at their approaches to Thief River Falls were approved by the city council Tuesday evening after being submitted by Ed Johnson of Bemidji, assistant district engineer with the state highway department.

The rerouting plan is scheduled for inclusion in the department's 1958 construction program, Johnson stated.

Under the arrangement worked out by the engineers after a lengthy study, Highway 1 will swing south from a point about one-half mile west of the fair grounds, and will then curve east to connect with the west end of Third st., instead of coming in on Sixth st. as at present.

Highway 59, which is scheduled to be routed along the Soo Line south from Newfolden, will leave that route several miles north of Thief River Falls, and instead of coming into the city on Main av. as at present, will proceed south to intersect with Highway 1 west of the city just before No. 1 starts to curve south. Highway 32, however, will be continued on its present route.

Bob Carlson, vice president of the council, presided at Tuesday's session in the absence of President A. F. Berge.

Roy Oen and Clifford Bjorkman appeared in behalf of the Pennington County centennial committee to present a request that the city buy from Miss Myrtle Myrin a 3½ acre tract at the east end of the Eighth st. bridge as the site for a wayside park and historical marker. Informed that Miss Myrin is asking $3,500 for the property, the council deferred action due to the absence of Berge from the meeting.

City Engineer Douglas Stewart and Morris Owen, chief engineer at the municipal plant, discussed the need for arranging for heating facilities at the power plant when the Diesel units are shut down when the city starts receiving federal bureau power shortly. As a temporary solution Stewart proposed the use of electric heaters to heat the water jackets on the Diesel units, and the plan was approved by the council.

Given its first reading was a proposed ordinance increasing fees for weighing truckloads at the city scales. The proposal calls for rates of 75c, 50c and 30c according to the size of the load, compared to present charges of 50c, 30c and 20c.

At the request of residents of the Horseshoe area, an ordinance was given a first reading which would change the name of East Zeh st. to Parkview st.

A request was submitted by Fire Chief Roy Langevin for the purchase of 500 feet of 2½ inch fire hose at a cost estimated in the neighborhood of $1,000. Action was deferred pending a conference with Langevin.

In the business session, the nominating committee will submit a list of candidates for positions on the board of directors, and additional nominations may be made from the floor. The election will be conducted in advance of the December meeting.

[illegible] Districts [illegible] Tuesday on Merger with 18

Mrs. Martha Matheson, county superintendent of schools, today corrected her announcement made in Monday's Times to the effect that the special election in Mavie School Districts 15, 46 and 76 would be held next Wednesday, November 27. The correct date, she said, is Tuesday, Nov. 26, from 3:30 to 7 p.m., with all voters casting their ballots in District 76 in Marshall county. The question to be voted on is whether or not the three districts should consolidate with the Thief River Falls school district, No. 18.

Plans for Polio Fund Campaign in January Made Tuesday Night

Larry Reider, St. Cloud, northern Minnesota representative for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, presided at a six-county regional meeting of county polio officials which drew an attendance of 36 persons Tuesday evening at the Rex Cafe.

Counties represented were Pennington, Red Lake, Marshall, Kittson, Polk and Norman.

Mrs. Bert M. Count, state women's advisor of the Foundation was the featured speaker at the meeting, which was called to discuss plans for the 1958 fund campaign which opens in January.

Theme of the 1958 campaign is "Survival Is Not Enough," Reider told the county polio drive heads.

He said that, despite the drastic reductions in polio cases in recent years, there is still an urgent need for funds for patient care. National foundation heads have pledged themselves to continue this care, which will take a large share of the 1958 budget.

A movie, also titled "Survival is not Enough," was shown.

Several persons at the meeting were awarded service pins for their years of work with the polio foundation. Those from Pennington county receiving awards were M. C. Gulbranson, Norman A. Holen and Roy Oen, 15-year pins, and Oscar A. Nelson, A. F. Berge, and Mrs. Rudy Sagmoen, recipients of 5-year pins.

Following the business session the officials at the meeting observed the 20th birthday of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis by cutting a large birthday cake.

The foundation was established 20 years ago by the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Richard G. Mabey of Thief River Falls is the Pennington county polio drive chairman who will head the polio campaign in January.

Chas. Rodekuhr, chapter president, said the county unit plans to procure the film, "Survival Is Not Enough" for showings to aid the 1958 drive in Pennington County.

Calendar for Fall Term of Court Is Brief

Only 7 Cases Listed; Judge Lundgren to Preside over Term

A calendar of only seven new civil cases awaits consideration at the November term of Pennington county district court, which will open with the calling of the calendar by Judge Jaul A. Lundgren next Monday morning, November 25. Also on the calendar are ten actions involving the collection of delinquent personal property taxes.

If past procedure is followed, the petit jury will be summoned to report for duty the following Monday, December 2. Five of the cases call for a jury trial, while the remaining two are court cases to be heard without jury.

First case listed is that of Joseph Miekoday vs. Burrill Hotel Corp. et al., a personal injury case. Second is Maree Olson vs. Edwin Haug, Elsie, Clarence and Evelyn Haug, involving a financial transaction. The third action is an appeal from probate court in the case of the estate of Dora O'Hara, deceased.

The fourth case, R. M. Bazsen vs. Marvin Mehrkens, involves a financial transaction. The fifth case is that of Jack Rosen vs. Rev. John O'Toole and Thief River Falls Flying club, a corporation, and involves a claim for damages in a personal injury claim resulting from an airplane crash.

Local Beets Show Big Sugar Content

Sugar beets grown in Pennington County in 1957 showed a good sugar content, it was announced by county agent Paul Stelmaschuk. Two samples sent in soon after harvest tested 18.8 and 18.2 per cent sucrose. Two samples tested later showed 17.8 and 18.15 percent sucrose.

The Red River Valley content of sugar beets generally runs in the 14 per cent range. However the sugar beets sent for test from this county were somewhat dehydrated and so the sugar content would run higher due to loss of water while the beets were in transit.

The sugar beets were grown in a variety test trial on the Art Rambeck farm two miles west and two miles north of Thief River Falls. Curtis Swanson assisted with the upkeep of the trials. The sugar beet yield was 19.4 tons per acre of clean sugar beets. The trial was one fifteenth of an acre in size and received an application of only seventy-five pounds of complete fertilizer.

Owen stated that the interruption is made necessary by the fact that Minnkota Power Co-op will be stringing lines over the river across the city's 2,400-volt line, in preparation for bringing bureau of reclamation power to Thief River Falls, with service scheduled to start next week.

Market Operations Changing Fast, LOL Session Here Is Told

In our marketing operations as in our farming operations, we are living in a a rapidly changing business climate, Dr. Gordon Sprague, economist, told a District 17 Land O' Lakes Creameries dinner meeting at the Zion Lutheran Church last night. We are living in an era of industrial and merchandising revolution, and we must adjust ourselves to the fact that we must learn to do things differently, he said.

"In order to survive in the competition with "giantism" the cooperatives must grow bigger wherever bigness will result in greater efficiency and management must improve at all levels, he pointed out.

Referring to recent University of Minnesota studies, he cited figures showing the disadvantage small creamery operations suffer because of excessive manufacturing costs. These studies revealed that a 150,000 pound creamery have a manufactur-

County Centennial Unit Sets Tentative Date for '58 Festival

With more than 25 members present, the Pennington county committee for the observance of the Minnesota statehood centennial in 1958 met Monday evening in the court house and further developed local plans for the event. Herman A. Kjos, chairman, presided.

The first Saturday and Sunday in August, 1958, were tentatively set as the dates for a centennial celebration in Thief River Falls, contingent on arrangements with the Junior Chamber of Commerce to hold its annual water carnival on that Sunday. The event will be featured by the dedication of the new Eighth st. bridge, scheduled for completion by that time.

Members of the committee from Goodridge stated that tentative plans are being made for a centennial observance in Goodridge Sunday, June 1. The county committee offered its cooperation, as well as to St. Hilaire in the event that that village arranges a celebration.

Chairman Kjos told of a proposal to bring in one of the fast-disappearing rural schools and setting it up on the county fair grounds as a permanent historical exhibit. Before taking any action in the matter, the committee will learn the views of the fair board.

Roy J. Oen, a member of the state centennial athletic committee, briefly discussed the elaborate program of athletic events being arranged for 1958.

A lengthy discussion followed the reading of a letter from Miss Myrtle Myrin, owner of the 3½ acre tract at the east end of the Eighth st. bridge, which is being sought as the site of an historic wayside park. In her letter, Miss Myrin stated that she would sell the property for $3,500. The committee felt the price was high, but decided to submit the matter to the city council.

2 Youths Confess to Shoplifting in Local Stores

Boys, Ages 14 and 15, Admit Taking Merchandise from Stores Since Last July

A local merchant's foresight in reporting the theft of 10 cents worth of candy by two teen-age boys to city police has resulted in the solution of several cases of larceny from stores here, Police Chief Elton Cummings said here today.

The two youths, one 14, the other 15, had been responsible for a string of thefts from merchants here since July 26. They were picked up and questioned by police after they were reported for theft of the candy and in the course of the questioning they confessed they had been the persons involved in the other thefts.

Among the items stolen were a .22 caliber pistol, portable radio, wrist watch, ammunition and several other articles, most of which were turned over to police.

The pistol has not been recovered yet, as it was sold shortly after it was stolen, Cummings said.

He commended the merchant who reported the youths to police and said this was a good time of year to be on the lookout for shoplifters. He emphasized that merchants should always call police in such cases.

The two youths are in the custody of relatives here and will be brought before juvenile court in about a week.

Patricia R. Johnson and Bradley Teal Wed Oct. 26

In a setting of yellow mums, bronze and yellow pompons and lighted candelabra Saturday evening, October 26, Miss Patricia Rae Johnson became the bride of Bradley A. Teal in Zion Lutheran church of this city. Rev. Marvin O. Carlson and Rev. W. M. Pederson performed the double ring ceremony in the presence of approximately 275 guests.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benhart A. Johnson of this city, and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Cleman A. Teal, also of this city.

Mrs. Reuben Lockrem presided at the organ for a prelude of nuptial music and the traditional wedding marches. She also accompanied Bryant Ulseth, who sang "Because", the "Lord's Prayer", and "O Perfect Love."

The bride, given in marriage by her father was attired in a floor length gown of imported lace and nylon tulle. The fitted bodice was fashioned with a rounded scalloped neckline with appliques of tiny seed pearls and sequins with tiny buttons extending down the back and long sleeves which came to a point over the wrists. The full skirt was fashioned with tiers of ruffled tulle. Her fingertip veil fell from a crown of pearls and her only jewelry consisted of tiny pearl earrings. She carried a bouquet of one large white orchid and stephanotis with white satin streamers over a white prayer book.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was Suzanne Humes of Minneapolis. The bridesmaids were Eileen Helgeland of Minneapolis, Janice Haugen also of Minneapolis, Mrs. Russell Lane of this city, all friends of the bride and Mrs. Ken Marquette of Tower, Minn., sister of the groom. Their identical dresses were of taffeta in twin tones of sunset and capucine styled with a drape over the shoulder to form a large bow in the back of the waist which extended into dress length streamers. Their shoes and gauntlets were in the same contrasting shades as the dress trim. The maid of honor carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses and yellow mums while the attendants carried bouquets of yellow mums with bronze and yellow pompons.

Serving as flower girl was Mary Louise Carlson, niece of the bride. Her street length dress was of white nylon and taffeta over net, styled identical to that of the attendants. She carried a basket of yellow roses, white pompons and fall leaves.

The groom was attended by Marvin Jorde of Minneapolis as bestman. Groomsmen were Glenn Soderberg of St. Louis Park, Jerry Kittleson of Rochester, Melford Olson of Baudette and Frank Marquette of Grand Forks. They all wore white dinner jackets and black trousers with yellow carnation boutonnieres.

The ring bearer was Kurt Carlson, nephew of the bride. He was dressed identically to the attendants and carried the rings on a white satin pillow.

Serving as ushers were Wallace Grovem of this city, cousin of the bride, and Jerry Mercil of St. Louis Park, friend of the groom. They also wore white dinner jackets with yellow carnation boutonnieres.

Mrs. Johnson, mother of the bride, chose a wedgewood blue knit suit with brown accessories for her daughter's wedding. The grooms mother wore a navy blue dress with white trim and navy blue and white accessories. Their identical corsages were of yellow roses, white carnations and bronze pompoms. The grandparents of the couple were also presented with corsages and boutonnieres and they were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carlson and Mrs. Bertha Johnson of this city, Mrs. Illy McDonald and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Olson of Baudette. It was also the bride's parents wedding anniversary.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given by the bride's parents in the church parlors. Approximately 300 guests were present. The bridal table was centered with a five tiered wedding cake topped with miniature wedding bells. Mrs. Melvin Carlson, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Robert Brooten, aunt of the groom, cut and served the cake. Mrs. William Reed and Mrs. George Van Rooy, cousins of the bride, poured. They were presented with corsages of yellow carnations.

In charge of the guest book was Mrs. Erling Olson of this city, friend of the bride. The gifts were arranged by Janice Aase of Minneapolis, Mrs. Dick Bergland of this city and Mrs. Frank Marquette of Grand Forks, all friends of the bride. The waitresses were Darlene Morkstrom, Mrs. Gary Thompson and Marlys Anderson, all of this city. The waitresses wore yellow net aprons with orange and brown leaves and brown ribbon. They also wore corsages of yellow carnations.

For their trip to Niagara Falls and Canada the bride chose a white wool sheath dress with bronze accessories. The couple will be at home at 104½ Roosevelt Ave. Endicott, New York.

Mrs. Teal is a 1956 graduate of Lincoln high school and was employed by the S & L company in this city. Mr. Teal is also a graduate of Lincoln high school and is presently attending IBM school in Endicott, New York.

Police Chief Warns Drivers of Ice, Snow

The threat of snow and icy streets recently was the occasion for some words of advice from Police Chief Elton Cummings about what he calls "the chain of control"—an important factor in safe winter driving.

"Most of the traffic accidents in this area during and after the snowfall were minor, property damage mishaps," the chief said, "but we should take these as a warning that more winter weather is on the way. Now is the time for drivers to realize that extraordinary attention and caution are required to keep their cars under control in bad weather."

Pointing out that a driver's inability to control his vehicle is a leading cause of wintertime accidents, the chief discussed the following "links" in the "chain of driver control:"

The first element in driver control is vision—the driver's ability to see. Ordinarily, this requires normal eyesight and attention, but in bad weather it also demands effective windshield wiper arms and blades and a good defrosting system.

The next link in the chain is the driver's judgement and coordination. When he sees a dangerous situation developing he prepares to slow down for it, steer around it, or come to a complete stop if that is necessary to prevent a naccident. Or it may be necessary for him to accelerate to escape danger.

The third link in the chain of driving control is the mechanical response of the vehicle itself. This normally can be depended upon, but periodic inspection of brakes and steering equipment is recommended. If there is too much play in the steering wheel, or if the brake pedal almost touches the floor before the brakes take hold, or if sudden braking throws the vehicle to the right or left, the driver cannot feel the confidence that comes with complete control, particularly on snow or ice.

The fourth, and probably most variable factor, is the grip or traction of the vehicle's tires upon the roadway. This factor is all-important, Chief Cummings emphasized, because without traction the driver can lose all control of his starting, steering or stopping.

Science has found a partial answer to the winter traction problem, as proved in hundreds of test runs conducted by the committee. Snow tires provided 28 per cent better performance on ice and 51 per cent improvement on snow. Reinforced tire chains, however, improved performance by 313 per cent on snow and 400 per cent on glare ice.

"Wise drivers take advantage of these helpful devices," said the chief. "But they also increase their caution and reduce their speed to obtain maximum control under adverse weather conditions."

Slot Machines Taken at Oslo Legion Club

Five slot machines and several punch boards were confiscated by the Marshall county sheriff's department at the Legion club in Oslo Saturday night where the annual fall carnival was being held, the Warren Sheaf reports.

Sheriff Oscar C. Erickson and Deputy Milan Sorenson had accompanied Jack Puterbaugh, Minnesota liquor control commissioner; Walter Perll, St. Paul, liquor control agent and George Anderson, Bagley, district agent for the commission, to Oslo. The state officials were in the county on a routine visit and stopped at the Oslo club while driving around the county.

The state agents had gone into the club. Noticing the slot machines and punch boards they went out to the car to give the information to the county officials who then went in and confiscated the machines and boards.

John Wang, commander of the post, and Arthur Eggan, manager of the club, appeared in justice court in Warren Tuesday and were bound over to district court for disposition of the case. They will be brought before Judge Paul A. Lundgren today.

Several Associated Press reports on the "raid" were in gross error with the information emanating from the state liquor control commissioner's office in an attempt to gain favorable publicity.

Jack Puterbaugh, state liquor control commissioner and source of the AP information, apparently gave the following report: "Slot machines were being played by persons of all ages—some as young as 10 and hardly big enough to reach the handle of the slot machines." County Attorney Warren Saetre called this statement "poppycock" in a statement to the Sheaf.

Farm Bureau Chief Hits Price Program Currently in Effect

Present farm surpluses largely are the result of government price programs that ignore the wants of consumers, the president of the American Farm Burea charged Tuesday in St. Paul.

"If farmers are to share in the current level of general prosperity, the first step is to produce the things people want," Charles B. Shuman told the annual convention dinner of the Minnesota Farm Bureau federation in St. Paul hotel.

Shuman also maintained government pricing and control in agriculture is a failure and threatens to replace individual farmer freedom with a "bureaucratic dictatorship."

"Farm programs must facilitate rather than restrict change if a good future is to be realized in farming," he added.

The Illinois farmer and leader of the nation's largest farm organization pointed out farm programs have generated two conflicting forces.

"While reduced acreage allotments have sparked such changes as increased fertilizer use, improved planting methods and better seed, the movement of acres to the most efficient areas has been restricted," he maintained.

"Government pricing and control programs that have fixed prices also have created incentives for unnatural changes and further muddled the situation," Shuman continued. "In some cases, these programs have priced products out of the market and have forced consumers to turn to substitutes."

In his annual president's address to the convention, James L. Morton, Hancock, said that farms are getting larger but that "doesn't necessarily mean the family-sized farm is on its way out."

He also hit at the new national commodity organization, saying that "agriculture is too small a minority to afford the division or expensive experiment of regrouping and realigning farmers to come up with a new crop of paid leadership to speak for farmers."

Returning to the family farm question, Morton said farmers are acquiring more land to make their units more efficient and to get full use of their equipment.

"There are less than half as many hired workers on farms today than in 1920," he pointed out. "More and more farmers are relying on their own families to run their farms."

Grimm Alfalfa 100 Years Old

The state of Minnesota and a major farm crop will be 100 years old in 1958. What would farmers in Pennington county or other counties do without a good legume crop and especially alfalfa? With the centennial celebration next year lets look at the history crop.

Grimm Alfalfa is one of Minnesota's main contributions to American agriculture, and its history is an interesting and significant story of a hardy forage plant that was brought to America 100 years ago by a German immigrant named Wendelin Grimm. Although millions of Europeans migrated to the United States in the course of the nineteenth century, Grimm stands out as an individual farmer who made an important specific contribution to American agriculture. He left his native Kulsheim, a little agricultural village between Tauberbischofsheim and Wertheim in the Tauber Valley of the duchy of Baden, Germany, in 1857. Since he was nearly forty years of age when he emigrated, he retained many of his old farming methods and interests. Like many other immigrants he brought with him some of his favorite possessions. Among them was a bag of alfalfa seed, weighing not more than twenty pounds, which was destined to become the basis of his important agricultural contribution. Grimm reached Chaska in Carver County about September 1, and there he bought 137 acres in the northwest quarter of section 4, range 21 west, Laketown Township.

In the spring of 1858, Grimm planted the seed he had brought with him in order that he might have a crop of alfalfa, and he did not have immediate success. Some of the alfalfa plants winter illed, but he carefully saved seed from those that survived and replanted the field Thus he continued year after year, trying to grow what he considered an essential crop. Some years his field winterkilled very little, but in others it died out almost entirely. Yet he always saved seed from the plants that survived and replanted the following spring. After years of persistence, the alfalfa became acclimatized and no longer winterkilled. The scientific importance of his work, Grimm probably never realized.

A near neighbor, Henry Gerdsen, is the authority for the story of an incident that must have made Grimm feel that his efforts in growing alfalfa in America were worth while. In the summer of 1863, Grimm drove a *number of fat cattle past Gerd*sen's home on the way to market. Gerdsen, surprised to see such fat animals when feed was scarce and his own cattle were lean, asked Grimm where he had obtained his corn. Grimm, long conscious of the feed value of alfalfa, proudly answered: "Kein Kornchen, nur ewiger Klee,"—"not one kernel, only everlasting clover."

Wendelin Grimm's alfalfa or "everlasting clover," as it was commonly called, grew and thrived year after year, but it received little early notice commercially. Grimm himself did nothing to bring his contribution to the attention of the agricultural world. Only the farmers in his neighborhood planted it and relied on it as a permanent source of fodder and of fertility for the soil. They obtained seed from Grimm and sowed fields for themselves. In this way alfalfa spread in Carver county, but it was raised largely within a radius of perhaps ten miles of the Grimm farm.

After the passage of the Enclosure Act in 1871, fences were erected and more attention was given to feed crops, and especially to alfalfa, in Carver County. In 1889 this county produced nearly fifty per cent of the alfalfa grown in Minnesota. Ten years later it was still the leading alfalfa center of the state, producing a third of the total crop. Prior to 1900, it was generally believed that the farmers of Minnesota could not grow permanent stands of alfalfa, and those few who knew that it was being grown in Carver County attributed its success to local soil conditions.

The first person to take an active interest in bringing Grimm's hardy alfalfa to the attention of the outside world was Arthur B. Lyman of Excelsior. Thru his efforts the alfalfa was increased on his own farm an dbrought to the attention of the Experiment Station University of Minn. *where Grimm's alfalfa was fur*ther increased and improved.

To pay homage and tribute to the German pioneer who developed Grimm alfalfa, a monument was unveiled and dedicated on June 10, 1924, on his old farm.

Speakers at the dedication services included Dean W. C. Coffey, of the college of agriculture of the University of Minnesota, who declared that he felt that Grimm's contribution to the livestock industry was as great as that of the breeders. George W. Kelley, editor of the Northwest Farmstead, gave his reaction to the occasion in the following editorial, and its text may well serve as a conclusion for the present discussion:

"The world knows not its greatest benefactors. Frequently it raises to eminence the demagogue and the time server. Fame it often gives to those responsible for its most disastrous calamities.

"Sometimes, though, it is given to a few to recognize and pay tribute to a patient man or woman who in obscurity and perhaps in poverty has worked out great benefits to humanity.

"Such an occasion was that—when eminent men from several states joined with hundreds of his former neighbors in dedicating a monument to the late Wendelin Grimm—

"Civilization advances. Such monuments indicate it. Perhaps some day our historians will tell more of the work of such men and glorify less the authors of death and devastation."

NOTICE

I am leaving for Texas on Dec. 1st and wish to advise all Policy Holders of the Consumers Mutual Insurance Company to write the company at Long Prairie regarding any business you wish to take up with them.

I plan on returning with the geese in the spring, and if I am not mellowed down too much by the Yellow Rose of Texas or frightened stiff by the Texas Longhorns, I intend to resume my feud with the local School Board, that is The Four Horsemen.

That article about the distribution of insurance between 11 agents and one company getting the full amount of insurance is a dilly.

Have never heard nor read where this board has given consideration to lower cost and better coverage.

"THEY'RE CATCHING ON, BUT THEY CAN'T CATCH UP." That's how lots of people feel about the "new 1958" cars that are trying to match the Dodge Swept-Wing look. These other cars have been lowered some, but still seem high and boxy by comparison. A few are "catching on" to fins, but they're years from "catching up." And the air suspension offered by some cars (at well over $100 extra) can't compare with the sway-free, dip-free ride of Dodge Torsion-Aire (standard equipment on all models). So on your way home from someone else's new car showing, stop in and compare it with Swept-Wing 58 by Dodge. You'll see what we mean.

ing cost of about nine cents per pound of butter. With normal operations this cost decreases as volume increases, and a creamery with a 1,500,000 pound annual volume should operate with a manufacturing cost down close to three cents a pound.

We need to sharpen our pencils, he urged, and make the changes the pencil tells us must be made.

Northwestern Minnesota is well suited for the dairy industry. The cost of producing milk in this area compares favorably with costs in southern Minnesota. Each area has its peculiar problems and these overall problems should be considered on an area rather than on a local basis, he stated.

Marian Augustine of Holt, chairman of Land O' Lakes District 17, presided. A welcome was extended by Don L. Olson, president of the Chamber of Commerce, to which Duane Torpin, operator at Wannaska, responded. Musical numbers included group singing led by Ben Zakaraison, accompanied by Harriet Lockrem; several songs by the Lions Quartet, and vocal selections, with accordion accompaniment, by Mrs. Max Jensen and Mrs. Jessie Miramontes.

A. S. Stenberg, District 17 Land O' Lakes director, reported that 1957 operations would compare favorably with 1956. He stated that certificates totaling $1,700,000 would be redeemed this year.

District 14 officers and operators were present, having participated in the afternoon business sessions.

St. Cloud Girls Is New 'Miss Bo Peep'

Named State Winner In Wool Garment Contest

Marcedes Eich of St. Cloud was crowned Minnesota's "Miss Bo Peep of the Golden Fleece" at the state finals of the Make-It-Yourself-With-Wool contest on November 18 at Dayton's Skyroom in Minneapolis. Named as her two attendants were the state junior division winner, Judith Ann Bergland of Scandia, and the state homemaker winner, Mrs. Robert Quist of Minneapolis. The crowning of "Miss Bo Peep, by Maynard Speece of WCCO radio climaxed the day's judging of 33 district contest winners.

Misses Eich and Bergland will fly to Phoenix, Arizona, courtesy of the F. W. Woolworth Company, in January to participate in the national style review. The top national winners receive a trip to the fashion capitols of the world via Pan American Airways. Mrs. Quist was the recipient of a Singer sewing machine presented by the Singer Company.

Others who placed high in the Minnesota contest were: Mrs Winsten Hamersby of Ortonville, 2nd place in the homemaker division; Mrs. Paul Lukens of Hibbing, 3rd place; Judith Tobolt of Moorhead, 2nd place in the junior division; Linda Rogers of Tracy, 3rd place; Carol Sander of Dodge Center, 2nd place winner in the senior division; Connie Pugsley of Elmore, 3rd place.

The Make-It-Yourself-With-Wool contest is sponsored by the Minnesota Farm Bureau and the Minnesota Wool Growers Association. This was the second year the contest has been held in the state and plans were made to begin working on the 1958 contest immediately after the first of the year. Girls and women, 14 years of age or older, are eligible to enter. Awards of fabric lengths wool garments and sewing equipment are given to winners at district and state levels. Contest headquarters is located in Wadena, Minn.

Columnist Robert S. Allen writes that it is now feasible to produce a weapon capable of destroying missiles flying thru outer space at speeds of 15,000 miles an hour and more. The cost of a missile-destroyer program would run into the billions.

A Tribute

To the memory of a good neighbor and friend Mrs. R. M. Johnson, who passed away Sept. 1st at the age of 87 years. She had lived in Kratka township since they homesteaded in 1904.

As a pioneer she was often called upon to trudge thru the snow by lantern light to aid an expectant mother and would remain a few days to help out. She was charitable to the poor.

She saw to it that her children were given an education in spite of the inconvenience in those times.

She became blind and spent her last 15 years in darkness but continued to spin and knit for a long while. Her memory lingers in the hearts of many relatives and friends.

Mrs. Hilda Wilson, a neighbor for 40 years. 1193p

Deer Kill at Mud Lake for 9 Years Reported

Herb Dill, manager of the Mud Lake Game Refuge, has released figures on the deer kill in the refuge during the open seasons from 1949 through 1957.

The kill this year, during the five-day season, was 139 deer taken in 1,133 hunter-days. This figure compares with 375 deer taken in three days and in 1,950 hunter-days last year. The percentage ratio this season was 12%, compared to 19% last season, and the 13% that carries through the eight seasons.

The smaller number of deer taken this year was attributed to poor hunting conditions which kept some hunters out of the field. Of the hunters who visited the refuge this year, 41 percent were from Marshall county, 17 percent from Polk, 17 percent from Pennington, and 8 percent from Hennepin county.

Following are the figures for the past nine years:

Year	Hunter-Days	Deer Taken	% Success
1949	2,807	421	15%
1950		Season Closed
1951	3,327	321	10%
1952	2,251	223	10%
1953	1,704	194	11%
1954	2,170	208	10%
1955	1,650	271	17%
1956	1,950	375	19%
1957	1,133	139	12%
Average annual take			289
Hunters			2,134
Percent Success			13%

Note: From 25 to 33 percent of the total refuge area has annually been opened to deer hunting with the exception of 1950 when the season was closed.

Kuriko Lake

Last week, Norm Holen, in his widely-read "Topics of the Times" column, questioned the propriety of considering such a name as 'Kuriko' lake as a replacement for the movie prosaic and undignified name of Mud lake. Referring, of course, to the idea being given circulation to changing the name of the Mud Lake Game Refuge.

Norm's objection was that the name 'Kuriko' refers to a patent medicine, a vitalizing tonic, no less. And that's a fact.

But the name 'Kuriko' lake does have some merit for being considered with regard to the Mud lake area, for there was a lake carrying that name that was included in the refuge acreage. This lake, together with one called 'Whisky' lake, is still discernible from the air.

The name of 'Kuriko', too, was very descriptive of this small lake, as was the name 'Whisky,' for in the early days the water, which seeped through the tamarac swamps to form these lakes, was the color of 'Kuriko.' And 'Kuriko', the patent medicine, was staple in the shacks of the pioneer homesteaders. What was more natural than for these early settlers to name the brown-water lake 'Kuriko'?

Most of these settlers, too, were Scandinavians, and the name 'Kuriko' rolls so smoothly off the tongue of a Swede, Norwegian, or Dane.

A Replacement

The High School Faculty bowling team, occupying the cellar position in the standings of the Tuesday night Business league, has dropped out of the circuit.

According to well-founded rumors, Dennis (Spanky) Sullivan is planning on organizing a team as a replacement for the Faculty club. The team, which will be sponsored by the Grain Belt, and managed and coached by Spanky, will have such reliable and high-average bowlers on its roster as Jesse and Wally DuChamp, Phil LeGault, Ed Broughton, and Jack Boyer. Spanky intends to be the team's reserve bowler.

Well, if Spanky can secure "letters of intent" from these bowlers, and if he does get the team into the league, the Grain Belt will surely finish higher than last in the Business league standings.

Quotes of Our Times

James Thurber, our favorite author and artist, has written a new book, just published, titled "Alarms and Diversions," in which he spoofs the literary talent of the New York advertising men.

"I have one or two suggestions," Thurber writes, "for the Madison Avenue illiterates in gray flannel suits. The first is a slogan for a brewery: 'We still brew good like used to could.' The second is an ad for some maker of pressurizing dusts: "Does he seldomly praise you any more? Those kind of husbands can be cured of grumps with Hush-Up. So give you and he a break. Put Hush-Up in his food. It dont' have no taste.'"

The Minnesota Story

Unless there are some revelations forthcoming within the next two or three weeks, the collapse of the Minnesota football team as a Big Ten contender will go into the year's annals as the "mystery of the year." No doubt about it.

Even considering the fact that the Gophers were over-rated this season, that fact shouldn't becloud the evidence that has been piling up and indicating that an unwholesome attitude has developed. The experts who studied the Gophers and examined the material, and then made their ratings, can't all be wrong. And their pre-season predictions were for a successful season.

Much of this downfall must be charged to the coaching staff, and their lack in controlling the mental attitude of the squad.

We have learned, on quite reliable authority, that Minnesota, at the time that they signed Murray Warmath to the head coaching job, could have had Charles (Bud) Wilkinson, the Oklahoma coach and former Minnesota player. In fact, Wilkinson made a trip to Minneapolis for the purpose of discussing the Minnesota proposal, but the Gopher authorities did not contact Wilkinson. It's a fact that Wilkinson would have made an excellent Minnesota head coach, for he would have used all the different factions into a cooperative unit. He would have had the unqualified support of the 'M' club, and this club is an influence for good in Minnesota athletics.

Rotarians Hear about State Lakes

Halverson Says They Will Disappear Eventually

Minnesota's ten thousand lakes will gradually disappear, Herb Halvorson, area conservationist with the Soil Conservation service, told Rotarians at their regular luncheon Monday noon.

The process is a slow one and will not be noticeable in any one generation, he said. Over a period of many centuries, however, the depressions which they occupy will be filled by the processes of vegetation and sedimentation.

Most of Minnesota's lakes were formed as the great glaciers receded, he explained, and at one time Lake Agassiz, covering the entire Red River valley, was larger than the present Great Lakes combined. At that time it drained to the south and into the Mississippi watershed, the glacier itself forming a barrier to the Hudson Bay watershed.

The Red Lakes and most of the smaller lakes remaining in the area, are the result of glacial deposits or ridges formed along the shores of the lake.

State Power Co-ops Sign with Utilities

The Co-operative Power Association, composed of 18 south central Minnesota rural electric co-operatives, Wednesday signed contracts with three power companies under which power from federal hydro-electric developments on the Missouri river will be delivered to the member co-operatives over lines of the power companies.

The federal Bureau of Reclamation, marketing agent for power produced by the federal government, will deliver the electricity allotted to members of the Co-operative Power Association (CPA) to three load centers. These centers are at Sioux Falls, S. D., Granite Falls, Minn., and Fargo, N. D. The three power companies will wheel (transport) the power from these centers to the several connections with the member co-operatives within the marketing area for Missouri river power.

The power companies have been providing the power requirements of the co-operatives and will continue to furnish all electricity needed in excess of the hydro-electric power received from the Bureau. The steam-electric generating capability of the power companies will provide the co-operatives the most dependable service possible and their large reserve capacities will assure the co-operatives adequate power to meet anticipated load growths.

Signing of the contracts between the co-operatives and the power companies culminates several years of close co-operation between the two under what has come to be known as the "Minnesota plan" for bringing Missouri power to the rural electric co-operatives of the state.

Under the terms of the contracts, CPA will pay a nominal fee to the power companies for use of their transmission lines in wheeling power to their member co-operatives and for the other services called for in the contract. Present estimates indicate that approximately 52,000 kilowatts of firm power will be wheeled to members of the CPA in 1958. Provision is also made for wheeling additional amounts when available from the Bureau.

Signing the contracts for CPA were Elmer Simon, Springfield, president, and Hugo Parson, Elbow Lake, secretary. Carl Hummel, Dubuque, Iowa, executive vice president of Interstate Power Company, signed the contract for his company, C. T. Bremicker, Minneapolis, vice president of Northern States Power Company, signed for NSP, and Arnold Mau, Fergus Falls, vice president of Otter Tail Power Company, signed for his company.

This is compared with the 1953 season when 932 fires burned a total of 49,400 acres: in 1954 there were 474 fires which burned 13,300 acres: 1955 there were 998 fires which burned 38,200 acres and 1956 when there were 871 fires which burned 23,850 acres.

State Bar Explains Assault and Battery

How many times have you heard the term "assault and battery" and wondered just what it meant? You may have committed it without knowing you did, the Minnesota State Bar association explains. There are even certain times when you can commit it legally, but there are also times when you could stick your neck out and get hurt in the pocket that holds your purse if you don't know what it is all about.

Do you know that you can commit assault without even touching a person? If you fire a gun in the direction of a crowd of people you may be guilty of assault on each person. You would be guilty of battery on anyone you hit. Minnesota law says an assault is an act other than the mere speaking of words which directly or indirectly is a cause of putting another person in apprehension of immediate harm; it's an attempt to commence a battery. Battery is the actual touching of another person for the purpose of inflicting injury, and is the consummation of an assault.

Did you know that there are various degrees of assault and battery with appropriate punishments?

In first degree assault and battery the intent to kill or commit a felony is essential and the punishment is imprisonment for not less than five or more than ten years! Second degree assault and battery is an assault with intent to greviously injure another with a weapon or by poison, or to assist in the commission of a crime. Third degree is anything not covered by degrees one and two, and is punishable by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than three months or by a fine of not more than $100.00.

Besides the criminal feature of assault and battery, one who commits an assault is liable to the victim for damages which sometimes can be a considerable sum of money according to the Minnesota State Bar association. A money judgment in a civil action for assault, or assault and battery, is usually based on willful conduct on the part of the person doing the assaulting and the obligation to pay damages is not dischargeable in bankruptcy.

And when is assault and battery legal? Minnesota law says it is lawful to use force and violence upon the person of another when it is used by a public officer or a person assisting him in the arrest of someone who has committed a felony, or when used by a person to defend himself against another who is about to injure him or commit a trespass on his property.

It is also lawful when used by a parent, a guardian, or a teacher in the exercise of lawful authority to restrain or correct his child, ward, apprentice or scholar. It is lawful when used by a carrier of passengers to assist them in expelling from a railway car, vessel or other vehicle a passenger who refuses to obey a lawful or reasonable regulation of conduct.

But enough about assault and battery that is legal. The thing to think about the next time you are angry enough to threaten to injure your fellow man is that the reasonableness of the assault and the degree of force used is scrutinized carefully by the law. One cannot use more force than is necessary to protect himself or his property, or a slight provocation as an excuse to inflict grevious bodily harm on someone he doesn't like.

And in case someone threatens you, though the law does not require you to retreat in case of an assault upon you with a threat of bodily harm, don't get the idea that you can just stand still and take your beating like a man, and collect a flock of damages. Many civil actions for damages have been determined in favor of the defendant because the jury thought that the plaintiff could easily have retreated and avoided the difficulty. Although it wouldn't make a good television program for a man to retreat to protect himself, it is generally considered good judgment by the law.

Editorials . . .

"There are two kinds of discontent in this world; the discontent that works, and the discontent that wrings its hands. The first gets what it wants, and the second loses what it has. There's no cure for the first but success; and there's no cure at all for the second."
—Gordon Graham

One Year Later

It was a year ago that the Suez canal issue was at its most explosive stage. The United Nations task force was getting ready to move in to restore order. That it was a successful mission is proven by the fact that the emergency troops are still there and that peace prevails along the armistice line which they were directed to guard.

This police action will have cost an estimated $80 million by the end of December. This is an obligation of the United Nations and presumably the cost was to be distributed among all its members. So far however only about $12 million have been contributed. Our government has offered to toss in an extra $12 million to get the bills up to date. After the first of the year the whole problem will have to be acted upon again.

As might be expected, the Soviet bloc of nations has contributed nothing to the cost of this police action as yet and is not likely to. Russia probably will oppose its continuation. Such interference in the trouble spots has not been helpful to the plans for world revolution.

Under the circumstances maybe this is one unfair item of extra cost for us that we should be happy to pay. Some of our spending has been for far less justifiable causes.

Farm Marketing Trend

In our community the government's grain storage tanks are empty, and hereabouts we know why. But generally thruout the country the storage problem is more serious than ever. In spite of increases in acreage taken out of production and the unloading through the government's give-away programs, the surpluses are getting bigger again.

Corn seems to be the big headache this year. The crop exceeds expectations. Support prices were boosted to discourage overproduction of pork but government officials now are worried about what to do with all the corn. By solving one problem they create ten more.

Under the circumstances it isn't strange that the demand for a gradual withdrawal by the government from all agricultural control activities is strengthening. Most farm products now are sold in a free market, without price subsidy or production control. The headache crops are the so-called basics, corn, cotton, rice, tobacco, peanuts and wheat, which have received special consideration by the government. There is a growing feeling that they are still the most troublesome largely because of government tinkering.

The trend to production and marketing controls by the producers themselves, through commodity group organizations, is the most encouraging development in the farm picture today. An example of this trend, close to home, is the organization of the Red River Valley potato growers.

Through this organization the potato groowers of a large section of Minnesota and North Dakota control the marketing of all potatoes grown in the area. In cooperation with similar groups in other potato-producing parts of the country they will be able to do much to help themselves to a more stable market.

How It Works

Major railroads are asking for additional freight rate increases to offset increased labor costs going into effect this month under the escalator provisions of the pay schedules. These provide for automatic pay adjustmuents to compensate for changes in the cost of living. Many private and public pay schedules now provide for cost-of-living adjustments.

The escalator clause in pay schedules was advocated originally as a stabilizing influence in our economy. Experience proves that it has not served such a purpose. On the contrary it has added to the instability of the economic balance. In a inflationary period it serves as an added inflationary factor, as the present request of the railroads for rate increases proves.

As the law forces upon the railroads additional costs, rate increases probably can be justified. And freight rate increases add further to the cost of living, which in time will bring about more wage increases. It is a good example of the inflation bubble being further inflated by law.

After a few more turns of the inflation spiral, when the folly of inflation becomes so generally recognized that even the politicians become concerned, the escalator clause will be outlawed, with the hearty approval of organized labor.

Better Than Scholarships

It is encouraging to know that educators are rediscovering the fact that attending school and acquiring an education are not one and the same. There is reason to hope that a coounter-revolution is in the making and that from the foolish extremes of "progressive" education we will return to the realistic approach, requiring that diplomas be earned and not merely presented as awards for attending classes. For this, our thanks to Sputnik.

As was to be expected, there now are many suggestions for making our schools more effective by spending more money. Most of them point up the need for federal aid, and many suggest liberal scholarships for students who will volunteer for courses that require application and study.

This problem of paying the costs of education came in for considerable discussion at a recent Canadian university conference in Ottawa, according to the Canadian Financial Post. Reference was made to what some of our American colleges are now doing to make a good education available for deserving students.

It was pointed out that:

> "Harvard will lend a student up to $1,800 at 3% interest, repayment at $10 a month after graduation. Harvard Business School will lend $2,500 at 4½%, repayable in six and a half years. Massachusetts Institute of Technology lends up to $1,400, charges only 1% and asks for $50 semi-annually.
> "Students using these schemes go voluntarily into debt. The interesting point is that, according to the experience of three institutions mentioned, they pay up on time and almost unanimously."

Enlarging on this record the Post raises the question as to whether students should be encouraged by loans rather than scholarships. It urgues properly that:

> "Those who attend a university enjoy an advantage, largely at public expense, which is likely to add $50,000 to $100,000 to their life-time incomes. Some alumni discharge their debt generously by gifts. Would it not be perfectly just to apply the "travel now, pay later" principle to all of them?"

A liberal loan program for deserving students seems far more preferable than scholarships.

Columbia Pictures' zany "Operation Mad Ball," hilarious G.I. story filmed entirely off limits, opens Sunday for 3 days at the Falls Theatre. Stars are Jack Lemmon, who garnered an Academy Award for his Ensign Pulver role in "Mr. Roberts"; television's highly original and imaginative comedian, Ernie Kovacs, in his motion picture debut; Kathryn Grant, Arthur O'Connell, Rosalind Russell's reluctant lover in "Picnic"; and the irrepressible Mickey Rooney.

"Operation Mad Ball is set in France, shortly after the war's end. It's the story of an attempt by Lemmon, and his GI cohorts to promote a big wingding with the Army nurses before they are separated.

Parade in St. Paul Thanksgiving Day

Giant Balloons to Depict Christmas Characters

A mile-long preview of the Christmas season, highlighted by the appearance of 21 huge story-book balloons, will delight thousands of Northwest youngsters in St. Paul's downtown area Thanksgiving Day morning.

The colorful balloon characters, some of them 20 feet high and up to 100 feet long, will be interspersed with a dozen musical units, clowns, marching groups, and majestic floats. Santa Claus will climax festivities by making his first official bow of the season in a sparkling sleigh.

St. Nicholas also will be represented by a giant inflated balloon. Other balloon characters in the 10 a.m. parade include a Christmas stocking, toy soldier, candy canes, clowns, cowboys, two-headed cat, hobby horse, gorilla in a circus wagon, a friendly lion and tamer, Ferdinand the Bull, a bulky rhinoceros and even bulkier Hippopotamus, and a laughing snake—100 feet long—accompanied by a snake charmer.

Many of the balloons took six months to make. They are identical to those featured in the annual New York and Detroit Thanksgiving Day parades.

The St. Paul parade will start in the Capitol Approach and move for an hour through downtown streets.

Accidental Gun Discharge Kills Bagley Youth, 15

A 15-year-old Bagley high school sophomore was killed Sunday near his rural Bagley home when his gun discharged accidentally.

Victim was Leonard Mathison, who apparently had placed the gun in the limb of a tree. The gun discharged while he was holding the barrel.

The shot struck him in the chest.

The youth's father, Leonard Mathison, who was nearby, heard the shot and heard his son call out. The boy died almost instantly, however.

STOP FREEZING HERE'S HEAT YOU CAN TAKE ANYWHERE

The small Knipco heater at the top puts out enough heat to warm a 5-room house, but you can pick it up and carry it anywhere. It weighs only 42 pounds. Just fill the tank with kerosene, plug it into any electrical outlet and you have a steady stream of warm air to "spot heat" any outside working area or to warm the inside of a shed. The larger model puts out twice as much heat; is easily portable on its own wheels. Drop in for a demonstration.

C. GUSTAFSON & SON, INC.
"SERVICE SINCE 1911"

He's working for all of us...

The telephone man, the operator, the business office clerk are mighty busy people these days. They're working hard to give Thief River Falls more and better telephone service needed to keep up with this busy community.

Every day we handle some 17,500 local and long distance calls, custom made for Thief River Falls telephone users. Maintaining and adding to our present telephone equipment, and planning ahead to meet future requirements is a big job. It keeps us busy 24 hours a day — every day in the year — and makes us one of the busiest industries in town.

As a public servant, this company provides more than 2600 customers with telephone service vital to the social and business life of Thief River Falls.

As an employer, the telephone company is one of the city's largest. This year, Thief River Falls' telephone workers will earn about $215,000 which will buy a lot of groceries, clothing and other goods and services from businessmen here.

Total tax payments for Minnesota will exceed $25 million in 1957, an average of $2.42 per month for each Minnesota telephone we serve.

As citizens, telephone men and women and their families support the activities of public agencies, churches, social and civic groups, all working for the general good of Thief River Falls.

God must speak to men. Despite the barriers of language and dialect which separate nation from nation, tribe from tribe—God must speak to men!

This conviction has long inspired the American Bible Society in its stupendous task . . . to translate God's word into every tongue . . . to place the Bible in every hand.

Now in 1,100 tongues God has spoken to men through inspired Scripture. In marble cathedrals and mud huts the same timeless truths are read, heard, taught and discussed in the words men know. And millions of Bibles, Testaments, and portions of Scripture are being placed in eager hands.

This is our triumph . . . and our continuing challenge . . . the countless Christians who, individually and through our churches, make possible the work of the American Bible Society. Thank God! Carry on!

Food for thought — Butter was not as solid as we think of it today. It was kept in an oil jar. It's oily content was soothing to the body after the harsh soaps of the day.

Peddlers with vitamin "bargains"
Door-to-door salesmen, some quite respectable, are peddling vitamin preparations and offering a "bargain." They show you capsules with an impressive list of ingredients, then tell you they cost less than the established brands we carry. But it's like buying a pound of pennies or a pound of dimes. Wouldn't you pay a little more for the pound of dimes? Same with vitamins. It's the potency that counts. Potency is the only true measure. We'll be glad to prove this to you next time you stop in.

12 Nominated for Six Places on C. C. Board

Dr. Gordon Sprag[illegible] Economist, Speaks at Chamber Meeti[illegible]

At the November meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Thursday evening in the [illegible] club rooms, Gordon Ballingrud, chairman of the nominating committee, submitted a slate of 12 candidates for six places on the board of directors to be filled in the annual election. No further nominations were made from the floor.

Ballots are being mailed out to members early this week, and results of the election will be announced at a noon meeting Thursday, December 5.

Nominees include Cliff Rudge, Morris Howick, Randall Noper, James Parkins, John Peterson, Sig Qilam, Olaf Solheim, Arthur Stordahl, Dr. D. M. Travnicek, Wally Tunberg, Andy Williamson and Clifford Zaffke.

At the opening of the meeting, President Don L. Olson introduced Gordon Dow, president of the Dow Key co. of Warren, who is shortly moving his enterprise to Thief River Falls.

The Rev. Otto Dale, chairman of the Community Chest fund drive, announced that the campaign will open today in the business and industrial divisions. The quota, he said, has been set at $12,500, and he expressed the belief that, with the cooperation of all concerned, the campaign could be completed by December 7.

Guest speaker at the meeting was Dr. Gordon Sprague, economist with Land O' Lakes Creameries in Minneapolis. He stated that U. S. population is increasing at a rate of 1.7 per a year, but he expressed doubt that the nation would use up its farm food surplus in our lifetime. He cited the steadily rising trend in output per cow, and said that per capita consumption is not likely to increase.

Dr. Sprague said there apparently is a growing feeling that a food surplus is an asset rather than a liability. He ended his talk on the hopeful note that the farm problem would eventually be solved.

Police Chief Elton Cummings asked businessmen to keep their cars off the downtown streets during the busy holiday season, and also warned them to be on guard against shoplifters and bad check passers.

President Olson read a letter from Supt. Irwin Mickelson thanking the chamber and Secretary J. M. Roche for their cooperation in connection with the recent teachers and student council conventions, and also for staging Business-Education Day.

Roche announced that the Christmas street decorations should be in place by Thanksgiving Day, and that Santa Claus would make his first pre-holiday visit to the city Friday and Saturday, December 6 and 7.

Group Defers Action on Request of County Centennial Committee

Guest speaker at a dinner meeting of the Junior Chamber of Comerce Thursday evening in the Legion club rooms was Dr. Schwartz of Hibbing, national director of the Junior Chamber. He discussed methods of stimulating interest of Jaycee members in their various projects.

Dr. Joseph Norquist told of plans for enlarging the nativity scene to be set up during the Christmas season on the postoffice property. Charles Ferguson reported that 15 entries in the local Voice of Democracy contest will be judged by a high school faculty committee.

John McGinley told of the request of the Pennington county centennial committee that the date of the 1958 Jaycee water carnival be set for the first week-end in August to coincide with the local centennial observance. Action on the request was deferred.

Postmaster Asks for Early Mailing

Christmas Only a Month Away, Public Is Reminded

With Christmas only a month away, Postmaster R. J. Dryden today announced his 1957 "Mail Early for Christmas" campaign.

The postmaster suggested that now is the time to take the following steps: Check your Christmas card lists very carefully—make sure that each address includes the full name, street and number, city, zone and state.

He said also it is a good idea to stock up on heavy wrapping paper, sturdy corrugated cartons, strong cord and paper adhesive tape.

The postmaster said several pamphlets on Christmas mailing are available at the post office.

Dryden advised getting all out-of-town cards and gifts into the post office before Dec. 10 and those for nearby points by Dec. 15.

Electric Power Cutoffs Slated

More Interruptions Are Due During Changeover

Morris Owen, chief engineer at the municipal power plant, stated this morning that during the switchover to bureau power, in progress this week, there will be intermittent cutoffs in power for periods of up to one-half hour.

He said it is impossible at this time to announce just when the interruptions will occur, but that advance warning will be given over Radio Station KTRF whenever possible.

The affected area, as was the case Sunday afternoon, includes all of the east side of the river, and south of the Great Northern tracks on the west side.

Dental Problems Are Topic at Conference Thursday Afternoon

The dental health conference held in Thief River Falls Thursday pointed out various things people can do for themselves to promote better dental health. In attendance were seventy people who heard Dr. Wm. Jordan, chief of the section of dental health and Dr. John Snyder, assistant chief, explain the many dental problems, and what everyone can do to relieve them and the place of the family dentist in the dental health program.

Dental decay was pointed out as the most serious problem in children whereas dental problems in adults stem from periodontal disorders. There are diseases which affect the supporting tissues of the teeth.

Balanced diets, with proper proportions of milk, meat, fruits and vegetables help in establishing and maintaining good dental health. Sweets, candy, soft drinks, and high carbohydrate diets without brushing of teeth immediately after use of such food leads to tooth decay and problems with teeth supporting tissues.

School children were encouraged to avail themselves of balanced meals at home or in school rather than have snacks.

A periodic visit to the family dentist is essential to prevent serious dental and periodontal disorders, it was pointed out.

Improper mouth hygiene, which included improper tooth brushing, will cause dental health problems and Dr. Snyder presented a demonstration on proper brushing of teeth. Injury to the gums is frequently caused by improper tooth brushing or tooth picks and periodontal diseases may follow injury. Tobacco, alcohol, nervous tension and other physical disorders lead to dental health problems, he said.

Both Dr. Jordan and Dr. Snyder emphasized that early diagnosis of dental health problems and corrective measures as recommended by the family dentist are imperative in preventing possible extraction of teeth. There are limitations on how much service a dentist can provide to an individual, but by proper understanding of dental health we can do a great deal for ourselves in preventing dental health problems. With proper preventive and control practices an individual may greatly reduce the cost of dental care and have few, if any, dental health problems.

The conference was presented by the Pennington homemakers group, the extension service and sponsored by the Minnesota State Dental association with the cooperation of the Minnesota department of health and the school of dentistry, University of Minnesota.

Co. Engineers Hear of Road Fund Division

Highway Officials Explain New Road Money Allocation

State highway department officials met here Friday with representatives of the engineers offices of eleven northwestern Minnesota counties for the purpose of explaining the rules and regulations under which the new state aid plan would be administered.

Under the provisions of the new law, authorized by constitutional amendment, payments to counties will be substantially increased and direct aids will be granted to cities of more than 5,000 population.

Meeting with county and district department engineers at the Rex Cafe were Mack Evans, state aid engineer, and his assistant, Kenneth Mason. At the court house Herb Schultz, accountant for the state aid division, met with auditors and clerks to clarify procedure and explain necessary accounting changes under the new program.

Mr. Evans told a Times reporter that an estimated net total of $7,300,000 would be available for distribution to cities of more than 5,000 population during the calander year 1958. One-half of this would be distributed on a per capita basis and this half would be $2.38. The share of the other half would vary among cities based on other factors.

At the rate of $4.50 per capita, using the figures of the 1950 census, Thief River Falls will receive some over $30,000 in direct aid next year. These funds will have to be used for the maintenance or improvement of certain designated streets.

Houske Cites Regulations as to Soil Bank

Explains Rules for Eligibility to Get Reserve Payments

Farmers with land in the Conservation Reserve, as well as those who are planning to place land in the 1958 program, the signup for which is now underway, should take note of the old and new regulations in order to avoid violation of their contracts and possible loss of payment, Oscar Houske, chairman of the Pennington county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee, stated today.

Houske pointed out several basic regulations that a farmer must abide by in order to be eligible for payment under his conservation reserve contract. Among them are: No harvesting of acreage in excess of "permitted acreage", which is the soil bank base less the land put in the reserve programs; no harvesting or grazing of the land placed on the conservation reserve except under emergency conditions; no unauthorized use of water stored on the conservation; failure to prevent spread of noxious weeds; failure to establish vegetative cover or other practices agreed to be carried out.

Houske said that breaking out non-cropland or new cropland is also a violation of the conservation contract: If, at any time during the contract period, land on the farm which was not classified as cropland at the time the contract was entered into is broken out without approval of the county committee as a food farming practice, the opening up is considered a violation that could result in loss of payment.

Where such a practice is approved by the county committee, the identical acreage or an equal acreage of cropland on the farm (excluding the "reserved" acreage) must be restored to permanent vegetation cover.

Farmers are advised by Chairman Houske, to call at the County ASC Office for full information on these regulations, including the few exceptions to them.

Ninth Grade Dental Survey Reveals Some Betterment in Care

The ninth grade dental survey, just completed, allows some improvement over past years. At the time of the survey one-third of the class had no dental work to do. Seventy of the 210 students examined had their teeth in good repair, Mrs. Margaret Race, school nurse, reported.

During the 9th grade dental program, the entire class was sent to the offices of the eight local dentists for a check-up of their teeth. These examination revealed the following:

Teeth in good repair, 70 students; 1 to 3 cavities, 53; 4 or 5, 28; 6 to 10, 32; 11 to 15, 19; more than 15, 8.

Though the number of students having their teeth in good repair increased, the survey indicates that many are not taking care of their teeth. Dental health education has not done a good job of reaching the public. Two-thirds of the students in this one grade have a big job ahead, said Mrs. Race.

The school health council urges all parents to encourage annual and semi-annual dental care for their children. At this time, special emphasis is placed on 9th grade students—there are still 140 students in this one class needing immediate dental care. All schools allow release time for dental work, in cooperation with this program.

Thanksgiving Day to Be Duly Noted

Business Area Chest Drive Is Opened Today

Residential and Rural Campaigns to Start Next Monday

The 1957 Community Chest drive was kicked off in Thief River Falls today, with solicitations beginning in the business and industrial areas this morning.

Packets were distributed to solicitors of the areas Saturday and all persons in the areas affected by these initial stages of the drive are urged to be ready for the solicitors and give generously so that the campaign in the business and industrial areas can be completed by Saturday.

Orin Green and George Kildahl are co-chairmen of the business district drive, and M. C. Gulbranson is chairman of the industrial campaign. Both drives are scheduled for completion Saturday.

Solicitations in the residential section of the city, rural Pennington county and city governmental offices are due to get under way next Monday, and are to be completed the following Saturday.

Adverse circumstances caused the 1957 Community Chest drive to have a much later start than in previous years so that time alloted the drive has had to be curtailed in order to prevent conflict with the Christmas shopping season here.

This, and the fact that the Chest goal has been raised to $12,500 for this year, brought forth an appeal from Rev. Otto Dale, county drive chairman, that everyone make every effort to give as generously as possible in the time the drive is in progress.

A list of the agencies benefiting from the Community Chest was published in last Thursday's Times.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was attired in a ballerina length gown of white satin, featuring a v-shaped neckline with tiny buttons extending down the back and long sleeves which came to a point over the wrists. Her fingertip veil was held in place by a crown of small white flowers. She carried a colonial bouquet of white mums and pink roses. Her only jewelry was a single strand pearl necklace, a gift from the groom.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was Miss JoAnn Holton, sister of the groom, and she wore a ballerina length formal of pastel blue. To complement her attire she wore a small white hat trimmed with white sequins and elbow length gloves. She carried a bouquet of yellow and white mums.

The groom was attended by Donald Buley, brother of the bride, as bestman. Gene Sistad and Jay Garthus served as the ushers.

Mrs. Buley, mother of the bride, chose a light blue dress with white accessories for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Rue, mother of the groom, wore a medium blue dress with rose accessories. Their identical corsages were of white mums and pink carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was given by the bride's parents in the church parlors. The bridal table was centered with a three tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. Mrs. Roy Olson, aunt of the bride, cut and served the cake. Mrs. Benard Olson, also an aunt of the bride, poured. The waitresses were Corrine Olson, Mrs. Elmer Olson and Mavis Braleng.

So many gay matching costumes were on hand, that the prize was presented by Dale Folget, president, to the caller Bob Figenshaw of East Grand Forks, instead. Bob accepted the prize a bit dubiously and rightfully so, since it turned out to be a nondescript pair of slippers.

Public Employes Ten Pct. of Total

139,929 Minnesotans Are Working for Government

More than 10% of the people gainfully employed in Minnesota in 1956 worked for some branch of the government, Harold L. Henderson, research director of the Minnesota Taxpayers association, said today. The census bureau reported 139,929 persons employed in government in Minnesota, he said, and the state division of employment reported a total of 1,330,400 persons employed in the state.

Nationwide, the number of public employeest increased from 6,001,000 in October 1946 to 7,685,000 in October 1956, about 28 percent while governmental payrolls increased from $1,195,500,000 to $2,509,400,000 or 117 percent during the same period, Mr. Henderson said.

"Federal civilian employment was actually less in 1956 than it was in 1946," Mr. Henderson said, "but Federal civilian payrolls increased from $571.5 million to $943.7 million for the month of October of these years.

"The big increase was in state and local governmental employment where the number of employees jumped from 3,567,000 in October 1946 to 5,275,000 in October 1956 or about 50 percent. During this same period state and local governmental payrolls increased from $584 million to $1,565.7 million, an increase of more than 168 percent.

"School district employment in the nation was 934,000 in October 1946 and 1,531,000 in October 1956, or about 64 percent up. During this period school district payrolls jumped from $166.4 million to $503.2 million, or more than 300 percent."

Freeman Returns from Orient Trip

Finds Limitless Market for Minnesota Products

A tired Gov. Orville Freeman returned from the orient Friday with gifts for his office workers and word that the Minnesota trade delegation had found "almost limitless markets for the products of Minnesota farms and factories."

"The orient's millions of people need food," Freeman told a news conference, "and Minnesota's great harvests of flax, wheat, corn and soybeans will find increasingly expanding markets if we get the produce there efficiently and cheaply."

Returning with the governor by plane were Mrs. Freeman and five other members of the delegation which spent 19 days touring the orient. The group visited Japan, Formosa, Korea, Hong Kong and the Phillippines.

Freeman said he was tired but "feeling fine."

"Everywhere the delegation traveled," Freeman said, "people were interested in the story of the St. Lawrence seaway and what it can mean in opening up the great Upper Midwest to worldwide trade through the port of Duluth."

Sputnik and Little Rock, Freeman said, were serious setbacks to American prestige in the orient.

Shirley A. Buley and Bruce Holton Wed Recently

Shirley Ann Buley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Buley of Roseau and Bruce Harris Holton of Grygla, were united in marriage Saturday, October 26 at the Moe Lutheran church in Roseau. Rev. A. C. Rykken performed the double ring ceremony before an altar graced with baskets of yellow and white mums.

Mrs. Rykken presided at the organ for the traditional nuptial music and also accompanied Thorolf Malby as he sang "The Wedding Prayer" and "O Perfect Love."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a ballerina length gown of white satin, featuring a v-shaped neckline with tiny buttons extending down the back and long sleeves which came to a point over the wrists. Her fingertip veil was held in place by a crown of small white flowers. She carried a colonial bouquet of white mums and pink roses. Her only jewelry was a single strand pearl necklace, a gift from the groom.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was Miss JoAnn Holton, sister of the groom, and she wore a ballerina length formal of pastel blue. To complement her attire she wore a small white hat trimmed with white sequins and elbow length gloves. She carried a bouquet of yellow and white mums.

The groom was attended by Donald Buley, brother of the bride, as bestman. Gene Sistad and Jay Garthus served as the ushers.

Mrs. Buley, mother of the bride, chose a light blue dress with white accessories for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Rue, mother of the groom, wore a medium blue dress with rose accessories. Their identical corsages were of white mums and pink carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was given by the bride's parents in the church parlors. The bridal table was centered with a three tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. Mrs. Roy Olson, aunt of the bride, cut and served the cake. Mrs. Benard Olson, also an aunt of the bride, poured. The waitresses were Corrine Olson, Mrs. Elmer Olson and Maya Brateng.

Kay Olson, cousin of the bride, registered the guests and the gifts were arranged by Carol Olson, also a cousin of the bride.

Out of town guests were Mrs. Carl Rue, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Talbert, Mr. and Mrs. T. Trontvedt, Tom Steenerson, Tommy Trontvedt, Stienar Aakre, Eddie Moe, Alec Moe, Duane Linn, all of Grygla, E. J. Holton of Long Beach, Calif., Mr. and Mrs. Lyndon Berge of Halstad, Mr. and Mrs. Reinier Trontvedt and family of Shelly, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Tvelt of Warroad, Miss Betty Dale of this city, Gene Sistad of Fosston, and Jay Garthus of Holt.

Mr. and Mrs. Holton will leave shortly for Long Beach, Calif. where they will make their home. Mr. Holton will be employed with his father by the Foreign Car Imports Inc.

"Falls Squares" Meets Saturday November 23

Saturday evening's square dance held by the "Falls Squares" was well attended, and especially colorful. Feature of the evening was a prize to be given the couple outfitted in the most interesting square dance attire. So many gay matching costumes were on hand, that the prize was presented by Dale Folger, president, to the caller Bob Figenshaw of East Grand Forks, instead. Bob accepted the prize a bit dubiously and rightfully so, since it turned out to be a nondescript pair of slippers.

New members were introduced to the fun of square dancing, and the evening of squares, mixers and couple dances climaxed by the serving of coffee at 11:30 p.m. The next meeting will be held at Northrop gym Saturday, December 7.

139,929 Minnesotans Are Working for Government

More than 10% of the people gainfully employed in Minnesota in 1956 worked for some branch of the government, Harold L. Henderson, research director of the Minnesota Taxpayers association, said today. The census bureau reported 130,929 persons employed in government in Minnesota, he said, and the state division of employment reported a total of 1,330,400 persons employed in the state.

Nationwide, the number of public employees increased from 6,001,000 in October 1946, to 7,685,000 in October 1956, about 28 percent while governmental payrolls increased from $1,155,500,000 to $2,500,400,000 or 117 percent during the same period," Mr. Henderson said.

"Federal civilian employment was actually less in 1956 than it was in 1946," Mr. Henderson said, "but Federal civilian payrolls increased from $571.5 million to $943.7 million for the month of October of these years.

"The big increase was in state and local governmental employment where the number of employees jumped from 3,567,000 in October 1946 to 5,275,000 in October 1956 or about 50 percent. During this same period state and local governmental payrolls increased from $584 million to $1,565.7 million, an increase of more than 168 percent.

"School district employment in the nation was 934,000 in October 1946 and 1,531,000 in October 1956, or about 64 percent up. During this period school district payrolls jumped from $166.4 million to $503.2 million, or more than 300 percent."

Freeman Returns from Orient Trip

Finds Limitless Market for Minnesota Products

A tired Gov. Orville Freeman returned from the orient Friday with gifts for his office workers and word that the Minnesota trade delegation had found "almost limitless markets for the products of Minnesota farms and factories."

"The orient's millions of people need food," Freeman told a news conference, "and Minnesota's great harvests of flax, wheat, corn and soybeans will find increasingly expanding markets if we get the produce there efficiently and cheaply."

Returning with the governor by plane were Mrs. Freeman and five other members of the delegation which spent 19 days touring the orient. The group visited Japan, Formosa, Korea, Hong Kong and the Philippines.

Freeman said he was tired but "feeling fine."

"Everywhere the delegation traveled," Freeman said, "people were interested in the story of the St. Lawrence seaway and what it can mean in opening up the great Upper Midwest to worldwide trade through the port of Duluth."

Sputnik and Little Rock, Freeman said, were serious setbacks to American prestige in the orient.

Motorists Hit Parked Car and Light Standard

A. F. Burke Car Damaged to Extent of $200 While Parked on Main av. N.

Little activity was reported by local police concerning traffic accidents in the city, although over $350 damage was caused by the two mishaps recorded since Thursday.

A hit-and-run driver hit a car belonging to Mrs. A. F. Burke as it was parked at 1018 Main av. N. about 6:45 Thursday, causing about $200 to the Burke car and unknown damage to a car belonging to Florian Pokryzwinski, who reported hitting the Burke car to police Friday.

Another accident reported by a citizen who was not involved was the one in which a local juvenile demolished a city light post on E. 3rd st. about 10:30 p.m. Thursday.

Mrs. Larry Larson called to say the boy driving a 1946 Ford had demolished the post. Damage to the car was about $150, no injuries were suffered by the boy.

Sunday Mrs. Emmet Israelson, 311 Horace av. N. reported someone in a car had caused considerable damage to a fence on the south side of the Israelson residence with an automobile the previous night. Police are checking the damage caused there.

Plastic Surgery Can Accomplish Wonders

Reconstructive plastic surgery can correct the hairlip of an infant child or remove birthmarks, moles, warts, and other congenital birth marks. A scalpel in the hands of a skilled plastic surgeon can reconstruct scar areas left in the aftermath of a severe burn, a mutilating injury, or erase defects from surgery on exposed areas of the body.

Cosmetic surgery is the branch of plastic surgery which has as its aim the restoration or improvement upon normal but unattractive physical features.

Miracles of modern plastic surgery have made possible restoration and improvement of body features from the top of the head to the soles of the feet.

Two world wars, the Korean conflict, casualties of rapid transportation and the pace of the age of mechanization have all forced the hand of this specialized field of general surgery within the past 25 years.

Advisability of plastic surgery should be discussed only with the family physician, or a qualified plastic surgeon. Unskilled specialists and beauty doctors are to be avoided warns the Minnesota State Medical Association. Results from treatment by unqualified persons have many times precipitated in malformations worse than the original condition.

The plastic surgeon, unlike the beauty quack, will thoroughly counsel his patient regarding the advisability of corrective measures in relationship to other positive physical features. He will inform his patient regarding the extensive steps often required in plastic surgery — often a series of operations spaced over a period of several years. He will frankly inform the patient that in spite of the many wonders of modern plastic surgery the specialist can do no more than improve on existing features. He will determine whether the patient's requests for reconstructive surgery are legitimate or the expression of a neurotic condition.

Skillful plastic surgery, prescribed and administered, has done much to restore self confidence and happiness to persons suffering from deformity by man or nature, concludes the Minnesota State Medical association.

If your plastic surgeon advises against corrective measures remember what big eyes did for Eddie Cantor; big ears for Bing Crosby; a big nose for Jimmy Durante and a big mouth for Joe E. Brown.

BOY INTO MAN

By Fran Pachter

The inevitable dreaded day was upon her. No longer could she fool herself by putting it out of her mind. It wasn't unexpected, just dreaded and feared; her son's call to service. She was unprepared to cope with losing him. She knew Tim, Sr. shared none of her apprehension or qualms for hadn't he regaled any and everybody that would listen with his tales of the greatness of the service. Timmy had heard about it since he was old enough to comprehend, hence he looked forward to entering.

Within the solitary confines of her innermost private thoughts she wished he'd not be accepted. Guilt went hand and glove with her wish for it would be a mighty blow for the lad. Loneliness was her companion these days for Timmy and his welfare were something she and Tim had always shared, but in this she was an outsider. The hurt had begun the day she had returned from shopping and found Timmy's things piled in the hallway.

"I'm going to give all this junk away."

She was left alone with her own heartbreak. Entering his room she stared in bewilderment at its neatness. It was almost as though he were already gone.

Through her tears the thought struck her, Timmy's walls need washing where his pennants had hung. She was irked by the thought; that the commonplace everyday things such as cleaning should even enter her mind.

Today it had happened. He was gone. He'd risen at dawn to be ready. Tim, Sr. and he had discussed the merits of the various branches of service, while eating, then Timmy had kissed her goodbye. Airily he had promised to call when he'd know where he was being sent. Big Tim had shook the lad's hand and the pride he felt in his son lay open for all to see.

"Edie, don't take on so. Timmy is no longer a baby. He's a man."

Anger mingled with the hurt pain she was feeling and she lashed out at Tim. "He's my baby, and I hope they don't take him."

"Edie!" Her husband's tone landed like a whip. "I'm ashamed of you. Other mothers have sons in service and I'm sure none ever wished they'd be rejected."

She escaped to the privacy of her room to avoid the scorn she had seen in Tim's eyes. She heard him leave for work and he went without a kiss or goodbye.

The bang of the downstairs door and running feet caused her to sit bolt upright. The door next to hers opened and closed with a bang. Timmy was back. She heard the sound of a heavy weight hitting the bed and then a sound she'd never forget. Harsh dry sobs emanated from Timmy's room, sobs that choked and ended in a whimper of pain. She knew then that her wish had been granted. There was no gratification in this. She wanted to go in and offer comfort but her guilt held her back. She couldn't face him knowing this was what she wanted. He'd know it too by looking at her. The phone rang and she picked it up. Tim, Sr. was talking. "Well, are you happy?"

"You know?" She whispered.

"Yes, he stopped in to tell me. I tried to help him."

When she hung up she could only think—I wanted this to happen. The phone rang again and she picked it up. She said to a query, "Yes, Tim Brown lives here." The caller took over the conversation and she listened. When she hung up she straightened her shoulders and entered Timmy's room. "Private Tim, report for duty." She watched his glazed eyes as he looked at her in puzzlement. "They made a mistake and your X-rays got mixed."

"You mean I'm in." Tim grabbed her and whirled her around in a mad dance.

When I see a farm
(some thoughts at Thanksgiving)
I think of Pilgrims hewing farms out of the forests and rock of New England.
Of men by the tens of thousands pushing the wilderness back from the Atlantic to the Rockies.
In the ring of their axes and sound of their ploughs is the music of a nation . . . sweating, growing, dreaming.
When I see a farm I think of more than verdant fields and neat white houses and barns that wait in little stands of trees for the lights of evening and the peace of night.
I see the men and the women who made this country grow—the long, hard hours they worked—the sickness and suffering they endured, the lives and loves they gave, the bountiful tables they made possible for us all.
The American farmer is the backbone of the American character. He put iron in our backs as well as food in our bellies. He taught us the meaning of a day of toil.
Always we shall owe him what we give.
We're here to help you get what you want

Wife of Fertile, Minn. Teacher Arrested on Bogus Check Charge

The wife of a Fertile school teacher, mother of three, was arrested Friday night after Fargo, N. D., police said, she admitted cashing some $5,000 worth of bogus checks in Minnesota and North Dakota over the past two years.

Walter Olson, Fargo police chief, indentified the suspect as Mrs. J. G. Anderson, about 30.

Norris Dahl, a patrolman at Moorhead where many of the spurious checks had been cashed, was credited with a leading role in the woman's capture.

Dahl was checking his beat recently when a liquor store operator told him of a woman who had unsuccessfully tried to cash a check at his place. He said it was signed with the name of a Moorhead resident but that the store owner knew the woman wasn't she.

Dahl checked with the Moorhead woman and showed her a composite sketch of the forger, drawn by Norm Selber, WDAY-TV artist at Fargo and printed on thousands of handbills police put out.

The Moorhead woman said it looked like Mrs. Anderson, whom she knew. Dahl turned the information over to Fargo police and Friday's arrest followed.

Chief Olson said detectives rang the bell at Mrs. Anderson's home and she answered the door. He said she turned white when they identified themselves as police officers.

Mrs. Anderson was taken to the Polk county jail at Crookston where she was held without charges.

Olson said Mrs. Anderson admitted using at least 14 different aliases on what he added she admitted was a "countless" number of bad checks. In addition to Fargo and Moorhead, the woman had operated at Grand Forks and Valley City, among other North Dakota localities.

THE MINNESOTA STORY

Prepared by the
Minnesota Historical Society

INDIAN ALLIES

A letter from an unnamed "gentleman from the territory of Illinois," published in Niles' "Weekly Register" for October 17, 1812, reveals the effect of the War of 1812 between England and the United States upon the then sparsely settled Northwest.

The writer begins by describing the principal settlements and geographic features of the area for his Eastern readers. The only village in Minnesota which he mentions is the famous fur-trading center, Grand Portage, where "there is assembled annually in the months of May and June, about 1500 or 1600 British subjects, who are engaged in the Indian trade, and continue there till fall; when they again return to their wintering grounds. At this place are deposited the furs and peltries that are collected in the northwest."

The writer voiced his apprehensions over the influence of the British among the Indians. He feared that the English would try to incite the Indians to massacre the inhabitants of the tiny, far-flung American settlements in the Mississippi Valley.

The fact that two Indians from southern Illinois had been captured recently at Chicago with letters in their moccasins for the "infamous Colonel Dickson" at Green Bay gave credence to the writer's belief that the British schemes embraced the whole Mississippi Valley. Though he did not "pretend to believe that the whole of those Indians will unite at one and the same time to attack us," he was afraid that there would be much suffering and destruction on the frontier.

That his fears were not groundless is proved by the fact that the Indians did assist the British during the war in capturing the American garrison at Mackinac and in an unsuccessful attack upon St. Louis.

FRONTIER SURVEYOR

In the early days, surveying furnished employment for many men who became permanent residents of Minnesota. Among the surveyors who located townsites and blazed trails for the settlers was Benjamin Densmore of Red Wing.

After obtaining considerable experience in marking the routes of pioneer railroads, Densmore undertook a surveying expedition for the Echota and Marion Land Company, one of the numerous firms speculating in Minnesota lands and townsites in the 1850s. This trip in May, to what later became Otter Tail County, where he marked out the sites of the towns of Marion on Otter Tail Lake and Echota on the Otter Tail River.

In the fall Densmore returned to the Otter Tail region with Charles W. Iddings of St. Paul and a number of others, who were to spend the winter there. Teams were used to haul supplies for these future settlers of western Minnesota across the almost roadless county between Long Prairie and Otter Tail Lake. Numerous evidences of advancing civilization were noted, however, during the journey. For example, Densmore records that "we camped last night near a government township corner by which we are able to locate ourselves." At Holmes City he recruited two men and an ox team, "the only civilized and domestic inhabitants of the city."

Eventually the party reached Otter Tail Lake. On October 26, the first, and probably the last, house in Marion was erected; on October 31 "the woods resounded to the blows from our axes as we wrought a rude cabin from the forest" on the site of Echota. After giving instructions to the men, Densmore and Iddings left Marion and Echota to take their places among Minnesota's forgotten towns, whose ephemeral existences marked the beginnings of settlement in so many parts of the state.

LAKE HARRIET SCHOOL

The "Lake Harriet Mission School for the Sioux" was one of the earliest educational experiments attempted in Minnesota. In 1836 when Jedediah Stevens, a missionary, established his day and boarding school for "Indian children of pure or mixed blood," only a few crude huts occupied the shores of the Minneapolis lake where many substantial homes stand today.

The boarding school, taught by Stevens' niece, had elaborate rules and regulations for the discipline of its pupils. The "divisions of each day" were as follows: "Eight and a half hours allowed for sleep, six hours for study or school hours, four hours for Labor, three hours for meals and family worship, two and a half hours for recreation." Students arose at five o'clock in the morning and "retired to rest" at 8:30 in the evening. A document containing the rules of the school is preserved in the collections of the Minnesota Historical Society.

The school year was "divided into four terms or quarters of twelve weeks each"; such periods were conducted with "an examination of the school and everything pertaining to it." In one of his journals, also owned by the Minnesota Historical Society, Major Lawrence Taliaferro, Indian agent at Fort Snelling, described an examination or "commencement," which he attended at the Lake Harriet school on December 30, 1836. The Indian children were evidently apt pupils, for Taliaferro records that "Miss S. commenced a course on spelling, reading, arithmetic, geography, speaking and other interesting recitations. The scholars from the oldest to the youngest performed with aptness and promptitude all their various exercises gave an example of what can be done with Indians and others when attention and attendance are to be had."

The major appears to have welcomed the opportunity to attend the exercises, for he concludes: "We rode seven miles out to the Lake, and really passed a pleasant as well as a highly satisfactory day."

Eisenhower May Visit State in '58

Invited to Come for Centennial Program

Chances are—if sheer numbers of influential invitations mean anything—that President Eisenhower will come to Minnesota at least once in 1958.

To be sent to the White House this week is a formal invitation to the President from the Minnesota statehood centennial commission.

He will be asked to speak May 11 at a gigantic outdoor 100th birthday celebration in Memorial stadium at the University of Minnesota.

The president has been asked by cabinet member Marion Folsom, secretary of health, education and welfare, to greet some 400 delegates, alternates and staff members of the World Health organization (WHO) which convenes May 26 in Minneapolis.

Dr. Robert N. Barr, executive head of the state health department, Thursday requested Gov. Freeman second the Folsom bid with a formal invitation for May 26 or 27.

Marshall County Tax Collections up Sharply in '57

Tax collections in Marshall county through October 31 reached a new all-time high with the total payments for the year reaching $1,443,013.21, according to figures compiled in the office of J. W. Sands, county treasurer.

The 1957 tax payments are $129,005.80 greater than they were for the same length of time in 1956 when the total reached $1,314,007.41, a comparison of records revealed.

Two Car Mishaps in City Last Week

Cars Struck in Rear on Slippery Streets

Two non-injury accidents in the city marked the advent of winter weather and icy streets here last week, both accidents being of the rear-end collision variety, according to city police.

Wednesday, a car driven by James L. Roese, city, who was proceeding west on E. 3rd st. was hit in the rear end when Roese stopped for a traffic signal by another car driven by Howard Langlie, city.

Blame for the accident, which caused an estimated $45 to the Roese car and $125 to the Langlie vehicle, was laid on icy streets. No charges were filed.

Another accident had occurred in almost the same spot the previous day when a car driven by Marvin H. Gustafson, city, was struck in the rear by another car driven by Mrs. Elaine Bowman Radniecki, Oklee.

In this Tuesday accident near Penney's, each car sustained about $35 damages. No charges were reported filed.

Explains Functions of Social Security as It Affects Farmer

The Grand Forks social security office, together with 557 other district offices of the Social Security Administration, is cooperating with farm and business industries in the nationwide observance of Farm-City Week, W. D. Kistler, district manager, announced today.

Since the objective of National Farm-City Week (November 22-28, 1957) is to stress the interrelation of rural and urban peoples, Kistler said that the Social Security Administration will emphasize the "oneness" of its old-age, survivors, and disability program. By participating in the observance, Kistler recognizes an opportunity for his office to correct some of the misunderstanding on the part of both the farmer and the city dweller about the purpose of social security insurance.

"Some people do not fully understand that the social security program is the same for the farmer and for the city person," Kistler said. "Many farmers still think that old-age, survivors, and disability insurance for them and their families is a distinct and separate program from the social security program for city folks. Some believe erroneously, that when they reach retirement age they just have to apply at their social security district office for 'farmers' benefits and then go right on with their farming activities," he declared.

As a possible reason for this misunderstanding, Kistler pointed out that the social security law does contain a few special provisions for farmers in recognition of the fact that farming differs in many ways from the operation of other business enterprises. These provisions relate to the way self-employed farmers are permitted to figure their net earnings for social security purposes if their gross farm income is not more than $1,800 and their net is less than $1,200; also, the manner in which farm rental income received from a tenant or share-farmer can count for social security credit if the farm landlord "materially participates" in the operation on the land he rents out.

These special provisions for farm operators, however, have nothing to do with the type of social security benefits payable or work eligibility for benefits. Emphasizing that there are no special "farmers' benefits," Kistler said that farmers and their families qualify for these federal insurance payments based on a farmer's work under social security just like millions of city workers who are employed or self-employed in offices, factories, mercantile enterprises or covered professions in urban areas. "Old-age, survivors, and disability insurance is not a farm subsidy," he declared.

Mercury Slumps to 3 Here Sunday

Mild Weather Forecast for Area to Wednesday

Pennington county residents can look forward to continued mild weather at least through Wednesday but the weatherman isn't making any predictions for Turkey day in the area.

Although the lowest temperature of the season to date was registered here Sunday with a chilly 3 above zero, the mercury managed to stay in the twenties for the most part, climbing as high as 28 Saturday for the high reported the past week.

Snow, mixed with rain and sleet, fell here Friday night and some light snow fell late Sunday but amounts of precipitation received here was not measured. There is just a trace of snow on the ground.

The KTRF forecast is for [illegible] today, tonight and Tuesday. Temperatures will rise today and level off, with little change through Tuesday.

Highs will be in the thirties and lows in the twenties today and tonight, while winds will be light variable today.

Above-normal temperatures are predicted to last through Wednesday.

Shootin' the Breeze

BY Mack Draper

The weather certainly has taken some strange turns in the past year but one isn't likely to hear complaints about the mercury rising sharply, as it did Friday.

After spending nearly 11 years in North Dakota we still find it hard to get accustomed to living where the problem is one of having too much rain, rather than too little. Too much rain may not always be a problem in these parts but it certainly has been the past two years, at least!

I spent the first 20 years of my life in a country that was considered to have a fairly wet climate, nearly comparable to that of Washington and Oregon—but in all those 20 years I've never seen anything like the past two years here.

We still think northern Minnesota is a swell place to live, though!

We're happy to report that our friend, George Erickson, was successful in keeping his farm. Whether this column had anything to do with it or not we don't know, so we aren't claiming any credit.

We're very happy everything worked out for the Ericksons and wish them loads of success!

Thief River Falls can't be accused of jumping the gun on getting Christmas street decorations in place. They should be in place here by Thanksgiving, which gives plenty of time before Christmas to lend the city the proper yuletide atmosphere.

We were in Grand Forks Friday night and saw that their decorations were all lit up. That will really stretch out the shopping season there, since they've probably been up for a week or so already.

Mid-November is pretty early to be decorating for Christmas. Most people do their Christmas shopping after Thanksgiving and we'd all probably be surprised to know the proportion of the people who do the bulk of their shopping the last week before the big holiday!

We don't quite understand why, but that little pixie who came to live with us in October is at his cheerful best around 6 a.m., when he arouses the household to have his breakfast.

He's pretty young to be smiling and cooing but that's the time of day he's most likely to do it nowadays. Too bad, he'll probably get lazy just like the rest of us as he grows older.

There are two 30-mile-an-hour speed limit signs about a half-mile south of the city limits on the airport road that just don't make any sense whatever.

There's no point in trying to figure out why they were put in such a place unless the powers that be had a few left over and that happened to be the place they chose to use them.

One effect they do have is to make scofflaws of everyone who drives out that way—we've yet to see a car slow down to the prescribed limits. Why should there be a 30-mile limit away out in the middle of nowhere? Somebody getting special favors, perhaps?

The fact that there are a few houses between the signs is no justification for their being there that we can see. A great many people we've talked to have remarked at what appears to be completely unjustified on the face of it.

You could argue all year and still not convince an awful lot of people of the need for those signs being there on the open road. So Long!

QUESTIONS answered for VETERANS

Additional information or assistance on veterans benefits may be obtained by writing or visiting the VA Contact Representatives at the Grand Forks VA office.

Q—May a veteran take so-called a vocational or recreational courses under the Korean GI Bill?

A—Yes, but only if he submits justifications to VA that the course will be of bona fide use in his business or occupation, and if VA gives him prior approval. However, courses in bartending, dancing or personality development are prohibited.

Q—I am a widow of a World War-I veteran, and I have decided to continue receiving death compensation payments rather than payments under the Survivor Benefits Act. If I do switch to Survivor Benefits payments, could I at some later time change again to death compensation payments?

A—No. Once you have elected to receive payments under the Survivor Benefits Act, the law prohibits your switching back to death compensation payments.

Q—May a Spanish-American veteran with a nonservice-connected disability receive VA outpatient treatment?

A—He may. However, veterans of all other wars may receive VA out-patient treatment only for service-connected conditions.

Q—I am a disabled Korea veteran taking on-the-job training under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act. As my job training pay goes up, will VA reduce my monthly subsistence allowance?

A—Yes. Your subsistence may be reduced by an amount considered equitable and just.

Wool Dress Wins Sewing Award For Teenager in Singer Contest

Four of Eight Finalists Choose "Easiest to Sew With" Fabric

A PRETTY, blonde high school senior, Mary Seveland of St Louis Park, Minnesota, took top honors in the senior division of the nationwide Singer Teenage Dressmaking Contest. Her double-breasted black and white wool tweed dress with built-in bolero was one of four wool dresses which reached the finals. It won for her the $1,000 first prize. A total of 34,000 teenagers entered the 1957 Singer contest, which is conducted throughout the United States and Canada. The finals were held at the Plaza Hotel in New York.

Miss Seveland, who plans to study dress design at the Minneapolis School of Art, said she selected the wool fabric because she felt it was most suited to the pattern and because wool is so easy to sew with. Her $1,000 prize will go toward the cost of her college education, which she will start next year.

She began sewing five years ago in junior high and now makes all her own clothes. The dress she entered in the contest cost her $10 to make.

Four of the eight finalists made wool dresses ranging in cost from $14 to $18, bearing out remarks made by the girls that their home sewing was motivated more by desire for accomplishment than by need to economize. Their wish to put their time and creative urge into something that promised best performance, appearance and fashion-rightness led to their selection of wool fabrics.

Mary Seveland models prize winning double-breasted black and white all-wool tweed dress with built-in bolero, and velvet collar.

412 Hunters Checked at Winger Show Deer Kill of 51 Per Cent

Deer hunters were again checked the second through the fifth days of the hunting season at the Winger checking station, Robert Farmes, game biologist, reported today. A total of 412 hunters who stopped at the station had 212 deer for a success of 51 per cent. Last year during these same four days 430 hunters had 212 deer for 48 percent success. During the three days of checking in 1955, 533 hunters had 277 deer for a success of 52 per cent and in 1954, 939 hunters had 303 deer for 32 per cent success.

The following information was recorded for each deer checked: sex, age, weight, location where taken by township, and if an adult buck the number of points on each antler and the diameter of each antler.

Most of the deer came from Marshall, Roseau and Kittson Counties. The largest deer was a buck from Kittson County which weighed 252 pounds field dressed.

Two interesting items showed up in the age composition. There were as many three and one-half year old deer checked as two and one-half year old. The many fawns that died in the winter of 1955 would now be two and one-half years old which explains why this was a weak age class this year.

We have always found year and one-half old bucks to be more numerous in the kill than does of the same age, but this year they were better than three times as numerous. We believe that year and one-half old males are more vulnerable to the gun than the same age females and perhaps the week earlier season this year made this more pronounced.

Farmes commented, "There was a greater percentage of fawns in the animals checked than in any year we have checked at Winger indicating a very good fawn crop this year. Forty one per cent of the deer were fawns compared with only 34 per cent last year. In areas of poor food conditions and too many deer for the available food we find a smaller percentage of fawns in the population. It will take two or even three does in poor range to produce as many fawns as one doe in good range. Thus is can be seen that it pays to keep the deer range from being overbrowsed just as it pays the rancher or dairyman to keep his pastures in good shape. Generally speaking there are fewer fawns produced per doe as we go from west to east and south to north in the state. Part of this is due to the harder winters in the north and part to poorer range. The statistics gathered at Winger indicate a successful deer season in this area this year."

WILDLIFE in Minnesota

by Jim Kimball

Our happy home has survived several periods of severe audio disturbance, but I'm wondering if the latest noise-making device will sever the family ties. At one time nothing seemed more nerve shattering than the endless pounding out of schales on the piano, next came the flute—not a loud instrument but persistent an drelentless in the hands of a kid striving for a position in the high school band. Then another band aspirent blasting on a trumpet and commenting, "Just like Harry James, huh, Pa?"

Through all this the Kimball family has remained intact but now comes the acid test—I'a has purchased a duck call and is determined to simulate the enticing squawk of a contented hen mallard and the purr of a well fed bluebill.

It all started when an invitation was received to shout on a leased area covering several ponds and small lakes. Having always been a one-gallus hunter searching for a spot with a few more ducks than shooters, it was easy to be convinced that here was an opportunity to learn how the other half hunted—and much was learned about what makes for good duck hunting.

One of this group of lakes had been set aside by the members of the hunting group as a sanctuary and has not been shot for many years. Over 5,000 and possibly 10,000 ducks were resting in this sanctuary. As might be expected, a few of them would be shoving around all day providing good shooting for hunters capable of luring them into their decoys. According to the local game warden this small refuge provides good hunting, not only on the leased area but for milles in all directions.

Many of us feel we cannot afford to join with a group and lease a shooting area; some frown on hunting leases, believing that free hunting is part of the American way of life; while others contend that compensating the farmer for his wetlands is the best way to assure their preservation. No attempt will be made here to settle this argument but there is something to be learned from the leased areas which are well managed.

It is the objective of the Game and Fish Division to provide the best possible hunting at the lowest possible cost. To do this we must hold migrating ducks in Minnesota for a longer period of time.

During and following the drouth ducks reached an all-time low. Federal regulations reduced the daily bag to four and the season to 30 days. With the return of wet years and more ducks, the four per day bag limit was retained but the season was gradually extended until it now stands at seventy days. This long season has benefited many states, but a duck season running to the second week of December helps few Minnesota hunters. It is quite possible that our shooting pressure plus excessive use of motorboats on duck lakes may be pushing birds out of the state too fast. A network of small sanctuaries could be effective in holding ducks, especially mallards, in the state.

But we started talking about duck calls, didn't we. Well, since the age of twelve I've seen more ducks frightened by duck calls, including my own, than by shotguns. Up to now I've considered these devices a conservation measure, a gadget to be sold to gullible hunters, but not any more. A farmer, Everard Berdan, who has learned more about ducks from keen observing than I'll ever know, took me hunting. The blind was extremely conspicuous, the few decoys were tossed out at random, were were surrounded by hunters blowing calls, no wind and the ducks were scarce and high. With these conditions I figured I'd heard everything when he advised me to shoot only mallards—preferably greenheads. Then when he cupped his hands like a megaphone around the end of his duck call and started squawking at a flock of mallards practically out of sight I knew I had seen, as well as heard, everything. But a couple of ducks near the end veered a bit, then the whole flock came like rats to the Pied Piper. Avoiding all other gunners and their squawking calls, they worked into our decoys. Flock after flock followed and we had our limit too soon, but he called in more just for fun.

So, just as I learned to live with a piano, a flute and a trumpet, my family will have to live with my duck call because I'm going to blow the thing until ducks come down the chimney.

Farm Youth May Go to St. Paul School

Agriculture School Offers Many Courses

The School of Agriculture on the University of Minnesota's St. Paul Campus is now receiving applications for the winter term.

According to J. O. Christianson, superintendent of the School, applications and room reservations should be in soon for the winter term, January 6 - March 20, 1958.

The winter gives rural young people an opportunity to profitably use the slack winter season for study and return to the farm in time for spring work, Christianson points out.

The St. Paul Campus School serves the entire state in providing vocational post-high school education for young men and women. Courses for men are designed to help them become more efficient farmers, and women's courses prepare girls for practical nursing in rural hospitals, office training and home management, and work in hospitals, office training and home management, and work in hospitals as food technicians.

The course runs for two years — two fall and two winter terms. For complete information about the School of Agriculture, write to the Superintendent, School of Agriculture, Institute of Agriculture, St. Paul 1, Minnesota.

High Finance

We are in receipt of an interesting letter from Owen Korsmo, of Rochester, giving us some details on the financial setup of the Mustangs hockey team. Hockey down there is big and successful business.

Of course local fans are interested in the play of the Mustangs for on the Rochester roster are such former Prowler and Thieves hockey players as Bob Baker, Donald (Bud) Brossoit, Derwood (Swede) Lund, Bob Amundson, Jack Poole, and Bob Helgeland.

According to the early-season information, Brossoit will skate on the Mustangs' number one line, with Arley Carlson and Gordon Gosselin being linemates. The Mustangs second line will be an all-Thief River Falls unit with Baker at center and Poole and Lund at the wings. Amundson and Helgeland are slated for blue-line duty.

Oh yes, Gene Sack, the Thieves baseball manager the past couple of seasons, and assistant Prowler hockey coach last year, is playing with the Rochester team as a defenseman.

But to get back to the figures on the Rochester finances. Korsmo's status with the Mustangs is as treasurer of the club (leave it to owen to be where the money comes in out of the small end of the funnel), and he says, "First of all we had a world's series pool which we sold out, netting $2,250.00. Then we had a ticket drive called 'Back the Bronco's', during which we sold a seven-ticket block for $5.00. This drive was a tremendous success, for we sold $6,650.00 worth of Tickets. Then we had our annual season ticket sale, which did not push, but which netted a bit over $2,000.00. And finally we had program advertising, and we sold $1,270.00 worth of advertising. We are encouraged by the support we have been receiving, and for our season-opening game we had a crowd of 2,700 fans."

Korsmo adds a footnote to the effect that the Thief River contingent on the Mustangs is doing real well. Baker, Helgeland, Lund, and Amundson are employed at the IBM plant. Poole is working for a plumbing and heating concern; and Brossoit is with the engineering firm of Johnson-Drake-Piper.

Did You Hear It?

Referring, of course, to that epic Western Canada football finals game played between the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, coached by Bud Grant, and the Edmonton Eskimoes, and played at Edmonton on Saturday night.

The Blue Bombers upset the highly-favored Edmonton team to win by a 17 to 2 score, and thereby win the three-game series, two games to one, and earn the right to represent western Canada in the Grey Cup Canadian championship game, which will be played on Saturday afternoon.

The score of Saturday night's was 17 to 2, for the Bombers, but tells but little of the struggle for the league title. Last Wednesday night, by a 5 to 4 score, Edmonton evened the best-of-three series by defeated Winnipeg, and forced the series into a final game.

At the conclusion of regulation time on Saturday night, the score was tied at 2 all. Can you imagine a Canadian football game, which with its wide open play and kicking and prohibition of down-field blocking is usually a high-scoring affair being deadlocked a 2-all? Well, that's what happened, and the two teams played a pair of ten-minute overtime periods.

Unquestionably, Bud Grant, by his coaching of the Bombers to the Western Canada title, and instilling superb spirit into a Winnipeg team that was shattered by injuries, will be named the "coach of the year."

So the schedule next Saturday afternoon will find the Winnipeg Blue Bombers playing the Hamilton Tiger-Cats in Toronto's Varsity stadium for the Canadian football championship. And don't sell the crippled Bombers short!

Injustice

It's not often that we find ourselves in the same baseball camp as Harold Eide and Gunder Grovum, but this time it's different. The baseball writers association voted Mickey Mantle of the New York Yankees as the American league's most valuable player. That surely was a miscarriage of justice, for Boston's Ted Williams, who posted a remarkable season into the record book, was deserving of the honor. The vote was 233 points for Mantle, and 200 points for Williams.

But what is puzzling to fair-minded followers of baseball is how a writer, or a pair of writers, could cast ninth and tenth place votes for Williams. Votes like that are undoubtedly the result of personality conflicts and motivated by bias. Williams, a ninth or tenth place choice in the American league's rating of most valuable players!

Mantle, himself, when informed of the vote, and being pleased and surprised by the tabulation of points, expressed the belief that Williams was the league's most valuable player.

It could be that the writers who participate in this poll are influenced by the bloc of New York writers. And, of course, there is strong anti-Williams sentiment in this group, too.

Oil men spent just about as much money in the 20 or 30 days it takes to sink a well, as they do to produce the oil over the 20 or 30-year life of an oil well.

Car Liability Policy Cost Increase Seen

"Motorists in most states face higher charges for automobile liability insurance in 1958."

This view of the outlook for automobile insurance rates was given to the public today by William Leslie, general manager of the National Bureau of Casualty Underwriters, a rating organization with a membership of 122 stock companies writing casualty insurance.

"The outlook is based not on opinion but on stern economic facts," Leslie stated. "Reluctant as the insurance carriers are seek high rates, there is no alternative. As inflationary pressures continue to push up the costs of setting accident claims incurred by insured motorists, rate revisions during 1958 will undoubtedly involve increases. In many states rate increases have already been approved by supervisory authorities that will affect a large part of the volume of business written in 1958.

"During 1956 member companies of the Bureau suffered a countrywide underwriting loss of 7.9 percent on automobile liability insurance. This means that automobile liability claim costs and expenses amounted to $107.90 for every $100 of premiums earned, or an aggregate underwriting loss of more than $61,000,000. Their automobile physical damage insurance business—collision, comprehensive, fire, theft, etc.—was also unprofitable. Other stock companies and mutual companies also sustained serious underwriting losses during 1956.

"Reports for the first six months of this year indicate the prospect of an even worse underwriting loss situation for the year 1957. The underwriting loss, for example, for all lines for one company jumped from $528,000 in the first half of 1956 to $6,635,000 in the comparable period of 1957; for another from $2,839,000 to $11,800,000; for another from $154,000 to $5,379,000; and for still another from $3,500,000 to $6,881,000.

"Inflation has forced up average claim costs for both bodily injury and property damage liability. In addition, the adverse effect of inflation on property damage claims has been aggravated by continually climbing repair costs resulting from car design, the new wraparound windshields, for example.

"During the postwar period from 1946 through 1956, claim costs for both bodily injury and property damage increased on the average more than 6 per cent a year, with the result that bodily injury claims settled in 1956 on a countrywide basis were 82 percent higher. And there is no evidence of any apparent leveling off of costs in the forseeable future.

"In addition to the upward trend in average claim costs the companies have been confronted since the latter part of 1955 with the adverse effect of increasing claim frequency, that is, the number of claims per 100 insured cars."

Playwright Gives Manuscripts to North Dakota 'U'

Maxwell Anderson, prominent American playwright and University of North Dakota alumnus, has presented a collection of original manuscripts to the University Library for safekeeping and research purposes.

The announcement was made by Dr. George W. Starcher, UND president, who said the contribution represented "the beginning of one of the most significant collections of basic and original papers and manuscripts of a distinguished American playwright."

The manuscripts—written in longhand—will be exhibited for the public and will be made available for future study by English and dramatics majors or any others genuinely interested in the field, said Starcher.

Anderson will add to the collection other manuscripts and Maxwell Anderson papers that will be of interest to scholars in the future, the president reported.

Anderson, who received a Bachelor of Arts degree from the University in 1911, has given UND the original manuscripts of "Mary of Scotland," "Knickerbocker Holiday," "The Star Wagon," "Vithimyri," "Adam, Lilith and Eve," "Candle in the Wind," and his latest work, "The Day the Money Stopped," a one-act play now being readied for its Broadway opening.

1958 Cadillac Models Are Long and Low

The long, low design of the 1958 Cadillac is easily apparent in this Sedan de Ville. Highlighting this styling are the dramatic tail fins which give a feeling of grace and motion to the car's appearance. Another new feature for the 1958 Cadillac is the rear ventipane (ICV) windows. These ventipanes improve rear passenger visibility and add length to the car's appearance. The "long, broad shouldered" look is apparent throughout the entire Cadillac line for 1958, which is being shown locally at Wiener's garage.

Prepare for Winter Driving, Chief Urges

"The prevention of traffic accidents requires not only caution, but imagination and foresight," Police Chief Elton Cummings said today. "But it's difficult for some people to realize that the only way they can stop accidents is to take adequate preventive measures before the accident happens."

The chief observed that when a community experiences a fatal traffic accident, "people wonder why it happened and what could have been done to prevent it. It's easy to get stirred up about safety at a time like that, but it's not so easy to anticipate each accident and take preventive measures beforehand."

As an example, Chief Cummings pointed out that motorists in this part of the country are familiar wiht the difficulties and hazards of winter driving, yet many of them do not prepare adequately for the winter season.

"A driver with experience and foresight will not postpone winterizing his car until he is caught in the first snow or sleet storm," he said. "And he realizes that a good job of winterizing means more than an oil change and the addition of anti-freeze."

The chief emphasized that the coming of winter means the driver will be forced to rely more on his car's safety equipment. Therefore, he should make doubly sure this equipment is in first rate condition to meet the test of cold weather.

Among the items of safety equipment that need seasonal attention, Chief Cummings listed the following:

Windshield wiper blades and defrosters, to keep the windshield clear when driving in rain, sleet or snow.

Head and tail-lights, properly adjusted for increased use during winter's longer nights and during snowfalls.

Battery, for surer starts and to insure safe lighting.

Brakes, equalized for efficient operation on slippery pavements.

Reinforced tire chains in trunk, ready to provide stop-and-go traction needed on ice or snow.

One out of every 16 vehicles on the road today is a truck.

General Revenue Fund in State Is $10,000,000 Higher

State Auditor King Also Reports Debt Has Increased $13,000,000

The state's tax take from increased iron ore shipments spurred a 10 million dollar hike in Minnesota's general revenue fund over the past year, State Auditor King reported Wednesday.

The fund's balance at the end of the fiscal year's first quarter, Sept. 30, was $17,791,580.55, compared with $7,040,332 on the same date last year.

"With the continuance of improvements economically—such as employment conditions—and the terrific shipments of iron ore, we can look for a substantial improvement in the general revenue fund beyond anybody's expectations," King said.

As of June 30 this year, the state's total debt had climbed some 13 million dollars to $91,272,021 in a 12-month period. For the same period the increase in bond debt and certificates of indebtedness was $9,140,791.

King said the debt increase stemmed mainly from issuance of 12 million dollars worth of trunk highway bonds and eight million dollars of bonds for state buildings, state parks and flood control.

This was offset by about 50 per cent by reduction of indebtedness in veterans' bonus bonds, rural credit bonds, and bonds covering the Mayo Memorial plus aeronautics, military and naval land and veterans service building.

Receipts from all sources during the first quarter of the current fiscal year jumped about 45 million dollars over 1956 figures.

Receipts as of Sept. 30, 1957, totaled some 221 million dollars, compared with 170 million at this time a year ago.

Editorials . . .

"It has seemed fit and proper that they (divine favors) should be solemnly, reverently, and gratefully acknowledged as with one heart and one voice by the whole American people. I do, therefore, invite my fellow-citizens in every part of the United States, and also those who are at sea and those who are sojourning in foreign lands, to set apart and observe the last Thursday of November next as a day of thanksgiving and praise to our beneficent Father who dwelleth in the heavens."

—Abraham Lincoln, Thanksgiving Proclamation, Oct. 3, 1863

Hopeful—and Thankful

Thursday is set aside as a day for thanksgiving, and at least a portion of that day should be used for the purpose for which it has been dedicated.

Most of us have had cause for unhappiness. Disappointment and misfortune come to all of us. There are times when nothing seems to go right, and our best efforts result in failure.

Taking the cheerful point of view, however, few of us are so unfortunate that there no longer is cause for hope, and as long as we can be hopeful we can be thankful.

There is a Danish proverb to the effect that if birds knew how poor they are they wouldn't sing so sweetly. Maybe it is better for us if we think less about the things that make us unhappy. It would be well, certainly, if, for one day, we concentrated on a few of our causes for happiness.

A good day for that is Thursday. Let us make this Thursday different from other days. On this Thursday let us be thankful.

The Real Issue

The Governor of Missouri is advocating payroll withholding as a part of the state's income tax collection procedure, which causes one Minnesota editor to wonder if the proposal will become as hot an issue there as it has been here.

As we recall the arguments the withholding proposal was not in itself a hot issue in Minnesota. It was Governor Freeman's proposal that the withholding tax be applied in such a way that it would take an additional $25 million from those taxpayers who are on a payroll that caused the heat. Many who favored the withholding principle opposed his plan because of the double-take provision.

An Economist Speaks

Dr. Gordon Sprague of Minneapolis spoke twice here last week and each of his talks was packed with facts, some pleasant and some not so pleasant. We liked what he said, both the good and the bad. He was speaking as an economist and not as a politician. His purpose was not to please but to inform.

Two things that he told us deserve our special consideration because they refer specifically to our local problems. He reminded us that milk can be produced at a lower cost here than in southern Minnesota, and that therefore dairying should be encouraged in this area. And he quoted the findings of University of Minnesota studies which indicate that our system for the marketing and manufacturing of dairy products is too costly and needs to be reorganized.

The statement that milk "can" be produced here at a lower cost should not be interpreted to mean that it "is" being produced generally at a more favorable cost. The comparisons have to do of course with comparable operations. It means that a herd that averages 400 pounds of fat per cow a year could produce that fat at a lower cost in our area than in southern Minnesota. And it is encouraging to know that while there has been a big increase in the number of our farms that have been producing milk or cream for the market, the number of high-producing herds has steadily increased.

Our progress in marketing has been less satisfactory in terms of the area problem. Two drying plants have encouraged the sale of fat in the form of whole milk, and a good start has been made in the switch to grade A production. But compared with southern Minnesota and Wisconsin our overall marketing organization is inefficient and costly.

Dr. Sprague held out little hope that we would eat our way out of our surpluses in the foreseeable future. The population is increasing rapidly but so is production, he said.

In brief Dr. Sprague told us that in order to survive we must become more efficient at both the production and marketing levels. In order to produce efficiently we must encourage the kind of production for which the area is best suited.

Deserves Your Support

The annual Community Chest is getting off to a late start, and that is another good reason why we should respond promptly and get this necessary piece of business completed and out of the way in a hurry. Many volunteer workers, who are contributing both time and dollars, started the solicitation this morning. They deserve prompt action from those of us who are asked to give only money.

Ten deserving organizations will participate in the proceeds of this solicitation. If a separate solicitation were made for each of these organizations the average contributor would give at least a dollar to each of them. There is no good reason why the average contributor should give less to each because ten drives are combined into one.

Many communities thruout the state adopted the United plan this year, which included all solicitations. Several organizations still have insisted on making their separate drive, but under the United plan they may accept their share of the one solicitation or get nothing. That is the sensible approach to this problem and the United plan should be adopted here.

In the meantime those of us who believe that all the bags should be put "in one askit" have the privilege of including all the organizations in our one contribution.

But the Community Chest, in spite of its shortcomings, deserves our support. In this season of Thanksgiving let us give generously.

Maybe one of the things we should be thankful for here in Minnesota is the sad fact that our university football team did not win the national championship. Minneapolis commercial interests were all set for us to build them a stadium twice as large as the one they now have. Maybe the old one will serve our needs for a few years to come. And in a few years we may find it necessary to de-emphasize the play program in our schools, placing more emphasis on education.

It Is Going to Be Tougher

(W. E. Barns, Sleepy Eye Herald-Dispatch)

"The average high school graduate is going to find college increasingly tough to get into—or stay in—as competition for college 'vacancies' get more spirited," read a headline in Monday's Minneapolis Tribune.

That's a different viewpoint of the "crowded college" situation about which we have read so much. Maybe it is a solution.

No one should be denied a college education if he really wants it, but surely one who does poor work in high school is not very desirous of getting it. Just because mother and dad have enough cash to send junior to college doesn't mean he belongs there.

The gloomy picture of our 1966 crowded colleges could be brightened considerable by making entrance selective and on the basis of ability and desire to learn.

At the same time, it might promote better work in high school on the part of those who have ideas of going on to school.

REPORT from the GOVERNOR

by Orville L. Freeman

The ninety million people in Japan are the best trained, most energetic and best organized people in Asia. They know that much of their future depends on trade and on industrial development. They expressed real interest when I talked about the St. Lawrence Seaway and our great port of Duluth.

Near Iron Curtain

They are, however, very close to the iron curtain. If they should drift in the direction of Soviet Communism, all of Asia would be threatened by the same fate. Our relationship with Japan is therefore of utmost importance.

A "Miracle"

It is my impression that the Japanese like what they have seen of the United States and of western democracy. They were very much impressed by what they regard as one of the greatest miracles of history—the feeding of the Japanese people during the occupation by the United States.

A representative of the Japanese government described this to me, nothing that we came as a conqueror after a very difficult war, at a time when the Japanese diet had dropped from 3000 calories to 1000 calories a day. The customary rice box in every Japanese home was empty. Yet, before the occupation was very old, the rice boxes were filled. This affected millions of homes throughout all of Japan. It was a tangible evidence of our concern for human beings that, he told me, the Japanese people would never forget.

Japanese Farmers

We had an interesting tour of the farm areas in Japan. Cooperatives are strong and successful among Japanese farmers. They engage in purchasing, marketing, and are very successful in supplying credit.

Japanese farms are small, and there is much less mechanization than in America. But there is an increasing interest in greater use of machinery on the farms. One interesting program is to send young Japanese farmers to the United States to learn, and to return to Japan after a year to put new practices into effect. The increase in production in some instances where this has been done is enormous. This program could also have another worth-while result, the building up of greater understanding and good will.

Japanese Women

The position of women seems to be changing in Japan. There are a number who have been elected to seats in the Japanese diet, or parliament, and women attend some social functions. But generally women are in an inferior position. For example, on the farm we visited, the woman of the house came in on her knees, was extremely self-effacing, and did not stay in the room when we had our tea and conversation.

Younger women seem to want more equality. They were deeply interested in a press conference at which Mrs. Freeman told about women in America, explaining how much work American women do, and counteracting an impression that is current there that American women are waited on and spoiled.

THE FIRST THANKSGIVING

Dost think this turkey will please the Pilgrim Fathers?

Those cranberries have been strung with careful fingers, the bird itself has been roasted to just the proper degree of succulent brownness, and that bit of wheat, lying on the table, symbolizes the rich bounty of this year's harvest.

If our Puritan maid, Priscilla, looks a bit skeptical, it is only because she is wondering if tom turkey will be big enough to satisfy all the hungry guests.

They will be coming with vigorous appetites, whetted by the walk through snow covered fields from Church, where they have given thanks for their good fortune.

And on all Thanksgivings since that first one, thankful people have knelt in prayer. Thanksgiving is our own American holiday, unlike any other. It is deeply religious in nature. We can only observe it if, like the Pilgrims, we go to church to give our thanks. And never have a people had cause to be so thankful for so much.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

In World War II there was a rumor (perhaps started deliberately for the benefit of the Germans) that our night flyers were improving their vision by eating lots of carrots, which contain Vitamin A. It was not true since this vitamin won't make normal vision better. It is a fact, however, that it will help cure night blindness caused by malnutrition.

Chest Drive [illegible] Home Areas Start Mond

Campaign to Op in Residential and Rural Districts

The last phases of the 1957 Community Chest drive in Pennington county will get under way Monday, with solicitations beginning that day in the residential area and governmental offices of the city, and in rural Pennington county, according to Rev. Otto Dale, 1957 drive chairman.

The drive was started this week with solicitations in the business and industrial districts of the city. No report on progress in these two phases of the drive was available at this time but it is hoped both phases will be completed Saturday.

Mrs. John Wettestead, co-chairwoman of the residential drive in the city urged that all solicitors report to the city auditorium between the hours of 2 and 4 p. m. or 7 and 9 p. m. Monday in order to pick up their packets before starting the drive.

Solicitations in the residential districts start that day and are to be completed the following Saturday. The quicker the drive is finished the less chance it has of conflicting with the Christmas rush season due to the late start, 1957 drive officials emphasized.

All solicitors in the residential drive are instructed to check in at the auditorium with their completed reports between 5 and 7 p. m. Saturday, Dec. 7, Mrs. Wettestead, said.

Paul Englestad is the rural drive chairman who will get the 1957 drive underway in rural Pennington county, while Paul Anderson is the governmental offices chairman in the city.

Delegates Named to Farmers Union Parley in Denver

Mrs. Roy Rude of TRF is Alternate Delegate to National Convention

Sixteen delegates, including one from this area, were named to represent Minnesota at a nation-wide farm meeting in Denver, Colorado, in March.

Selection of the 16 delegates and an equal number of alternates was completed at the recent state convention of the Minnesota Farmers Union.

Among those elected by the convention to attend the National meeting in Denver were Simon Knutson of McIntosh, delegate; and Mrs. Roy Rude of Thief River Falls, alternate.

The delegates were elected from districts which each totalled a voting membership of about 5,000 farm men and women. There were 48 candidates for the 16 delegate posts.

The National Farmers Union convention is expected to attract particular interest next spring because it will take place about the time that debate will be in full swing at Washington on improvements for the farm programs.

The Farmers Union recommendations are expected to include measures to give farmers greater bargaining power on the prices of the products which they sell. This should be accomplished through a combination of price and income supports and through giving farmers the opportunity to regulate the volume of commodities placed on the market, it will be proposed.

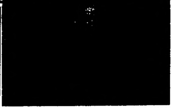
Walt Smith to Retire from Postoffice Nov. 30th after 41 Years



Walter E. Smith, assistant postmaster here, is shown above at his desk in the postoffice as he prepared to retire on pension Saturday, November 30, with a record of 41 years devoted to the postal service in Thief River Falls.

Starting his career in the local postoffice December 11, 1911, 46 years ago, he has continued his service ever since, with the exception of 18 months army duty during World War I, and about four years after the war when he tried his hand at banking, being employed by the bank then in Mavie and at the First National bank in Thief River Falls.

He then resumed his employment at the postoffice, and for the past 25 years has served as assistant postmaster.

Smith is a member of the American Legion, the local Masonic lodge and the Community Methodist church.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith plan to spend the Christmas holidays with their son Robert and his family at Warwick, Rhode Island. He said they plan to continue their residence in Thief River Falls, at least for the immediate future.

Pres. Eisenhower Gives Thanksgiving Message to Citizens

Following is the proclamation issued by President Eisenhower calling on all citizens of the United States to observe Thanksgiving Day in an appropriate manner:

At the autumnal season of the year our hearts move us to follow the wise and reverent custom, inaugurated by our Pilgrim fathers more than three centuries ago, of setting aside one special day for expressions of gratitude to a merciful Providence for the blessings bestowed upon us.

It behooves us to dwell upon the deep religious convictions of those who formed our nation out of a wilderness, and to recall that our leaders throughout the succeeding generations have relied upon Almighty God for vision and strength of purpose.

As a nation we have prospered; we are enjoying the fruit of our land and the product of our toil; we are making progress in our efforts to translate our national ideals into living realities; and we are at peace with the world, working toward that day when the benefits of freedom and justice shall be secured for all mankind.

For such blessings let us be devoutly thankful, and at the same time let us be sensitive and responsive to the obligations which such great mercies entail.

Now, therefore, I, Dwight D. Eisenhower, president of the United States of America, having in mind the joint resolution of congress approved December 26, 1941, which designates the fourth Thursday in November of each year as Thanksgiving day, do hereby call upon our people to observe Thursday, November 28, 1957, as a day of national thanksgiving. On that day let all of us, in accordance with our hallowed custom, foregather in our respective places of worship or in our homes and offer up prayers of thanks for our manifold blessings. Let the happiness which stems from family reunions on Thanksgiving day be tempered with compassion and inspired by an active concern for those less fortunate in our own country and in other lands; and let us ask God's continuing help and guidance in our conduct, both as individuals and as a nation.

Members of the local Lions club were scheduled to present the program Wednesday night in Red Lake Falls for the Lions' club being organized in that city.

Form Two Rivers Watershed Area

District Covers Part of Kittson and Roseau Co.

The Minnesota Resources Board has announced the establishment of the Two Rivers watershed district. A petition to establish the district was submitted by the Kittson county commissioners, and the villages of Hallock, Lancaster and Lake Bronson.

The district consists of 1061 square miles in Kittson and Roseau counties. It was created to alleviate flood conditions, to conserve waters for municipal and industrial purposes and to insure proper sewage disposal.

Named to the first board of managers of the district were: Gilmore Berger, Greenbush; Andy W. Erickson, Badger; Robert C. Nelson, Hallock; Levin D. Vagle, Lake Bronson; and Edward Harley Youngren, Northcote. The principal place of the district will be at Hallock.

As soon as the board is organized, it will appoint an advisory committee. Two groups will then propose a coordinated conservation plan for the entire watershed. A public hearing will be held, within the district for the purpose of adopting the plan.

Rehabilitation Unit Being Set up at Hospital

Second Floor of Old Section Now Being Rearranged

Preparations are going forward at Northwestern hospital for the establishment of a rehabilitation unit, H. W. Peterson, administrator, reports. The second floor of the old building is being rearranged to provide beds for from 20 to 24 rehabilitation patients, and the physical therapy facilities on the ground floor are being expanded to meet the requirements of the new service.

The rehabilitation unit will be organized to provide physical therapy and other treatments to patients who have illness or accidents which impair use of their muscles or muscle coordination. The purpose of this unit will be to teach such patients to care for themselves as far as possible. The unit is not intended to be a nursing home for patients for whom very little can be done.

Work has been started to revamp the present physical therapy department. Walls have been torn out and the location of equipment so re-arranged that a much more efficient use of space can be made. It is estimated that it will taken another week to complete this part of the unit.

Following completion of this work, construction work must be done on the second floor of the hospital. This will involve the building of a large bathroom and a training toilet area and the creation of a combination dining room and living room.

Error in Name in Accident Report

Larry Larson, Not 'Mrs.' Reported Car Mishap

An error, due to faulty information, was committed in the Times' reporting of a mishap in which a local juvenile knocked down a light standard on E. 3rd st. recently.

The same faulty information had caused local police to record the person who reported the accident in their log as "Mrs." Larry Larson, and the same information was given the Times' reporter.

Actually, the person who reported the accident Sunday night was Larry Larson, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Larson, 301 Tindolph av. N. Larry, a sixth grader, reported the accident to police because he said he had been taught to do so in school.

The Times hopes Larry's faith in the police and newspapers is restored, that the teasing he has endured will stop, and that he will continue to be a good citizen as he was when he reported the mishap Sunday.

No Disease Evidence Found in TB Testing

No evidence of disease was found in the recent school tuberculin testing program, Mrs. Margaret Race, school nurse, stated. Over 1150 students and school personnel were Mantoux tested in October. Testing was done by Dr. L. H. Flancher and nurse Mary Vattendahl of the Crookston sanatorium. Ten new reactors were found among the students and ten among the school personnel. All of the new adult reactors were also new in the Thief River Falls schools.

Because of the epidemic of upper respiratory infection and high absenteeism for a period of 3 weeks, the xray follow up was not completed until last week. The reports on these last xrays have just been received, completing the tuberculosis survey.

Xrays were taken by Mrs. Merle Thomas, technician at Northwestern hospital and sent to Dr. Flancher at Crookston to be read.

Nearly 100 xrays were taken during the Mantoux program including an annual xray of all old reactors. 3.6 percent of the school body are positive reactors—only 2 percent of the students react, but this percentage increases with increase in age. In the older age group of adults the percentage was a high as 31. These percentages compare favorably with other Minnesota communities.

Physicians Report Eisenhower Is Not Confined to His Bed

A team of specialists confirmed Tuesday night that President Eisenhower has suffered a blockage of a blood vessel leading to the brain, a condition generally called a mild stroke.

But the specialists said "He is alert, his spirits are good."

And, although this second physical examination of the President confirmed that the blockage "has produced a slight difficulty in speaking," the medical men added:

"The difficulty in speaking has improved over the last 24 hours and is now manifested only by a hesitancy in saying certain difficult words.

" Reading, writing and reasoning are not affected.

'The President's physical strength is normal, and he is allowed to up and about the White House.'

The first two reports used medical, and greatly similar, language to say what has stricken Eisenhower — an occlusion or blockage of a branch of a brain artery.

This condition is what is commonly called a stroke, although that word was not used in either medical report.

Both reports were alike, too, in saying that Eisenhower's disability is mild and transitory, but he must rest and cut down physical activity for several weeks ahead. There was an immediate decision against his going to Paris for a NATO meeting next month.

The first report was made at 3 p.m. by the White House physician, Maj. Gen. Howard M. Snyder, and other Army medical men. The second, at 6 p.m., came from neurology specialists of George Washington University, Columbia University and the Army's Walter Reed Hospital.

"All attending physicians and consultants are agreed that the President has not had another heart attack and that the present symptoms have no relation to his previous heart attack of Sept. 24, 1955."

The illness, with which the 67-year-old President was stricken Monday, came at a time when issues of great moment faced him.

For one thing, he had been preparing to tackle such grave and pressing matters as Russia's scientific-military surge, and ways to cement the free world closer together.

Shootin' the Breeze

BY Mack Draper

This Thursday is Thanksgiving.

Probably a lot of folks think they don't have a lot to be thankful for but if each of us just takes time out to enumerate our many blessings perhaps we'd see things in a new light.

What is there that even the least fortunate of us has to be happy and grateful about?

One might start out merrily by holding his hand before his face and wiggling the fingers. Do they move? Good . . . you're alive. Thats' something, and one can always be grateful for that, especially if one's health is good.

Next, take a look out the window. It may be a grey, dreary day but the landscape is pleasing to the eye — and that landscape is in a country that offers more opportunity than any other in the world, even in this late age.

You may see a church somewhere in that landscape—there's another thing for which you can be mighty grateful. In some lands there isn't the tolerance of various religions we have here. All of us, regardless of our beliefs, are free to worship as we choose, any time we chose.

You couldn't do that in Saudi Arabia . . . Columbia, South America . . . Spain, and other countries in the news nowadays.

In our own neck of the woods some of us aren't so prosperous nowadays. A combination of things has caused this.

I don't suppose any of us up here are rich. Even that might be something to be thankful for, even though it might be nice to be able to do our worrying in comfort and style, for a change!

There's one thing all of us who are deeply in the red can be thankful for — there are no debtors' prisons in the U.S.A. They can't put you in jail for being poor.

Most of us are comfortable and well fed, regardless of our circumstances. Some of us may be having wild game dinners for Thanksgiving.

In many countries only the rich can afford these things. The average man there can't go out and bag a fine buck or a brace of birds if he wants to. True, it costs plenty to hunt here, too — but if you have the do-re-mi you're free to hunt, anyway.

Let's keep it that way here, shall we?

Our servicemen are still scattered all over the globe but none of them are lying in muddy, cold foxholes fighting and dying so that we can sit down to a big meal to eat ourselves groggy Thanksgiving.

We're at peace, even though it is an uneasy peace. There may be men at lonely outposts keeping watch over us — but they'll be fairly comfortable and will eat well even though they are a long way from home and lonesome for the home folks.

Probably a lot of people call this column "Draper's Gripe Corner" but it isn't true this time.

I can't think of anyone who has more to be thankful for this Thanksgiving than the missus and I.

Perhaps we aren't well off financially but we're still "eating pretty high on the haug."

But, most of all, we're thankful that, on Thanksgiving Day, we'll be taking our little boy to church with us for the first time. He'll be baptized at the Thanksgiving services that morning.

We waited a long time for him to come along. Regardless of whatever other circumstances affecting us, how else could we be but thankful that he's here on this day? So long!

TOO LITTLE, TOO LATE is the way we Dodge dealers feel about competitors' efforts to match the Swept-Wing 58. They lowered the roof some, but left the sides high. Their windshields got smaller while ours got bigger. So much for styling. Then, for another important comparison, take ride. Here's Dodge with Torsion-Aire suspension that just about everybody admits is the greatest advance in sway-free, dip-free, silent going that any car offers. So what do these other cars do? They borrow an air suspension system that's been used in buses for two years! (Costing well over $100.00 extra.) And most of 'em still don't have push-button driving—much less Dodge TorqueFlite—the proven automatic transmission. If you're a little disappointed in the '58 version of your car, come on in and see our Swept-Wing 58. The others are catching on—but they can't catch up.

Rural Art Show at 'U' Scheduled for January 14 to 17

To Be Conducted at Farm and Home Week on U & St. Paul Campus

Minnesota's rural artists will have an opportunity to compete for Centennial awards and to exhibit their work in the seventh annual rural art show to be held during the University of Minnesota's Farm and Home week on the St. Paul campus Jan. 14-17.

Anyone living in rural Minnesota or in a Minnesota town of less than 15,000 is eligible to exhibit. The show will be confined to recent original work in all types of painting, sculpture and the graphic arts. Each artist will be limited to two original entries not previously exhibited in the rural art show.

The Minnesota State Centennial commission is awarding three prizes this year of $100, $50 and $25 for the best entries. On the jury judging all entries will be Urban Couch, instructor, Minneapolis School of Art; C. A. Gayne, head, department of art education, and Mrs. Katherine Nash, director, University Gallery, University of Minnesota.

Entry rules and application forms for art exhibitors may be obtained by writing to Rudolph Johnson, Agriculture Library, University of Minnesota, St. Paul 1. Exhibits must reach the Agriculture Library by January 6 or sooner.

Paintings and other art will be on display in the agriculture library on the St. Paul campus during all of Farm and Home Week. Special programs planned for each day of the rural art show will include gallery tours, discussions of the exhibits, demonstrations and lectures on painting by staff members of the Minneapolis School of Art and the University of Minnesota.

The rural art show is one of many special features of the University's Farm and Home week, the University Institute of Agriculture's annual open house for Minnesota people. Some 40 different sessions during the week will deal with nearly every phase of agriculture and homemaking, according to J. O. Christianson, director of agricultural short courses and general chairman for the week. Well known speakers are scheduled to appear on noon convocation programs. Some evening activities are also being arranged for Farm and Home week visitors. Write to Director, Agricultural Short Courses, University of Minnesota, Institute of Agriculture, St. Paul 1, for complete program for the week.

Rural Art Show at 'U' in January

This year's seventh Rural Art Show on the University of Minnesota's St. Paul campus will be a part of the Minnesota Centennial celebration. Here Rudolph Johnson, co-chairman of the rural art committee, looks at a painting hung in a recent rural art show, "The Farm," by Arnold Kramer of Wabasso. In the background is a painting, "Bill's Old Barn," by Harvey Bernard, Chatfield, another recent exhibitor.

Minnesota—The Name

Minnesota derived its name from the river "Minnesota" so called by the Dakota Indians. They pronounced it "Min-nee-sotah" (Mini, water; sotah, whitishly clouded, sky-colored).

For correct pronunciation, the convention held at Stillwater in 1848, to secure a territorial organization, instructed its delegates that the name of the Territory be written "Minnesota."

Young Dairyman Needs Good Cows

Ten thousand pounds of milk annually—that's what each cow needs to produce to make dairying pay for a young farmer after his first five years in the business.

The average dairy cow in Minnesota produced 6,200 pounds of milk in 1955.

But success at dairying takes even more than "heavy milkers." Every young farmer to make a careful study of his farm before picking a business.

A recent University of Minnesota publication, YMW circular 11, "Starting Dairy Farming" by Ralph Wayne, extension dairyman at the University of Minnesota, lists several questions that need to be answered before a farmer starts a dairy herd:

1. Do you like dairy farming? A farmer who doesn't enjoy working with cattle isn't apt to do well in dairying.
2. Do you have dairying experience? Dairy farming takes a lot of "know-how."
3. Will dairying fit your farm? Fields and buildings must be big enough to support a profitable herd. Barn and milkhouse need good, up-to-date equipment to handle high quality milk. And the soil must be in shape to raise legumes for good pasture and hay.
4. Can you finance a dairy business? If you're low on capital, it might be better to start out with a different farming business until you're better able to go into dairy farming.
5. Is there a good local market for milk? Does the local plant pay a premium for top quality dairy products?

Dairy farming is undergoing a lot of changes. There are many herds of 40 or more dairy cows in Minnesota. And 400-pound annual butterfat yields are as common as 300-pound herds were 25 years ago.

Fattening Beef

If you put them on a "full-feed" right away, 400-pound steer calves that you buy this fall can average 1,000 pounds and be ready for market by mid-August, 1958.

Heifer calves on the same type of feeding program can be finished at about 850 pounds and marketed even earlier.

A full-feeding plan would include about 11-15 pounds of ground ear corn, 1.5 pounds soybean oil meal with 5 milligrams stilbestrol mixed in and 2-3 pounds of alfalfa hay per calf daily. R. E. Jacobs, extension livestock specialist at the University of Minnesota, says experiments have shown that calves on such a ration can gain up to 2.4 pounds daily. And with corn at $1.15 per bushel, feed costs for that kind of gain wouldn't be more than 15 cents per pound of gain.

But whether such a full-feeding system is best for your farm depends on your hay and pasture situation. If you have no pasture or hay land to be used by beef cattle next summer, full-feeding this winter is a good idea.

If you have fields that must be pastured next summer, though, it will be better to winter calves on a ration that won't bring such rapid gains but makes efficient use of roughages. Feed calves all the alfalfa or corn silage they will eat, along with 3 pounds of alfalfa hay and 3 pounds of ground ear corn daily. The calves also need a free-choice mineral mixture.

In recent Minnesota experiments, steer calves fed over winter on that type of ration gained 1-1.25 pounds daily. Similar results are possible by substituting oats silage for corn or alfalfa silage.

With heifers on such a program, you can feed all the silage you have, than put the animals on pasture next spring and increase the grain as fast as they will take it. Steers fed this way could best be put on pasture in spring and fed 3-5 pounds of ground ear corn until about July 15. Then feed could be increased until the steers are up to full feed and about September 1-15 the steers would be taken off pasture and finished in drylot for 60 days.

Choose a Good Boar

The old saying that the boar is "half the herd" is as true as ever in the hog business.

It's important to have a boar with good general health and the ability to pass on good "profit-making" characteristics to little pigs.

Pick a meat-type boar with plenty of "stretch." Look for good length with a deep belly, more join, and usually more udder sections.

If your sows are too leggy or shallow, chose a boar from a herd of deep bodied hogs.

A boar needs strong bones, straight feet and legs, but avoid either light or big, raw, bones.

It's best to get a boar from a litter that had at least seven healthy, surviving pigs. If less pigs survived, there may be a lack of vigor in the boar.

Make sure of the boar's health before buying. Watch out for brucellosis, shy breeding, necro, rhinitis or swollen joints. Also check for masculinity, with good temperament and disposition.

Check the boar's dam, if possible. She should be an outstanding sow with good health and with at least 10 well-developed teats. Twelve or 14 are even better.

A final bit of advice: If you have an established herd, Zavoral says it's wise to use two boards— one that you know is satisfactory and a new one that you are putting on trial for a performance check.

4-H Club Meets

The New Solum 4-H Club held their November meeting Thursday night. Pres. Robert Dahl presided. The treasurer reported that a payment had been made of one-third of the indebtedness for the school building they purchased. The Christmas planning was left until a later date because of the absence of some of the members. The Roy Copeland family served lunch.

On Sunday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Engvald Dahl and Elaine Hellquist met with Mrs. Elmer Kron at her home to make out the 4-H yearly program books.

Sunday afternoon visitors at the Edwin Quam home were Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Quam and Michele of Thief River Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Anderson attended the turkey supper at the Lutheran Church in Viking Saturday evening.

Mrs. Percy Hagen and sons visited with Mrs. John Lang at Thief River Falls Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Granum and children of Grand Forks spent Sunday at the Emil Blomberg and Helmer Kalbakdalen homes.

A caller Saturday evening with the Irwin Johnson's was Mr. J. E. Johnson of rural Red Lake Falls.

We are sorry to report that Peder Sabo was taken to the hospital on Saturday. Mrs. Minnie Albaugh has also been hospitalized for two weeks for treatment. A card would cheer these aged shut-ins.

Mrs. John Doran, JoAnn and Myrna of Newfolden called at the Emil Hellquist and Melvin Bottem homes Saturday. Mr. Doran was in Minneapolis for Dad's day at the U. of Minn. His son Rodney is a freshman.

Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Hagen of Thief River Falls were Sunday dinner guests at the Percy Hagen home. Afternoon visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Williams of rural Thief River Falls.

A crew filled silo on the Emil Hellquist farm on Saturday finishing Monday. Silo filling on the farm is not generally news but when it's done on November 25th it becomes newsworthy.

Lincoln Quint to Open Play Friday in Tilt at Roseau

According to present plans, coach Al Adams intends to send an all-veteran team on the floor Friday night as the basketball Prowlers open their 1957-58 schedule by meeting the Roseau Rams at Roseau.

While the Roseau Rams have been on the Prowler schedule every year since 1945, all of these games have been played on the local floor. Not since the ever-victorius season of 1937-38, when the state championship-bound Prowlers barely edged out the Rams, 19 to 18, have the locals played on the Roseau court.

Roseau high school has just completed a fine new gymnasium with a spacious playing court, and it's probable that the Rams and the Prowlers will be exchanging their games from now on.

The Prowlers, when they take the floor on Friday night, will be attempting to run their consecutive win streak over the Rams to eleven games. It was way back in 1946 that the Rams were successful in scoring a win over the Prowlers, defeating the locals by a 46 to 40 score.

In last year's tilt, the Prowlers recorded a 74 to 56 win over the Rams. That 74-point total being the highest score that the Prowlers have tallied in their series with Roseau.

Life Insurance Death Benefits up

$33,409,000 Is Paid in State in 9 Months of '57

Minnesota families received $33,400,000 in life insurance death benefit payments in the first nine months of this year compared with $26,763,000 in the corresponding period of last year, the Institute of Life Insurance reported Wednesday.

The number of policies becoming claims in the first nine months was 15,775, which compares with 14,467 in the corresponding period of 1956.

"The tremendous rise in life insurance buying and the increase in ownership in recent years are reflected in these current payments, "Holgar J. Johnson, Institute president, said in announcing the figures. "For the country as a whole, death benefits paid in the first nine months of this year were $194,860,000 greater than in the corresponding period of last year and $981,377,000 more than in the first nine months of 1947, an increase of 98 percent. The health record among policyholders has actually improved in the past ten years, but life insurance ownership has much more than doubled in these years."

Death benefit payments in this state in the first three quarters of 1957 compare with $16,967,000 in the corresponding period of 1947.

Of this year's nine month aggregate death benefit payments in this state, $22,659,000 was under 7,483 ordinary insurance policies; $9,366,000 was under 3,842 group life insurance certificates; and $1,384,000 was under 4,450 industrial insurance policies.

We'll Have Senior Hockey

After an absence of several years, senior hockey fans will have the opportunity of again watching the Thieves as they compete in league play. For the past couple of seasons the Thieves have operated on an independent basis, but on Sunday night, in a meeting held here, they joined with Roseau, Crookston, Grand Forks, and Fargo to form the Northwest Hockey league for 1957-58.

The league will be a strictly home-talent and amateur league, and that's perhaps the only salvation for senior hockey in these parts nowadays. The "big money" days in hockey are gone.

Remember those senior hockey seasons of 1952-53-54, and the caliber of hockey that was produced? It was expensive, but it was perhaps worth the cost.

We can recall that classy Thieves outfit of 1952-53, with Jack McGill in goal, Tony Dorn, Rob Amundson, Danny Summers, and Lloyd Johnson comprising the defensive contingent, centers were Church Russell and Murray Balagus, and the wings were Ron Castelane, Jerry Lavergne, Paul Bedard, and Darryl Lund.

The following year this club was bolstered by the presence of Bill Juzda, undoubtedly the most colorful player to ever perform for the Thieves (and we are not forgetting Mark McCafery, either). In addition, the 1953-54 club had the sometime help of Bill Robinson. Robinson, when in the proper mood, was capable of playing hockey like a NHL star. He was an expert stickhandler and playmaker.

While it is for sure that the senior hockey that will be played in the Northwest Hockey league this season will not approach the finesse exhibited by the pro's of the early days, you can be sure that the locals will put out more effort and desire than did the play-for-pay boys.

The local club, with most of the city's top flight players playing with the Rochester Mustangs, will have to rely on such sturdy veterans as Paul Bedard, Mouse Eiteland, and Jack McGill, plus the assistance from such former Prowler hockey players as Sid Vraa, Glenn Carlson, Mike McMahon, and others who are attending college.

Two from the Eighth

Only two players from the eighth region were named to the All-State football squad selected by a state-wide advisory board of newspaper sports editors for radio station WCCO in Minneapolis. Carl Erickson of Bemidji, at left tackle; and Ken Wold of Crookston, at left halfback, were the two regional players honored. The two were picked to the offensive unit. Other offensive team players were Roger Sinner, Fergus Falls, end; Bob Falls, Brainerd, and Tom Cooper, Rochester, guards; Tom Hecimovich, Coleraine, tackle; Ron Siegmund, St. Cloud, center; John Wherley, International Falls, end; Steve Malnar, Red Wing, quarterback; Gary Fabel, Wheaton, halfback; and Tom King, Edina, fullback.

We do think, though, that the defensive unit would have been bolstered by the presence of Kenny Sauve of the Prowlers. Kenny the Bull was a good one.

The Season Opener

On Friday night, on the new playing floor at Roseau, the basketball Prowlers will open their 1957-58 cage schedule. And, with a squad that is loaded with tournament-wise players, prospects are bright and shiny and hopes are high.

It is probable that the Prowlers will be a slow starting team, for with the loss of Keith Johnson, coach Al Adams has been forced to reshuffle his lineup and offense. Keith, who was one of the most finely-coordinated athletes ever to play for Lincoln high, transferred to Grafton, where he will play with Ed Claussens' Spoilers, was the play maker for last year's Prowlers.

It will take some time and several games for the back court boys on this years' team — Jimmy Bennes, Ken Jones, Mickey Hanson, Lynn Nicholson, and Harlie Drees — to develop the proper timing and confidence needed to set up the scoring plays for the front line.

By the way, why not drive up to Roseau on Friday night for the game? They have a new gymnasium, of which the Roseau fans are rightly proud, and coach Ambrose Kramer will put a pretty strong Ram club on the floor, too.

Two Drug Stores Hold Contest for Arizona Vacation

James Parkins, of Parkins Corner Drugs today announced that his store is taking part in the "Winter Vacations for two in Sun Country" contest sponsored by the Merit Drug Stores. This year, three lucky winners and their companions will enjoy "June-in-January" temperatures at the Paradise Inn in Phoenix, Arizona.

J & B Drugs also is taking part in the contest. Three lucky winners, and their three lucky companions will have a free round trip flight from Minneapolis, to Phoenix via Western Airlines "Champagne Flight". In Phoenix they'll stay for five wonderful days at the Paradise Inn.

"There's a good chance that someone right here in Thief River Falls will win one of these trips" said Parkins "because this is a regional contest". There's nothing to buy, nothing to write, just register at Parkins Corner or J & B drug store. And you don't have to be any special place to win!

The winners of the contest will be announced Christmas Day.

N.W. Hockey League Formed Here Sunday

A schedule-making meeting of the newly-organized Northwest Hockey league will be held at Crookston on Friday night. The league held its organizational meeting here on Sunday night, and the following teams were given memberships in the circuit—Thief River Falls, Crookston, Roseau, Grand Forks, and Fargo.

Bert Pierce of Crookston, a veteran of northwest hockey, was named president of the league; Darwin (Gus) Ferrier of Thief River Falls was chosen vice-president; and George Martin of Crookston was selected as secretary-treasurer.

The five-team league will be a bona fide home-talent loop, with the teams being restricted by a 20-mile radius in building up their respective player rosters. It is planned, too, to arrange the schedule in such a manner that the league games will be slated for the weekend, with Saturday night, Sunday afternoon, and Sunday night's being the game dates.

The league, at its meeting here on Sunday, also voted to join the American Amateur Hockey association.

Garden Valley Phone Rates Are Unchanged

During the last few weeks articles have appeared in the papers concerning Bell Telephone company's request to the railroad and warehouse commission for higher telephone rates. It seems that many Garden Valley subscribers have gotten the impression that their rates will automatically be increased if Bell is granted an increase by the commission, said Carl M. Ostby, manager.

This is not possible, he said. If Garden Valley were to increase rates the company must first go before the commission and show cause or necessity for such increase and then get an order from the Commission allowing the requested increase. The Garden Valley Company is a company in its own right and is not affected by Bell's request for an increase in telephone rentals.

If Bell Telephone Company requests and gets an increase in toll rates, such request might affect Garden Valley subscribers in so far as they make toll calls over Bell's nation wide toll circuits.

Despite the fact that Garden Valley telephone rates are now compared to those of many other companies in the Northwest, there is no apparent need for rate increases at the present, said Ostby. The Company's financial condition is good, it is making its loan payments on time, in fact it has made a $50,000 payment over and above the regular quarterly payments required under its loan contract with the government.

A sound financial situation for the future is indicated by the constant growth of the company. The demand for telephone service is constantly on the increase. In tabular form the picture as to number of phones in service looks like this:

December 1945	5,113

The demand for telephones has been particularly heavy this year and it is estimated that by the end of this year the September figure will be boosted to 6,620 telephones. Use of toll service has increased from an average of $4.74 per telephone per year in 1945 to an average of $14.87 per telephone per year in 1957.

All indications point to a continued low telephone rate for the Garden Valley Telephone Company, and unless the dollar depreciates much further in value, according to Company officials, no rate increase will be necessary.

Winter Weather Brings Warning on Carbon Monoxide

Avoid Exhaust Fumes from Car Engines, Warns Highway Department

The Minnesota highway department today issued a warning throughout the state to its citizens to be especially cautious to avoid exhaust fumes from automobile engines, now that cold weather is upon us.

Carbon-Monoxide, a bi-product combustion, is a poisonous gas. Automobile owners should have the exhaust systems on their cars checked to insure there are no leaks in the muffler or exhaust pipe which would allow exhaust fumes to seep into the interior of the car.

Drivers are also cautioned against leaving car engines running for long periods of time with the car stationary and the windows closed.

"Adequate ventilation is a necessity to prevent carbon monoxide poisoning," the department warned. "Carbon monoxide is a tasteless, colorless, oderless gas. Very often it is undetectable until it is too late. If you are motoring and feel signs of sickness, nausea, dizziness or ringing in the ears, you should stop the car at once and get out into the fresh air before continuing."

Yawning or headaches were also cited as symptons of carbon monoxide poisoning. The department further expressed its concern for motorists who leave their cars running in closed garages while waiting for the machine to warm up.

"Very often," the warning stated, "this is done in the morning while the car owner is finishing breakfast. By the time he gets to the garage, most or all of the oxygen has been replaced by carbon monoxide and it doesn't take long for a person to be overcome."

The warning closed with a plea to the public to avoid trouble by keeping areas around car engines well ventilated.

Bridge Engineer to Be Liaison Man for Highway Dept.

Paul Swenson, general engineer in the Minnesota highway department's bridge division, was appointed today by Commissioner L. P. Zimmerman to be a liaison officer between the chief bridge engineer and consulting firms performing bridge design work for the department.

Zimmerman said a liaison agency was required for close contact between the bridge division and the more than a dozen private engineering firms engaged to help prepare bridge plans. Employment of the consulting firms was necessitated by the department's inability to obtain enough bridge engineers for its expanding trunk highway design and construction program, he said.

Swenson has been in the state highway department for two decades, as a draftsman, engineering aide and civil engineer. He has been in the bridge division for 14 years.

Minnesota Traffic Fatality Rate Rises

Minnesota's traffic fatality rate for 1957 jumped about four per cent as a result of the high traffic toll of 75 deaths during October.

For several months, the state had a low rate, around 4.6 fatalities for each 100 million vehicle miles driven in the state. However, this rate climbed to 4.8 for the first nine months, and climbed again to an even 5.0 for the first 10 months.

The figure at the end of October, 5.0 is only one tenth of a point below the final figure of 1956. For that year, the traffic toll of 640 deaths resulted in a rate of 5.1 deaths for each 100 million miles. However, for both years, 1956 and 1957, the death rate is below the previous five-year average of 5.26.

Reports from official investigating officers continue to show that too much alcohol and too much speed are leading factors in fatal traffic accidents. Exceeding the speed limit or driving at speeds too fast for conditions were indicated in 27 of the fatal crashes during October.

Drinking was listed as a factor in 18 fatal accidents; while the driver or pedestrian involved was described as "under the influence" in the majority of the crashes.

These factors brought a warning from the Minnesota highway department that December is the deadliest month of the year for these two violations. Holiday hazards of speed too fast for conditions and drinking drivers, along with adverse weather conditions, are contributing factors in almost all fatal holiday accidents. Special studies of fatal accidents occurring during the Christmas holiday showed that 55 per cent involved drinking; almost double the percentage found in all fatal accidents.

"If a madman were to come into this room with a stick in his hand no doubt we should pity the state of his mind, but our primary consideration would be to take care of ourselves. We should knock him down first, and pity him afterward."

—Samuel Johnson

Concentrated Sunshine

Our good friends the Australians are experimenting with the harvesting of a crop of heat taken directly from the sun's rays. The pilot model of a solar furnace has successfully passed its initial test and the down-under scientists are hopeful that their house of mirrors will be able to concentrate the heat of the sun to a temperature of more than 4,000 degrees Centigrade.

This may properly be classified as a direct from producer to consumer deal. The sources of heat upon which we have come to depend, such as coal and oil, are also concentrated sun rays, but concentrated by a slower process, extending over many centuries.

The direct deal appeals to us, providing a dependable service can be assured. It would please us mightily to be able to thumb our bulbous nose at the fellows who sell us concentrated sunshine in the form of coal and oil. For the time being, however, we are maintaining friendly relations with them.

United on Foreign Policy

President Eisenhower is to be commended for inviting Adlai Stevenson to participate as a representative of the administration in the coming NATO meetings in Paris. And Adlai Stevenson is to be commended for accepting the invitation and expressing his willingness to cooperate in this important, and perhaps critical, meeting.

The selection of Stevenson is a recognition of his personal integrity and capacity. Stevenson's mission will not be personal, however. He will participate as a representative of the majority party in Congress, and in that capacity he will speak both with authority and responsibility.

This example of cooperation among the leaders of both parties in our approach to our difficult international problems is most encouraging. It offers a proof of unity that strengthens our position immeasurably thruout the world.

In the heat of the political campaign that is ahead of us there will be the usual partisan bitterness that divides us in a campaign year. From both sides there will be constant blasting of charges and counter-charges, some justified and most of them unjustified. To many foreigners, who do not understand our democratic processes, it will sound like we really hate each other.

If we can keep questions of foreign policy out of this knock-em-down and drag-em-out battle of words, the international problem is going to be much less difficult for whichever side survives.

Lower Cost Power

Missouri River power is now providing electrical service in the city of Thief River Falls. The current is being delivered to us through the distributing system of Minnkota Power Cooperative, which serves the R.E.A. cooperatives in a large area of Minnesota and North Dakota.

This power comes to us considerably cheaper than what it costs us to produce power in our own plant. Delivered to our board, it will cost less than three-quarters of a cent per kilowatt-hour. Produced in our own engines this cost is one cent for fuel oil alone.

The savings should be substantial and, as we get through paying for the engines we have bought, the lower cost can become a big factor in relieving the city's financial burden.

There is not ample Bureau power at this time to provide for all of our needs, which probably is fortunate. There will be unusual problems to contend with during the period of changeover and possibly some inconveniences. Coming gradually, the adjustments can be taken in stride with less difficulty.

The acquiring of lower cost power is a long step forward in the development of the city, and this fact will be appreciated more and more as time goes on. There have been some reasonable differences of opinion as to whether or not this step should have been taken. The confusion can be attributed largely to the failure of some to take into consideration the different factors involved in the business of producing power and in its distribution and sale.

The city retains its profitable power and light business under this new arrangement. And as the city is able to buy the power that it sells, for less than it costs to manufacture it, the business of distribution and sale will become increasingly profitable.

By Infiltration

Art Suel of the New Prague Times wisely observes that "those organizations whose principal purpose seems to be stirring up discord, distrust and disunity, usually pick out the fanciest, most altruistic, most patriotic sounding names." And it may also be observed that these organizations usually have leaders who have been identified with subversive activities of various kinds.

The Communist Front in our country moves forward by infiltration. Rockets and intercontinental missiles are not the enemy's most dangerous weapons.

"Regent" Resigns

The Minneapolis Tribune discloses that Representative John Blatnik has been a member of the "board of regents" of a one-man university that is being investigated by the postoffice department for trying to peddle a cancer cure by mail. The Iron Range congressman is said to have resigned as a "regent" when he learned that the company was in trouble. He would have nothing to do with such goings-on.

We are sure nothing further will be done about the matter, but it would be interesting to know just how Representative Blatnik happened to get mixed up with an organization of this kind in the first place. Had the situation been reversed we are sure the blatant Mr. Blatnik would now be pounding on the table demanding a congressional investigation.

Prevention and Protection

(Ed Morrison, Morris Tribune)

There is something a little more eerie about the sound of a fire siren in the wintertime that makes a person stop and wonder if the furnace at home or if some sparks might have set the roof afire.

Not that a fire is a pleasant prospect even in the summertime. It isn't. However the thought of people being driven out into the cold always makes a winter fire seem so much worse.

So this is written with the thought of encouraging a little more precaution with heating equipment so that fires may be avoided. And, while we're not in the insurance business, we know form experience that in today's rising economy most of us are apt to be underinsured.

Perhaps all fires cannot be prevented, and certain keepsakes cannot be replaced, but every homeowner should have insurance adequate to cover today's value of his home.

The Lantern

(New York Times)

This used to be the season when the farmer did his chores by lantern light, morning and evening. Nowadays electricity lights the barn and the barnyard in all but the most remote rural areas, but almost any farmer with gray in his hair can recall the days of the kerosene lantern. And so can his wife.

The farm wife knew it well. She saw that its tank was kept filled with kerosene, that its wick was trimmed or renewed, that its globe was clean.

The lantern lighted the way to the barn, the corn crib, the hen house, the woodshed. It hung on its peg in the barn while the milking was done. When a trip had to be made after dark the lantern sometimes hung from the end of the wagon tongue to light the way feebly. More often it sat at the driver's feet, under the robe, to help fend off chilblains. It was better than an open torch or a candle. But nobody regretted its passing. And nobody who ever did the chores by lantern light has forgotten. Particularly in short dayed November.

An Unexpected Invader

Not an invader from Mars, but just as unexpected and as startling an invader of an different type, is what confronted Daryl Lewis midmorning on Monday, when he was about to put some wood in the basement furnace. Evidently, as the night grew dark and colder, the creature, seeking warmth, had forced in a basement window and tumbled down the cement wall. After a few cautious, panic-filled moments of unsuccessfully trying to evict the unwanted one without hurting his feelings, Dead-Eye Daryl resorted to the aid of a .22, which served its purpose well. The invader? A hugh genuine skunk! The Lewises will again receive callers anytime after the middle of the week.

100 years ago the average American could expect to live about 40 years. Today—about 70. Modern sanitation, diet, drugs and medical practice have added 30 years to our life span. And note that 70 is average. Many die sooner. Many live longer. You up your chances of being a "longer" if you eat properly and get proper medical care. This means periodic check-ups by your physician. As pharmacists we are pleased to help by supplying the drugs your doctor prescribes—drugs unknown a century ago. AS YOUR Dr. Salsbury's DEALER . . . let me talk to you about

Large Roundworms

This common kind of worm affects poultry indoors as well as out. Warm houses and deep litter can make a snug home for parasites, costing you many dollars in unthrifty production.

My Recommendation: Give laying birds regular treatments with Wazine®, Dr. Salsbury's quality piperazine medication for large roundworms. Liquid Wazine goes in the drinking water, provides quick, easy treatment for about one-fifth cent per bird. Works for hogs, too. Get dependable Wazine now.

Blue Shield on its 10th ANNIVERSARY reports to the people of Minnesota

10 years of service to you...

TEN YEARS AGO, Minnesota Doctors of Medicine organized the Blue Shield Plan. It was a well conceived plan. Its aim: to help you, your family, your neighbors find a workable, low-cost way to pre-pay the cost of medical, surgical, and maternity care.

Blue Shield has filled that vital need. In the past decade, record numbers of Minnesotans have received some form of medical, surgical or obstetrical care. The benefits they've received have meant not only thorough care for illness and injury...but a longer, healthier, more rewarding life for many.

Has Blue Shield answered your needs? We believe it has, for in just 10 years, more than 850,000 Minnesotans have joined Blue Shield for the help it provides in paying the costs of medical-surgical-maternity care. The graph shows how rapidly membership has grown.

Has Blue Shield provided the medical-surgical-maternity care benefits you want? Its record of increased benefits and expanded coverage certainly shows it has. In the past 10 years, benefits have been increased for more than 200 services, and coverage for many additional types of care has been added. And, in 1954, Blue Shield made a second higher benefit medical-surgical-maternity care plan available.

Has Blue Shield been of value to you? Minnesota Blue Shield in 10 years has paid out more than $55,000,000 in the form of medical-surgical-maternity care benefits!

Has Blue Shield been of real service to you? Just one example will tell you: Blue Shield has helped pay the maternity care costs for more than 111,000 new babies...more than the total population of a city the size of Duluth!

This is a 10-year record of service made possible by the support and cooperation which you, the people of Minnesota, have continually demonstrated. And it is a record which merits your continuing support.

Doorbells Are Ringing Today in Chest Drive

Campaign Opens in Residential and Rural Areas Today

Doorbells in the city will be ringing tonight when Community Chest solicitors begin their week-long drive in the city residential districts, according to Rev. Otto Dale, Community Chest drive chairman.

Mrs. John Wettestead and Mrs. Alfred M. Johnson are co-chairwomen of the residential drive. Solicitors are asked to report to the city auditorium today between 2 and 4 or 7 and 9 p.m. to pick up their packets before going into their drive areas.

Mrs. Wettestead said the time given for checking in solicitations in Thursday Times story was erroneous and that the correct time for checking in will be 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday in the Auditorium. It is hoped that the drive in the residential districts will have been completed by Saturday.

Also beginning today is the governmental offices drive under the direction of Paul Anderson. Like the residential drive, this is also to be completed Saturday, as is the drive in rural Pennington county, beginning today under the direction of Paul Engelstad.

A check with the co-chairmen of the business and industrial drives this morning revealed that solicitors in these two phases of the Community Chest campaign have not turned in their packets at yet, so no indication of how the drive is progressing at present is available.

Both Orin Green and M. C. Gulbranson said the drive was going satisfactorily considering the late start of the campaign this year. The 1957 drive is scheduled for completion Saturday in order that it does not conflict with the Christmas rush season here.

Some clean-up work may be needed which would carry the drive into a third week, although drive chairmen did not indicate this would necessarily be the case.

Howver it may be necessary to continue the business drive a day or so this week due to the Thanksgiving holiday last Thursday, Orin Green said, although Gulbranson did not say it would be necessary in the industrial drive.

Petit Jury Not to Report for Duty until Wednesday

Due to legal technicalities that developed late last week, the petit jury summons in Pennington county district court was postponed by Judge Paul A. Lundgren from this morning to Wednesday morning, December 4, at 10 o'clock. Henry Storhaug, clerk of court, stated that the first case to be tried will be that of Joseph Miskoday vs. Burrill Hotel Corp. et al., to be followed by the case of Jack Rosen vs. Rev. John O'Toole and the Thief River Falls Flying club.

Red Lake Dam Being Shut Down Two Weeks

Flows from Red Lake Dam at the outlet of Lower Red Lake is being cut to about 100 second-feet for a 2-week period beginning November 29. The reduced flow will permit entry of Corps of Engineers survey equipment to a conservation dam on the Red Lake River about 10 miles below Red Lake dam.

Information was furnished by Colonel Desloge Brown, district engineer, U. S. Army Engineer District, St. Paul, who is in charge of a wide variety of civil works and military construction projects in a three-state area.

The conservation dam is a part of the Red Lake-Clearwater flood control project which was largely completed in 1951. Located at the upper end of a section of improved channel, the low-head rock and brush dam was built to prevent lowering of water in the adjacent reservation marshes, but has gradually deteriorated from scour.

Colonel Brown pointed out that waterfowl and muskrat habitat has been gradually reduced by unintentional drainage due to failure of the original dam. Survey crews will obtain foundation and topographic information so that the former dam can be replaced by a permanent concrete structure to improve adjacent marsh conditions.

Because this operation will temporarily strand some of the muskrat houses in that area, the plan was first cleared with the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

In agreeing to the operation,

Work Sought for Students at Area School

Part-time Jobs Are Needed by Those at Vocational School

Job placement and the development of job opportunities for students attending the area vocational school in Thief River Falls was the main topic of discussion at a recent meeting of the area vocational school employment committee. This committee, which was appointed by the school board, consists of Al Bacon, Roy Jorgenson, Les Ihle, John Peterson, Dennis Rolle, Mrs. Ruth Solheim and R. S. Eldevik.

The purpose of setting up this committee was to assist area vocational students in finding jobs and to publicize the availability of area vocational students for jobs with Thief River Falls and northwestern Minnesota employers. Eldevik will serve as chairman of the committee as the state employment office, of which he is the manager, will be the contact center or clearing house for students seeking jobs and employers seeking workers.

It was emphasized at the meeting that area vocational students are now seeking part-time jobs to help them defray the cost of room, board and incidentals; and that next summer these students will be seeking either permanent employment upon graduation or summer jobs pending return to school in the fall.

Stanley Nelson, director of the area vocational school, was in attendance at the meeting and stated that 85 post high school students and 64 high school students are currently attending classes at the school. He added that for a number of students the continuance of their schooling is contingent upon finding part-time employment. Mr. Eldevik reported that to date 18 students had been placed in part-time jobs through the employment service, but that many more jobs are needed by other students who are anxious and willing to work part-time. All students, with the exception of practical nurses, are available at 4 o'clock when school closes and for Saturday and evening work.

Employers who have need for part-time workers, or who may need help for only a few hours, are invited to call the state employment service. Individual committee members will also be glad to discuss employment of area vocational students with interested employers.

Land O'Lakes Here Handled 3,500,000 lbs. Turkeys in Fall

Processing Plant to Be Host to Grower-patrons at Dinner Wednesday

The Thief River Falls branch of Land O' Lakes Creameries will bring its turkey handling operation to a halt for this season Tuesday, December 3, after having shipped approximately 3,500,000 pounds of turkeys since the season started early in August, Stuart McLeod, manager, announced today.

Shipments this year, he added, are about 500,000 pounds higher than in 1956. Deliveries of the birds started this year earlier than ever before, and the processing plant has been operating steadily since August 15. October saw the largest volume, with 1,400,000 pounds being received that month.

McLeod stated that Land O' Lakes will be host to 160 producer patrons at a dinner in the Legion club rooms Wednesday evening, December 4, at 6:30. There will be no speeches, he added, but the Lions quartet will sing a group of selections.

Byron Graves Is New Chief of Red Lake Indian Tribe

Peter Graves' Grandson Third Member of Family to Head Red Lake Tribe

Byron Graves, a 34-year-old high school teacher, is the new chief of the 3,400-member Red Lake band of Chippewa Indians.

Graves, grandson of the man who guided organization of the half-million acre Red Lake Indian Reservation in 1918, was unanimously elected as chairman of the band's general council Thursday night in ceremonies at Red Lake.

Graves, who teaches at Pine River, Minn., while working for his master's degree at the University of Minnesota, follows in the steps of his father and grandfather as chief of the band.

His father, Joseph, died last Saturday. Joseph succeeded his own father, Peter Graves, the first chief of the Red Lake reservation.

The new chief pledged his life to the people and to preserving a closed reservation.

Red Lake is one of two closed reservations in the nation, having full control over all land within its boundaries. The reservation operates its own sawmill and fisheries.

This area failed to experience a white Thanksgiving last Thursday, as the light layer of snow that had arrived earlier had all disappeared. The weather was pleasant, with the mercury near the thawing point.

A group of B.P.O. Does members of Thief River Falls were invited to participate in the Bemidji Elks 50th anniversary celebration on Saturday, Nov. 23rd by presenting the hilarious skit "A Wife's Impression Of an Elks Initation" which they had put on during the state Elks convention in Thief River Falls in 1956. The cast included Mmes. Russell Williams, J. O. Botten, Frank Clinton, Karl Anderson, Alfred Johnson, Cecil Collins, Harry Ness, Loren Adolphson, Jake O'Hara, Gordon Johnson, Melvin Carlson, Henry Storhaug, Raymond Johnson.

They were guests of the Bemidji Elks at an afternoon reception for Elks wives held at the Lakeside Motel, one of the hostesses being Mrs. Helmer Baumann, formerly of this city. Following the reception a banquet was held for them at the V.F.W. Hall.

The evening's entertainment was a dance at the Elks club with the setting and decorations depicting 50 years ago, with waiters appropriately garbed in derby hats, plaid vests, etc. The dance program was interrupted at 10 p.m. with the "Mock Initation", which was received with thunderous applause from the audience. The cast was costumed in a variety of comic clothes to present their various stations.

The local Elks lodge was represented by Walter Jung, past president of the Minnesota State Elks association. An elaborate smorgasbord arranged by H. A. Baumann was served Friday evening, followed Saturday by the initiation of a class of 45 new members, and an evening banquet. Orrin Dokken, exalted ruler of the Bemidji lodge, presided over the exercises.

Bureau Power Opens Service Here Saturday

800 Kilowatts Now Being Supplied Will Rise Soon to 2,200

A significant milestone in the history of Thief River Falls was reached Saturday afternoon, when Missouri Valley power from the bureau of reclamation began to flow over the lines in this city, augmenting the production of the municipal power plant, now operating at near capacity.

At present, 800 kilowatts of bureau power is being supplied here, and this will be increased to 2,200 kilowatts during the peak load within the next three or four weeks when the necessary hookup is completed.

Morris Owen, chief engineer at the local plant, stated that the 2,200 kilowatts of bureau power will supply about one-half of the city's present peak load of 3,900 kilowatts, which is expected to hit the 4,000 mark during the Christmas holidays.

The Minnkota Power Co-op of Grand Forks, whose lines are being used to transport bureau power to Thief River Falls, completed its connections here Saturday noon, and the remaining work is within the city, Owen stated.

Electric service was interrupted on the east side for one hour and ten minutes during the change-over Saturday, while on the west side the current was off only 30 minutes.

Joy D. Larson and Roy Nordby Wed November 9

Joy Dianne Larson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Larson of Grygla and Roy Douglas Nordby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Nordby also of Grygla, were united in marriage Saturday, November 9 at the St. Olaf Lutheran church in Grygla. Rev. Arthur Dale performed the double ring ceremony in the presence of 175 friends and relatives.

Mrs. Emil Bolum presided at the organ for the traditional nuptial music. She also accompanied the soloist's, Mrs. Rodney Anderson, sister of the groom, as she sang "I Love You Truly" before the ceremony and Miss Charlene Nordby, cousin of the groom, who sang "O Perfect Love" as the couple knelt at the altar.

The bride, given in marriage by her father was attired in a floor length gown of white satin with a lace overskirt, featuring a sweetheart neckline with tiny buttons extending down the back and long sleeves which came to a point over the wrists. Her full bouffant skirt extended into a long train and she wore a fingertip veil held in place by a pearl crown. She carried a white Bible topped with a purple orchid and white stephanotis with white satin streamers. Her jewelry consisted of a peral necklace and earring set, a gift from the groom.

Sharon Baurdiff, friend of the bride, Marlys Barr, sister of the bride, and Moe Mootz, also a friend of the bride, were the maid of honor and bridesmaids, respectively. They wore identical princess style gowns of deep wine crystallete over taffeta with matching cummerbunds. Their bouquets were of white carnations and yellow roses with yellow satin streamers.

Serving as flower girl was Carol Nordby, sister of the groom. She wore a white taffeta dress with a net overskirt and carried a basket of yellow roses. The ringbearer was Lyle Newton, cousin of the bride, and he wore a light suit with a white carnation boutonniere. He carried the rings on a white satin pillow.

Gas Company Seeking Decision on Request to Serve N.W. Towns

Northern Natural Gas Company of Omaha today announced it is filing a motion with the Federal Power Commission aimed toward speeding the service of natural gas to 134 new communities in Iowa, Minnesota, South Dakota and Nebraska.

The company also stated it will file in December an application with the Commission for its 1958 construction program including service to 177 more new communities in Minnesota, Iowa, South Dakota, Nebraska, North Dakota, Illinois and Wisconsin.

Larry Shomaker, vice president, said the motion filed today asks that the company's 1957 application to serve 213 communities now being heard by the Federal Power Commission be severed so that the Commission can give prompt consideration to those 134 communities which seek service only from Northern.

The 79 other communities in the 1957 application placed themselves in a competitive situation when they said they would buy gas from Northern or Midwestern Gas Transmission Company which also has filed an application to serve them. Midwestern is a subsidiary of Tennessee Gas Transmission Company.

The competive situation resulted in the Commission consolidating for hearing the applications of the two companies plus those of other companies whose market areas Tennessee seeks to invade. This consolidation has resulted in one of the longest and most involved hearings ever held by the Commission and the delivery of natural gas to many of these competitive communities has been delayed for several years.

The delay prevented Northern from adding any of the 213 communities in time for this heating season.

Northern's motion stated although the hearings in the consolidated proceeding are still in progress the proposed service to the 134 non-competitive communities and additional gas to presently connected communities "is ripe for immediate decision by the Commission." All of the evidence on these communities has been introduced.

The motion points out that the gas distributors will face a severe scheduling problem and most of them must complete their financial arrangements and obtain delivery of materials before their construction work can even be begun.

An immediate decision by the Commission will permit careful planning and enable both Northern and distributors to effect substantial savings in construction costs which will benefit the public, the motion states.

Mr. Shomaker pointed out that the present hearing had not yet been concluded and that after all testimony had been received an extensive period of time would be required for filing of briefs and the rendering of the Examiner's initial decision. As a result the final decision respecting service to the competitive communities may be several months away.

"Northern can still bring gas to these competitive communities sooner than anyone else," he declared. "And at a much lower rate. We already have the pipe for the Duluth line on the ground and as soon as the Commission gives us the green light gas service to those communities will be a matter of days."

The application which Northern will file in December includes proposed service to 79 communities in Minnesota, 80 in Iowa, seven in Wisconsin, four in North Dakota, four in South Dakota, two in Nebraska and one in Illinois. Northern also will list in its application 12 more North Dakota communities which the company states it will seek to serve in a 1959 application.

The 1958 program would add 128 million cubic feet per day to Northern's pipeline capacity. Approximately 50 million cubic feet would go to present customers and the remainder to the 177 new communities.

Cost of this new program would be approximately $66,000,000.

The 177 new communities slated for gas service under this new program include Thief River Falls, Red Lake Falls and Crookston.

GROWING WITH YOUR CHILD

Institute of Child Welfare University of Minnesota

Fickle Fours

"What are you doing, Daddy?"

"I'm planting some mint."

"Does cement grow?"

"No."

"Then what are you planting it for?"

"I'm not planting cement."

"Then why are you digging that hole?"

This conversation between Harvey Thomas and his four year old son Tommy suggests both the joys and tribulations of life with four year olds. Curious seeking, gregarious, talkative, persistent, repetitive, assertive, expansive, imaginative. The adjectives fairly burst from the pen because the fours are in what is aptly termed a "growthsome" stage.

To describe them one fall easily into the same faults which characterize the four—there is a temptation to tell tall tales, to be ludicrous, to shift from one extreme to the other. They can count scarcely to four and yet they talk glibly of 88 or a million. They brag, "I betcha I could walk right up the side of that building" and can have you almost believing it if they can catch your eye with their open-faced, winsome, grinsome selves.

Then but a short time later with none of the braggadocio and much cuddly dependence, a reminder of their fourness, they snuggle into an incredible innocence which belies even four years of living.

Now Mr. Thomas cherishes his Tommy. He is glad that Tommy is interested in seeing a hole dug and even that he wants to know why it is being dug. He knows that Tommy mistook "some mint" for "cement" and he is well aware hat he could set him straight easily. But Mr. Thomas shows the wearying effect of Tommy's bombardment of questions and his fickle changing of the subject when Daddy gets mid-way along an explanation.

Like the bright lad who did not learn the names of all of the presidents because he suspected that once he succeeded he would have to learn all of the vice-presidents, Mr. Thomas knows that one thing will but lead to another and, for now, he wants just to dig his hole in peace. Fortunately Tommy is a fickle and resilient four who will be back with a fresh question shortly, and Daddy will have gained his "second" wind.

Shootin' the Breeze

BY Mack Draper

The last of the turkey is gone, the indigestion is past and now the emphasis is on the yule season. Local merchants were pleasantly surprised that shoppers didn't wait for the week-end the big Christmas promotion starts here but flocked to town in large numbers Friday.

The Minnesota Centennial Committee is trying to have the state's cold weather played down in the future as news of this is considered as negative publicity.

We noticed every radio station within receiving distance played up last week's cold wave for everything it was worth, tho! Well, weather makes news and a hundred centennial committees probably couldn't alter this fact.

Perhaps, though, the commentators could put the news ain a different way by saying "Another wave of that brisk, healthful arctic cold weather has washed across Minnesota to reinvigorate the lucky citizens of this fair state, etc., etc.

Any way you slice it, a cold wave is a cold wave, and it's going to be mighty hard to convince the Floridan he's missing something by not being here in winter!

What makes 'em marry so young? Insecurity, perhaps. Our world is in a precarious position these days so, in a way, one can hardly blame our modern teenagers for wanting to get their share of living before the roof falls in but—

Eighteen is pretty young for a man to take on the responsibility of heading a household. There's a heap of fun to be had as a single person up to 25—and there's an even greater heap of troubles to be had by taking on extra responsibilities so young.

But, we wish 'em luck—that kid brother of mine, and his bride, that is. I can well remember when he was born—that was the month Hitler's Wehrmacht overran Poland in 1939.

Yours truly hadn't taken his first factory job at that time and still had two years of peacetime life ahead before leaving for the army. The world looked good those days, despite the fracas in Europe, which turned into the "phony war" that lasted until 1940, after Poland went under.

The roof fell in then, and we've been in pretty much of a ratrace ever since, either fighting a war or trying to stave one off or getting ready for the next one.

If we of the generation that fought World War Two feel old, at times, we can boast several doggone good reasons!

The Community Chest residential drive starts today in Thief River Falls. It's a late start and the goal set for the county looks large—but, let's all remember that there are an awful lot of people less fortunate than we are in this country, and they are counting on our help, via the agencies supported by the Chest.

So, when the solicitor knocks on your door be as generous as possible. Someone, somewhere, a little child perhaps, will thank you from the bottom of his heart because your contribution gave him a lift in his adversity. So Long!

Mercury Slumps to —1 Early Today

Week's High Mark of 35 Was Thanksgiving Day

The Pennington county area continues to be fortunate in relatively balmy weather for this time of year but temperatures since Wednesday have been very much on the order of a see-saw—up and down, that is.

The high temperature registered by the KTRF weatherman was 35 Thursday and the low was today's 1-degree-below-zero, the coldest day of the season thus far.

Temperatures will continue on the low order with highs today to be in the 15-20 bracket and lows of 0 to 10 above tonight. Winds will be light today, becoming southeasterly 10-15 m.p.h. tonight.

The long-range forcast by the U. S. Weather Bureau calls for near normal temperatures and near-to-above normal precipitation for the next 30-day period in this area.

Two Aliens Picked up Here Saturday

Local Law Officers Hold Pair for Border Patrol

Two German aliens who got off a Lake of the Woods bus here Saturday were apprehended by Sheriff Charles Richards and Patrolman Ray Bren about 5:30 Saturday after authorities here had been requested to do so by the U. S. Border Patrol.

After receiving a request to pick up the two aliens a phone call disclosed the two wanted men had just left the Welch hotel and Bren located them in a local cafe. They were arrested outside the cafe shortly afterwards, Bren said.

The aliens were Siegfried Voelkel, 29, and Gohrnnis Muller, about 22, whose homes were given as somewhere in West Germany, although they have been reported to have been living in Canada the past four years. According to authorities the two have relatives living here.

After their arrest Saturday they were taken into custody by Border Patrolmen Ray Schultz and Roger Evenson and will probably be charged with illegal entry into the country.

Queen of Queens Will Be Chosen in State in January

All Girls 18 or Over Who Have Held Beauty Title Are Eligible to Compete

A state-wide search is on for Minnesota's Queen of Queens in a competition being conducted by the Upper Midwest Auto Show to be held in the Minneapolis Auditorium, January 3 through 12.

Rules of the contest specify only that any past or present beauty title holder 18 years of age or older is eligible to enter.

Reward to the winner will be a round-trip flight to Paris, France and appearance at the Auto Show, which is expected to draw more than 150,000 for the ten day event.

Max Winter, manager of the Auto Show, said eliminations will be held daily before the evening stage show, until a winner is chosen.

A panel of radio, television and newspaper personalities will assist in the selection, although a method of 'votes' will also be used. Winter said all girls will have an equal opportunity to win the title, and urged that entrants contact the Auto Show office, 620 Hennepin Avenue, Minneapolis and send in a photograph and full information as early as possible. Deadline for entry is 12:00 Midnight, December 25.

Keep up with the hometown news by reading the twice-a-week Thief River Falls Times.

Week's Events In Newfolden

Mrs. Clarence R. Hanson, Box 21 Phone 11

Rev. and Mrs. Amos Dyrud, Peter, Naomi, Rebecca and Samuel, were Thanksgiving Day guests at his parental home. His mother is Mrs. Marie Dyrud.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gast, Lance and Estelle of Argyle were among holiday guests at Mrs. Marie Dyrud's home.

Earnest Trockman and Clarence Hanson spent the Thanksgiving holiday with their respective families. They are employed in Fargo, N. D.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Collin and family were Wednesday afternoon callers at the Harold Myhre home in Warren.

Mr. Ingvald Larson, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Collin and family were guests at the Harvey Dyrud home on Thanksgiving Day.

Amos Dyrud's Home on Furlough

How would you like to raise a family of four children in far-off Madagascar? Mr. Amos Dyrud, Missionary under the Lutheran Board of Missions of the Lutheran Free Church, has had this experience among many others to relate to his friends of Newfolden, Minn. Mr. Dyrud is a native of Newfolden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dyrud.

To prepare for his missionary work, he attended Augsburg College and Seminary. Mrs. Dyrud, a native of Colfax, Wis., completed her nurses training at the Deaconess Hospital of Minneapolis.

Rev. and Mrs. Dyrud left the United States in 1949 and spent their first year in France studying French, which is the official language of Madagascar. Their next year was spent at Fort Dauphin, Madagascar, studying the Malagasy language. This is the most widely used language among the common people of that country.

After this training, they were ready to begin their regular duties. Their missionary home was at Ampanihy, Madagascar and they had to travel 700 miles to visit the established works of their territory. There are approximately 65,000 people in this area and they are served by one missionary family along with the native workers.

The work of a missionary is varied and includes reaching the unrenched with the Christian message, teaching converts and native workers, preaching at established churches, and handling administrative matters. Sometimes the missionary helps with the construction of churches, schools, or homes. Some of the building materials are bricks made of mud, bamboo, stones and mason blocks.

Do you think farming is difficult in Minnesota? How would you like to work your soil with hoes and shovels? A common method of plowing in Madagascar is to run water over small plots of land. When the soil is loosened up by the water, the oxen, driven in circles, trample the soil with their hoofs. This land is used for rice paddies, and in the fall the land is drained and left to dry. The rice is cut with hand scythes and beaten upon rocks to seperate the rice from the vines.

Another native custom which the Dyruds found strange was the arrangement for a marriage. Marriages are arranged by the parents for a certain price, the more desirable the girl, the higher the price.

Medicine men rather than medical doctors are called upon in time of sickness. Rev. Dyrud said witchcraft is commonly practiced in Madagascar.

Sometimes the natives sacrifice an animal and place the blood upon a wooden cross. This, they believe, will bring better weather, health, protection for themselves and their property, and good crops.

Rev. Dyrud says, however, that these practices are dropped when the natives become Christians.

To provide more time for their missionary activities the Dyruds have a cook and also a native house girl who does the house work and help care for the children. This help enables Mrs. Dyrud to do more missionary work.

Peter, who is eight years old, attends school at Fort Dauphin. This is over 200 miles from home. His parents see him about every four months.

Rev. and Mrs. Dyrud, Peter 8, Naomi 6, Rebecca 4, and Samuel 2½ months, have been living in Minneapolis while on furlough.

The Dyruds will be returning to Madagascar in April. This will not be too soon for Rebecca. Upon seeing her first snowfall she said, "Mommy, let's go back home to Ampanihy right away, today!"

the latter agencies pointed out that some loss to muskrats could occur, but a delay would probably result in more serious wildlife losses at a later date. Postponing surveying operations until the spring of 1958, and lowering and raising the water level in the marshes at that time, would not only affect muskrats, but nesting waterfowl as well.

Shootin' the Breeze

BY Mack Draper

The last of the turkey is gone, the indigestion is past and now the emphasis is on the yule season. Local merchants were pleasantly surprised that shoppers didn't wait for the week-end the big Christmas promotion starts here but flocked to town in large numbers Friday.

The Minnesota Centennial Committee is trying to have the state's cold weather played down in the future as news of this is considered as negative publicity.

We noticed every radio station within receiving distance played up last week's cold wave for everything it was worth, tho! Well, weather makes news and a hundred centennial committees probably couldn't alter this fact.

Perhaps, though, the commentators could put the news in a different way by saying "Another wave of that brisk, healthful arctic cold weather has washed across Minnesota to reinvigorate the lucky citizens of this fair state, etc., etc.

Any way you slice it, a cold wave is a cold wave, and it's going to be mighty hard to convince the Floridan he's missing something by not being here in winter!

What makes 'em marry so young? Insecurity, perhaps. Our world is in a precarious position these days so, in a way, one can hardly blame our modern teenagers for wanting to get their share of living before the roof falls in but—

Eighteen is pretty young for a man to take on the responsibility of heading a household. There's a heap of fun to be had as a single person up to 25—and there's an even greater heap of troubles to be had by taking on extra responsibilities so young.

But, we wish 'em luck—that kid brother of mine, and his bride, that is. I can well remember when he was born—that was the month Hitler's Wehrmacht overran Poland in 1939.

Yours truly hadn't taken his first factory job at that time and still had two years of peacetime life ahead before leaving for the army. The world looked good those days, despite the fracas in Europe, which turned into the "phony war" that lasted until 1940, after Poland went under.

The roof fell in then, and we've been in pretty much of a rat-race ever since, either fighting a war or trying to stave one off or getting ready for the next one.

If we of the generation that fought World War Two feel old, at times, we can boast several doggone good reasons!

The Community Chest residential drive starts today in Thief River Falls. It's a late start and the goal set for the county looks large—but, let's all remember that there are an awful lot of people less fortunate than we are in this country, and they are counting on our help, via the agencies supported by the Chest.

So, when the solicitor knocks on your door be as generous as possible. Someone, somewhere, a little child perhaps, will thank you from the bottom of his heart because your contribution gave him a lift in his adversity. So Long!

Mercury Slumps to —1 Early Today

Week's High Mark of 35 Was Thanksgiving Day

The Pennington county area continues to be fortunate in relatively balmy weather for this time of year but temperatures since Wednesday have been very much on the order of a see-saw—up and down, that is.

The high temperature registered by the KTRF weatherman was 35 Thursday and the low was today's 1-degree-below-zero, the coldest day of the season thus far.

The forecast: partly cloudy today, becoming mostly cloudy tonight and Tuesday, with a few brief snow flurries south tonight.

Temperatures will continue on the low order with highs today to be in the 15-20 bracket and lows of 0 to 10 above tonight. Winds will be light today, becoming southeasterly 10-15 m.p.h. tonight.

The long-range forcast by the U. S. Weather Bureau calls for near normal temperatures and near-to-above normal precipitation for the next 30-day period in this area.

Two Aliens Picked up Here Saturday

Local Law Officers Hold Pair for Border Patrol

Two German aliens who got off a Lake of the Woods bus here Saturday were apprehended by Sheriff Charles Richards and Patrolman Ray Bren about 5:30 Saturday after authorities here had been requested to do so by the U. S. Border Patrol.

After receiving a request to pick up the two aliens a phone call disclosed the two wanted men had just left the Watch hotel and Bren located them in a local cafe. They were arrested outside the cafe shortly afterwards, Bren said.

The aliens were Siegfried Voelkel, 29, and Gohrnnis Muller, about 22, whose homes were given as somewhere in West Germany, although they have been reported to have been living in Canada the past four years. According to authorities the two have relatives living here.

After their arrest Saturday they were taken into custody by Border Patrolmen Ray Schultz and Roger Evenson and will probably be charged with illegal entry into the country.

Queen of Queens Will Be Chosen in State in January

All Girls 18 or Over Who Have Held Beauty Title Are Eligible to Compete

A state-wide search is on for Minnesota's Queen of Queens in a competition being conducted by the Upper Midwest Auto Show to be held in the Minneapolis Auditorium, January 3 through 12.

Rules of the contest specify only that any past or present beauty title holder 18 years of age or older is eligible to enter.

Reward to the winner will be a round-trip flight to Paris, France and appearance at the Auto Show, which is expected to draw more than 150,000 for the ten day event.

Max Winter, manager of the Auto Show, said eliminations will be held daily before the evening stage show, until a winner is chosen.

A panel of radio, television and newspaper personalities will assist in the selection, although a method of 'votes' will also be used. Winter said all girls will have an equal opportunity to win the title, and urged that entrants contact the Auto Show office, 620 Hennepin Avenue, Minneapolis and send in a photograph and full information as early as possible. Deadline for entry is 12:00 Midnight, December 25.

Keep up with the hometown news by reading the twice-a-week Thief River Falls Times.

the latter agencies pointed out that some loss to muskrats could occur, but a delay would probably result in more serious wildlife losses at a later date. Postponing surveying operations until the spring of 1958, and lowering and raising the water level in the marshes at that time, would not only affect muskrats, but nesting waterfowl as well.

Week's Events in Newfolden

Rev. and Mrs. Amos Dyrud, Peter, Naomi, Rebecca and Samuel, were Thanksgiving Day guests at his parental home. His mother is Mrs. Marie Dyrud.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gast, Lance and Estelle of Argyle were among holiday guests at Mrs. Marie Dyrud's home.

Earnest Trockman and Clarence Hanson spent the Thanksgiving holiday with their respective families. They are employed in Fargo, N. D.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Collin and family were Wednesday afternoon callers at the Harold Myhre home in Warren.

Mr. Ingvald Larson, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Collin and family were guests at the Harvey Dyrud home on Thanksgiving Day.

Amos Dyrud's Home on Furlough

How would you like to raise a family of four children in far-off Madagascar? Mr. Amos Dyrud, Missionary under the Lutheran Board of Missions of the Lutheran Free Church, has had this experience among many others to relate to his friends of Newfolden, Minn. Mr. Dyrud is a native of Newfolden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dyrud.

To prepare for his missionary work, he attended Augsburg College and Seminary. Mrs. Dyrud, a native of Colfax, Wis., completed her nurses training at the Deaconess Hospital of Minneapolis.

Rev. and Mrs. Dyrud left the United States in 1949 and spent their first year in France studying French, which is the official language of Madagascar. Their next year was spent at Fort Dauphin, Madagascar, studying the Malagasy language. This is the most widely used language among the common people of that country.

After this training, they were ready to begin their regular duties. Their missionary home was at Ampanihy, Madagascar and they had to travel 700 miles to visit the established works of their territory. There are approximately 65,000 people in this area and they are served by one missionary family along with the native workers.

The work of a missionary is varied and includes teaching the unreached with the Christian message, teaching converts and native workers, preaching at established churches, and handling administrative matters. Sometimes the missionary helps with the construction of churches, schools, or homes. Some of the building materials are bricks made of mud, bamboo, stones and mason blocks.

Do you think farming is difficult in Minnesota? How would you like to work your soil with hoes and shovels? A common method of plowing in Madagascar is to run water over small plots of land. When the soil is loosened up by the water, the oxen, driven in circles, trample the soil with their hoofs. This land is used for rice paddies, and in the fall the land is drained and left to dry. The rice is cut with hand scythes and beaten upon rocks to seperate the rice from the vines.

Another native custom which the Dyruds found strange was the arrangement for a marriage. Marriages are arranged by the parents for a certain price, the more desirable the girl, the higher the price.

Medicine men rather than medical doctors are called upon in time of sickness. Rev. Dyrud said witchcraft is commonly practiced in Madagascar.

Sometimes the natives sacrifice an animal and place the blood upon a wooden cross. This, they believe, will bring better weather, health, protection for themselves and their property, and good crops.

Rev. Dyrud says, however, that these practices are dropped when the natives become Christians.

To provide more time for their missionary activities the Dyruds have a cook and also a native house girl who does the house work and help care for the children. This help enables Mrs. Dyrud to do more missionary work.

Peter, who is eight years old, attends school at Fort Dauphin. This is over 200 miles from home. His parents see him about every four months.

Rev. and Mrs. Dyrud, Peter 8, Naomi 6, Rebecca 4, and Samuel 2½ months, have been living in Minneapolis while on furlough.

The Dyruds will be returning to Madagascar in April. This will not be too soon for Rebecca. Upon seeing her first snowfall she said, "Mommy, let's go back home to Ampanihy right away, today!"

Prowlers Edge Roseau Play at Fertile Friday

The basketball Prowlers weren't very impressive as they opened their 1957-58 cage schedule on Friday night, being hard-pressed to defeat an ever-moving and sharpshooting Roseau Rams, 51 to 48, at Roseau.

The locals will continue their inter-district competition this week when, on Friday night, they make the short trek to Fertile for a game with the highly-regarded district 30 Fertile Falcons. The final home game on the locals' schedule will be on Friday night, Dec. 13th, when coach Bun Fortier's Bemidji Lumberjacks will be here.

Only in the third period of Friday night's game at Roseau did the prowlers appear like the district 31 champions that they are, for in that stanza the locals, trailing by a 21 to 19 score at the intermission, racked up 22 points to take a 41 to 31 lead.

That ten-point lead seemed secure as the two teams enter the final period, but coach Ambrose Kramer's Rams, getting some fine outside shooting from guard Ken Halseth, who pumped in three swishers from beyond the circle, pared that lead to two points, 46 to 44, with three minutes to play.

The Rams, in their anxiety to secure possession of the ball, committed numerous fouls, and free-throw points by Jim Bennes and Dave Rasmussen "insured" the game for the Prowlers, Phil Hanson, scoring a field goal on a lay-up with less than a minute of play remaining, put the game beyond the reach of the Rams, who tallied a pair of final-seconds free throw points.

As has been the custom the past several years, center Dave Hanson led the Prowler scorers, with the lanky center tallying 16 points. Rasmussen followed with four field goals and four free throws for a 12-point performance.

Three Prowlers who played well, especially in the second half, were Bennes, who was clearing the defensive board in fine style, Lynn Nicholson, who exhibited able driving tactics in scoring a pair of field goals in the third period, and Phil Hanson, who was breaking down the floor and spearheading the locals' fast-break attack.

The Roseau Rams, and they surprised their followers by their able play against the heavily-favored Prowlers, turned in an all-round performance. Stan Holland, at center, who fouled out with 2:57 of the game remaining, led the Rams' scoring with 14 points.

"IT WAS A NICE TRY, BUT . . ." seems to sum up public opinion about competitive cars attempting to equal the styling and features of the Swept-Wing 58. They tried to get as low, but had to lower the roof to do it. (Less headroom, same high, boxy, cooped-up look.) Their windshields got smaller, while ours got bigger. Most of them still don't have Total-Contact Brakes to assure smooth, even, safe stops when needed. Nor do they offer push-button TorqueFlite, the proven automatic transmission, and Constant-Control power steering that works full time—not part time as some other systems do. And Dodge no-sway, no-dip Torsion-Aire is standard equipment. (Bus-type air springs offered by some cars cost well over $100.00 extra.) So compare all the 1958 models with Dodge. We think you'll agree: Other cars are catching on, but they can't catch up.

War Orphans May Get Free Schooling

State Legion Official Cites Terms of New Law

That opportunities available to many American young men and women under the federal war orphans educational program should be more generally known than seems to be the case, is the opinion of Eugene Lindquist, Clarissa, chairman of the child welfare committee of the Minnesota department of the American Legion.

"We feel that the financial benefits available through this little known provision of the Federal Law merit statewide announcement," says Lindquist in presenting the program.

"Public Law 634, passed by the 84th Congress, affects young men and women between the ages of 18 and 23 whose parents died of injuries or diseases resulting from military service in World War I, World War II, or the Korean conflict. Death must have occurred in active military service, or as the result of an injury incurred or aggravated in line of duty. If death came after military service, the veteran's discharge must have been under other than dishonorable conditions.

"The sum of $110 a month will be paid for schooling or training periods up to as long as 36 months," Mr. Lindquist points out, "to each and every young person who qualifies. . .

"All American Legion county service officers have complete details of this helpful and little known program," says the Legion spokesman, "and will help every person investigating eligibility either in their own or some one else's behalf. Veterans Administration Offices, too, are in position to help all inquirers."

Keeping Score with "Huck" Olson

First Look

It's pretty silly and futile to attempt to assess the Prowlers' basketball potential for the 1957-58 season on their performance in one game, and that a season-opening game. But in all candor we must report that the Prowlers were disappointing in their game at Roseau on Friday night even though they edged out the Rams, 51 to 48.

Perhaps the uneven play of the Prowlers can be charged to these two factors: one, the Prowlers are, for the most part, a senior club with their scoring attack centered around six-foot, five-inch Dave Hanson, and when the rules were changed, increasing the width of the lane to twelve feet, that change had a vital effect on the Prowlers offensive play; and two, the loss of Keith Johnson, the blue-and-golds' "floor general" of last season, with his loss necessitating considerable readjustment on the back court play.

But as we said, it was the season's first game, and Prowlers will be a ball club by tournament time.

It Couldn't Happen to a Nicer Guy

There was a gala good-luck and best-wishes party held at Warroad last week honoring Cal Marvin as he prepared to depart for Minneapolis, where he will assume his duties as the coach of the United States hockey team.

Cal is due to report today, and it is rumored that several of the Warroad hockey players, among them Roger and Bill Christian and Dan McKinnon, accompanied Marvin and will try out for the club.

That the Warroad hockey fans should honor Cal in such a manner is not surprising. He has a legion of friends. And if Cal can instill into the United States hockey team some of the stick-to-itiveness and desire that he, Cal, possesses, that squad will make a creditable record as it tours Europe.

Incidentally, the Warroad Lakers, long a "power" and title-threat in Northwest Hockey league play, has joined with Fort Frances, Kenora, and Dryden, to form the Ontario-Minnesota league. This four-team circuit will seek affiliation with the Thunder Bay Hockey Association.

Al Laki, the new Warroad high school hockey coach, replacing Ken Johannson, is a Michigan Tech graduate, and played his college hockey there. He will play with this season's Laker club. Frank (Ike) Eisensoph, and stellar center for the Lakers for the past several seasons, has received his United States citizenship papers, and as an American citizen he will try out for the United States hockey team.

End of the Road

The Winnipeg Blue Bombers, the Cinderella team of Canadian football, came to the end of their glory road on Saturday afternoon when, in the Grey Cup game played at Toronto, coach Bud Grant's team lost to Hamilton, 32 to 7.

While the professional oddsmakers had established the Hamilton club as the favorite, that 32 to 7 score was unexpected and surprising. Fact is, that score is not indicative of the strength of the two teams, for they are more evenly matched than that. The Tiger-Cats, that's the nickname of the Hamilton club, took advantage of numerous fumbles, recovering six of the seven bobbles committed by the Bombers, to roll up that score.

Grant, though, is entitled to all the credit and praise that is being heaped upon him, and his assistant coach, Wayne Robinson, for bringing Winnipeg into the Grey Cup finals.

They Have the Makings

That was quite a weekend of hockey that coach Bob May's North Dakota Sioux turned in. On Friday night they shut out the Winnipeg Maroons, 3 to 0; and on Saturday night the two teams battled to a 2-all tie.

That was quite a roster that the Maroons iced for those two games, too. Remember these players? Bill Juzda, Murray Balagus, Chuck Lumsden, Tom Rockey, Tom Marshall, Cordy Simpson, Sheldon Bloomer, Lou Joyal, and Bill Johnson. These fellows, although they are aging, are capable of playing fine and smart hockey, and it was quite a feat for the Sioux to gain the edge in the two-game series.

As far as hockey is concerned, the "moment of truth" for the Sioux will come on Wednesday night when they meet the Winnipeg Warriors of the Western Hockey league. That's a bona fide professional club.

Man has gone from sun-worshipping to moon watching.

Farm & Retail Price Spread Is Explained

Today's farmer is receiving a smaller share of what the housewife pays at the supermarket, but that's no sign the middleman is getting any richer.

Luther Pickrel, extension agricultural economist at the University of Minnesota, points out the farmer today only receives 39 cents of the consumer's food dollar, compared to 53 cents in 1945. But the change is due to something other than increased profits to middlemen.

He discusses this problem in a newly-issued extension folder from the University of Minnesota titled "That Farm-Retail Price Spread."

Labor cost is one of the most important items involved in this ever-widening spread, Pickrel says. Labor cost per unit of food marketed has increased about 250 percent since 1939.

Transportation costs have also gone up. Rates are about 75 percent greater than in 1945 and food items travel farther than ever. Corporate profits have increased a little, but less in food than in most manufacturing industries.

By far the costliest service in the marketing system now is retailing, Pickrel explains. More than half of all the people who handle food products from the time they leave the farm until they are paid for at the counter work at the retail end. In fact, there are more total workers involved in processing and distribution than in farming itself.

First, from increased wage rates and costs of materials.

Second, from more specialized farm production and more marketing services.

These things are a result of a rapidly developing economy. And as the demand for additional services increase we can expect marketing costs to increase as well, Pickrel says.

Copies of the new folder on "That Farm-Retail Price Spread" are available at county agricultural agents' offices. You can also get one by writing to the Agricultural Bulletin Room, University of Minnesota, St. Paul 1.

'U' M. Drops Five Crop Varieties from List

The University of Minnesota Agricultural Experiment station dropped five crop varieties from its recommended list at the annual varietal recommendation conference this week.

Varieties dropped are Minturki winter wheat, Fox and Montcalm barley and Ladak and Narragansett alfalfa, according to W. M. Myers, head of the University's agronomy department.

Minturki winter wheat was dropped because recent field trials show it consistently yields lower than Minter, the recommended variety.

Fox barley is no longer recommended because it produces low yields and does not have high malting quality. Montcalm, a malting variety, was dropped because it is susceptible to a number of plant diseases.

Ladak alfalfa was dropped because there is an inadequate supply of pure seed of this variety available. Narragansett was removed from the recommended list because it is susceptible to wilt, there is little pure seed of it available in Minnesota and it is not superior to Vernal, a recommended variety, in any respect. Vernal is now available to most farmers who wish to raise it.

Crop varieties recommended by the University for 1958 are: Oats: Ajax, Andrew, Branch, Garry, Minhafer, Minland, Rodney, Sauk. Rye: Adams, Caribou. Flax: B5128, Bolley, Marine, Redwood. Spring Wheat: Lee, Selkirk. Winter Wheat: Minter. Soybeans: Acme, Blackhawk, Capital, Chippewa, Flambeau, Grant, Harosoy, Norchief, Ottawa Mandarin, Renville. Barley: Forrest, Kindred, Peatland, Traill, Vantage. Sunflowers: (for feed or oil) Advance, (feed only) Arrowhead. Field Peas: Chancellor, Dashaway. Alfalfa: Ranger, Vernal. Medium Red Clover: Dollard, Midland, Wegener. Biennial Sweetclover: Evergreen, Madrid. Smooth Bromegrass: Achenbach, Fischer, Lincoln. Sudangrass: Piper. Birdsfoot Trefoil: Empire. Timothy: Itasca, Lorain.

Potato Beetles Are Resisting DDT

Reported Building up Resistance in RR Valley

Potato beetles in Minnesota's Red River Valley apparently have built up strong resistance to DDT.

At least, that's the indication from recent research, according to L. K. Cutkomp, University of Minnesota entomologist.

He compared potato beetles from Minnesota's Red River Valley with beetles from near Ottawa, Canada — an area in which DDT had never been used and where potato beetles obviously wouldn't be expected to have any resistance to the insecticide.

Cutkomp injected the beetles with varying dosage of solutions containing DDT. Dosages that killed Canadian beetles had practically no harmful effect on the Minnesota beetles.

This shows the Minnesota beetles definitely have strong resistance to DDT, Cutkomp says. And indications are that this resistance has built up in recent years, when DDT has been widely used in the Red River Valley.

Recently, field applications of DDT have given poor results as far as controlling potato beetles is concerned. As a result, DDT is no longer recommended for potato beetle control in northwestern Minnesota, although it is still the best insecticide against the potato leafhoppers — another serious potato insect. Entomologists now recommend either dieldrin, toxaphene or heptachlor for controlling potato beetles there.

Youths Reminded to Register for Draft

Lt. Colonel Murley A. Reep, state director of selective service, today called attention to the fact that all young men (including those who are or become members of a reserve component to include the National Guard) must register with their nearest local selective service board when they attain eighteen years of age or within five days thereafter, and that failure to register is a violation of the law and makes the delinquent liable to penalty.

"All a young man has to do, Lt. Colonel Reep said, "is to present himself to the local board or registration place designated in that particular area most convenient to the place he happens to be when he becomes eighteen. Registration process is simple and requires only a short time."

"The law is specific," he said, "and provides severe penalty for failure to comply," adding that the law is also specific in its requirements concerning the obligation of a registrant to keep his local board informed as to any change in his address—where he may be reached by mail, that is—or any change in his status under the Act.

Lt. Colonel Reep emphasized the fact that requirements to register and legal obligations of registrants were in no way altered because selective service calls have been low in the past few months.

Registration for those in Pennington county may be accomplished at one of the following places: Local Board No. 82, basement of the city Auditorium, Thief River Falls, Mondays and Tuesdays of each week, 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.; with Mrs. Bonnie Ornquist, offices of Attorneys Rullen and Wurst, Northern State Bank Bldg., Thief River Falls; or with Mrs. Irene Ellingson, post office, Goodridge.

"In the long fight for righteousness the watchword for all of us, is spend and be spent. It is a little matter whether any one man fails or succeeds; but the cause shall not fail, for it is the cause of mankind. We, here in America, hold in our hands the hope of the world, the fate of the coming years; and shame and disgrace will be ours if in our eyes the light of high resolve be dimmed, if we trail in the dust the golden hopes of men."

Ike A Penny-Pincher?

The state central committee of the Democratic-Farmer-Labor party has adopted "a six-point state and national program to meet the challenge of Soviet superiority in basic science and technology." The answer is for the federal government to spend a lot more money, and quick.

It is interesting to learn from this group that the Eisenhower administration must stop "its suicidal policies of penny-pinching". As we recall it, some of the good Democrats in Congress told us less than a year ago that Ike was a spendthrift, and they backed up this opinion with some appropriation cuts. To be consistant the DFL leaders should scold the Democrat-controlled Congress, not only for being economy minded but also for opposing the idea of federal aid for education.

We, of course, were well pleased with what Congress did then and we are satisfied that we do not need federal funds now to raise the standards of our Minnesota schools. By eliminating a few frills we can give the deserving youth of Minnesota the good education they should have, without increasing expenditures. We probably could cut costs drastically and still raise the standards of our education system.

And may we remind our good DFL friends that Russia's strongest hope is that we will bankrupt ourselves into communism. Lenin pointed specifically to this possibility. The American dollar saved western Europe from communism. As the dollar loses value it loses its power to save us from destruction. Keeping America solvent is an important item in the program to keep America free.

Teacher Opinions

A few years ago a group of University of Minnesota professors issued a statement that was highly critical of our elementary and secondary schools. University officials moved in quickly to suppress any further discussion of the questions that had been raised.

The legislature was in session at the time and some members of the legislature thought the professors should be given an opportunity to enlarge upon their very challenging statement. By that time, however, the University instructors had lost all interest in expressing their views publicly.

Many respectable people now are saying what the University professors tried to say at that time, which strengthens the argument that the people best qualified to criticise teaching are the teachers themselves.

A recent survey of teacher opinion, conducted by the Ontario Teachers' Federation, bears out this view. The survey revealed opinions widely different from those generally accepted by many leaders in education, according to the Toronto Telegram. The Telegram's further comments are especially interesting, dealing with problems that we now are confronted with here in the States. Says the Telegram:

> "The survey was held because, for one reason: 'It was suggested that classroom teachers are reluctant at the present time to express their real points of view about various educational topics when an authoritative point of view has been put forward, even though they do not accept this point of view.'
> "The results have appeared in The Bulletin, published by the Federation. Under these auspices, the findings deserve consideration.
> "With reference to the nonacademic subject of driver education the vote was 1,315 against undertaking it during school hours and 403 in favor. After school hours—1,330 in favor, 741 against.
> "On the question of fusing history and geography as social studies the vote was 1,654 in favor and 531 against, so far as grades 1-to-6 are concerned. For all other grades the vote was overwhelmingly opposed.

We Have The Right

The Minneapolis Tribune announces its 13th annual spelling bee, to be held next April, open to all grade school children of the state and several neighboring states. Elimination contests are held at the school and county levels, based on written and oral tests.

As a means of reviving an interest in spelling, contests of this kind should be encouraged. Excellence in this field is just as deserving of special recognition as is any outstanding athletic record. And maybe there would be justification for a special award for penmanship, with emphasis on legibility, a fine art which is not receiving the attention it deserves.

Let's keep in mind that we have the authority here in our own community to place greater emphasis on spelling and penmanship in our local schools. State standards fix minimum requirements. We have the right to establish and enforce higher standards. Thief River Falls could be made a city of good schools as well as a city of good school buildings.

Family-sized Farms

At a hearing held at Fergus Falls recently by a congressional sub-committee studying family-size farms, it was revealed that in 16 counties of central Minnesota the number of farms had been reduced more than 15 per cent in the past six years. In those 16 counties there now are 5,605 fewer farm units than there were when the last official census was taken.

Whether or not we like the figures, they do represent a trend that is likely to continue. To the extent that this decrease in number represents an increase in the size of a family operation it is good. We are all agreed that the family size operation is better than what is referred to as the large "corporation" farm. But the real "problem" farms of the country generally, are those that are smaller than the family size; that is too small to maintain adequately one farm family.

Hereabouts we are more conscious of the too-large farms because we are closer to them. In the older and more densely populated rural areas there are too many too-small farms, smaller than family size. It is common in such areas for farm income to be supplemented by wages earned off the farm.

Short of Internes & Doctors

(St. Paul Pioneer Press)

There, is a national shortage of hospital internes and house doctors.

Despite the high cost of a medical education, there are thousands more applicants for ous shortage of physicians exist. However, news release from the headquarters of the association indicates that 10 per cent of hospital residency positions are currently unfilled and 17 per cent of internships are vacant. Other sources estimate the shortages may run closer to 25 per cent.

The number of unfilled positions is not the whole story. Of 22,000 house doctors in American hospitals, 8,000 are not graduates of American medical schools. They are graduates of foreign schools admitted here on temporary visas to fill a vacuum in this particular type of medical service. Many of them come from countries where medical education is below American standards.

This is not a healthy situation. Hospitals and their patients cannot but suffer from it. At least part of the answer lies in a more rapid expansion of medical schools than is taking place.

Local Lions Indulge in Horseplay at RLF Meeting

Members of the Thief River Falls Lions club went to Red Lake Falls last Wednesday evening to stage a model meeting for the Lions club in process of organization in that city. REPORT from the GOVERNOR

by Orville L. Freeman

On our visit to Korea last month we saw how hard the people of that young republic are trying to achieve the kind of educational and economic programs they need so badly. We spent most interesting and valuable hours with President and Mrs. Rhee. We also visited the national University of Seoul, which has especially close ties with Minnesota because of the work our University is doing to help them.

The Republic of Korea desperately needs the assistance it gets from the United States. It remained relatively undeveloped during the long years it was under Japanese rule. And now its separation from the industry and power sources that lie in communist North Korea impose a further handicap.

Hong Kong

Hong Kong is a unique city. It has long been one of the world's great crossroads, and has therefore principally a trading metropolis. Since the communists won control in China, Hong Kong's trade, industry, and population have grown enormously. The industrial output has more than doubled since 1950, and the number of manufacturing establishments has increased from less than 1,000 to well over 3,000.

Refugees

The most difficult problem in Hong Kong arises out of the tremendous increase in population. In the last five or six years the population has increased by nearly one third. We were told that the influx of refugees and the nature of their living conditions makes it practically impossible to take an accurate census.

They Voted With Their Feet

The Governor of the colony of Hong Kong described the approximately 900,000 refugees from communist China as having "voted with their feet" when they fled—mostly on foot and under severely bad conditions—to Hong Kong.

Parts of this city are the most densely populated of any place in the world. It is said that in many areas there are about 3,000 people to the acre, with as many as ten people living in a nine by twelve foot room, and taking turns sleeping in the beds around the clock.

Living Space

Everywhere, on the flat roofs of buildings and on the sides of hills, there are squatters' huts, of tarpaper, cardboard boxes, bits of canvas, and almost anything that can be made available. Resettlement apartments are being built as fast as possible. In these apartments the allocation of space is made on the basis of five people to a nine by twelve foot room, with a child counting as half a person.

In spite of all this crowding, the people seem generally to be friendly, and are amazingly clean and active. But they are existing on a bare minimum, and human misery is extensive. Churches and other volunteer groups help by making available medical supplies and food, but there is not enough to go around. The government is doing an amazingly good job under the conditions it faces.

THE MINNESOTA STORY

Prepared by the

CHRISTMAS IN THE WILDS

On December 25, 1805, not far from the present site of Brainerd, Lieutenant Zebulon Pike, discoverer of Pike's Peak, and his soldiers celebrated Christmas day by advancing three miles on their exploratory journey into the wilderness of northern Minnesota

In the journal of the expedition, written by its famous leader, there is only a brief entry for December 25, 1805, but it calls up an interesting picture of the American soldiers who penetrated the area before its metamorphosis into a land teeming with white men's cities, roads, and farms.

"Marched, and encamped at 11 o'clock," wrote Pike. "Gave out two pounds extra of meat, two pounds extra of flour, one gill of whiskey, and some tobacco, to each man, to distinguish Christmas Day; distance advanced three miles."

With twenty soldiers Pike had left St. Louis on August 9, 1805, on a trip to the sources of the Mississippi. Late in September the expedition reached the site of the future city of Minneapolis, and on October 16, not far from the present-day Little Falls, the building of a fort was begun.

With sleds and a pirogue "towed by three men," Lieutenant Pike and his force set out in December for the fur-trading posts at Sandy and Leech lakes, reaching the former on January 8. In February the explorer arrived at what he believed to be "the upper source of the Mississippi," Cass Lake.

Not until April 30, 1806, did Pike return to St. Louis, his starting point. His party endured great sufferings in its struggle through the snow and cold of the unknown wilderness.

UNKNOWN COUNTY

Few people are aware that an independent county once existed within the present metropolitan area of Minneapolis. From 1857 to 1869 some sixteen square miles in Fridley Township, Anoka County, were organized as Manomin County.

The leading resident of the the village of Manomin on the banks of the Mississippi River was Abram M. Fridley, Indian agent, farmer, and politician. When Anoka County was established in 1857, he succeeded in having his little domain made into a separate county, and there he lived as its virtual king until 1869, when he moved to a large farm near Becker in Sherburne County.

The year that Fridley left, Manomin County was incorporated into Anoka County as Manomin Township. Its name was changed to Fridley in 1879 and some years later its founder returned to his old home, where he died in 1888.

RED RIVER TRADE

Shortly before the War of 1812 the Scotch Earl of Selkirk secured from the Hudson's Bay Company a large grant of land, adjoining the present northern border of Minnesota. On this land he proposed to found an agricultural colony for evicted Scotch peasants.

In August, 1812, the first group of colonists arrived and settled at the junction of the Red and Assiniboine rivers on the future site of Winnipeg. Until about 1840 supplies were brought to the little colony from far-distant Hudson Bay. After that Red River ox carts came into use, and a steady trade with the settlements of southern Minnesota began. For twenty years the ox cart trade continued over two principal routes—one via the Minnesota and Red rivers and the other by way of the Sauk River and Otter Tail Lake.

During the 1850s the steamboat trade on the Mississippi and Minnesota rivers developed greatly, and the idea grew that perhaps the Red River also could support steamboat traffic. In the fall of 1858 a bonus of a thousand dollars was offered by the St. Paul Chamber of Commerce to anyone who would build a boat and have it ready for use on the Red River the next season. Ansom Northrup offered to build such a boat for two thousand dollars, and his offer was accepted by the St. Paul organization.

Northrup bought the old Mississippi steamboat, "North Star," and ran it up to Crow Wing where he dismantled it and saved the engine and furnishings. The engine, with enough newly sawed lumber for the proposed boat, was hauled overland by ox team to Lafayette, a townsite in Clay County, on the Red River opposite the mouth of the Cheyenne.

At Lafayette the work of constructing the new boat went on noisily for six weeks. At the end of that time, the finished vessel was christened the "Ansom Northup" and started on its maiden trip to Fort Garry.

At Fort Abercrombie, the southern end of its run, the "Ansom Northup" connected with the stage line from St. Cloud, which was started in the same year by J. C. Burbank and Russell Blakeley. Thus in 1859 public transportation was available for the first time between St. Paul and Fort Garry, or present day Winnipeg.

A LETTER FROM THE FALLS

The earliest known letter written from the site of the city of Minneapolis is dated September 27, 1836. It was written by J. N. Nicollet, explorer and geographer, and it is in the possession of the Minnesota Historical Society.

It is addressed to the Indian agent at Fort Snelling, Lawrence Taliaferro, and was written after Nicollet's explorations of the source of the Mississippi. "I arrived last evening, about dusk, all's well, nothing lost, nothing broken, happy and very successful journey," Nicollet wrote "But I am done, exhausted, and nothing can relieve me but the pleasure to meet you again under your roof and see all the friends of the garrison who have been so kind to me.

"Flat Mouth, the Chief of Leech Lake, and suite, ten in number, are with me," he said. Nicollet had met the Indians at Swan River two days earlier. "Peace or War are at stake of the visit they pay you, please give them a good welcome until I have reported to you and Colonel Davenport all what has taken place during my stay among the Pillagers," the explorer concluded.

BARONET AT WHITE BEAR

In 1855 Sir John Dean Paul, an English banker, was found guilty, with his two partners, of financial irregularities in conducting his business and was sentenced to Australia for fourteen years. The disgrace was more than Sir John's only son, Aubrey John Paul, could bear, and his young wife also vanished from the English scene.

In 1857, after a journey by sleigh from Lake Superior, Mr. and Mrs. James Aubrey arrived at White Bear Lake, where they soon identified themselves with the life of that pioneer community. Aubrey was a boat builder and sportsman. His wife was a school teacher, who started a Sunday school that eventually grew into an Episcopal church. In the Aubrey home on August 20, 1861, a dinner was served to about a hundred persons after Bishop Henry Whipple had consecrated the church as St. John's in the Wilderness.

At the end of his sentence, Sir John Paul returned to London from Australia and died shortly thereafter. Upon his death his son and daughter-in-law also returned to England and took their places as Sir Aubrey and Lady Paul. They had spent more than a decade on the frontier, but few of their Minnesota friends knew of their origins.

LAKE TRAVERSE FUR TRADE

Few regions in Minnesota surpass in historic interest Lake Traverse, Big Stone Lake and the famous valley, named for picturesque Joseph R. Brown, which lies between them.

At one time the Sisseton and Wahpeton Sioux ranged about these lakes—the sources of the Red and Minnesota rivers. Here they encamped in winter, and from here they set out on their trapping expeditions. At a very early day fur traders were sent among them.

The Hudson's Bay Company had its southernmost post on Lake Traverse, and near by was the establishment of Robert Dickson, British superintendent of the "western tribes," who arrived in the area about the beginning of the nineteenth century. His post was located in what is now Folsom Township in Traverse County.

After 1816, when the English were forbidden to continue their operations on Minnesota soil, the trade in the region was absorbed by the American Fur Company. This firm had a post on the western shore of Big Stone Lake, which in 1823 was under the supervision of Hazen P. Mooers.

In 1822 Joseph Renville, an experienced trader, and others organized the Columbia Fur Company, with headquarters at Lake Traverse. After a few years of hot competition, the American Fur Company absorbed its rival, and "Joe" Brown was placed in charge of the Lake Traverse post.

EARLY TOURISTS

Evidence of a very early trickle in what was later to become a wave of tourists to Minnesota may be found in an article in that interesting old magazine, "Niles' National Register," for June 29, 1839. The article reports that the steamboat "Pennsylvania" had returned to Pittsburgh a few days after a "pleasure excursion" to Cincinnati, St. Louis, and the Falls of St. Anthony.

"The party of about sixty "ladies and gentlemen" left St. Louis on May 27 and arrived at the falls on June 2. The steamboat could not go above Fort Snelling, so the group "had quite a novel and romantic excursion of seven miles over a beautiful prairie in wagons supplied by the politeness and hospitality of the commandant at Fort Snelling."

All the entertainment which the country afforded a buffalo dance by the Indians living at the falls.

The magazine reported that "The passengers . . . were much gratified with the trip, and give glowing descriptions of the scenery, the native beauty, and verdure of the vast uncultivated regions through which they passed." The editor added, "we should not be surprised if, the attention of our eastern friends should become directed to trips of this kind in preference to loitering in warm weather in the neighboring cities of the Atlantic coast."

DOWN AND OUT

A description of the seedy side of life in Minnesota in the 1880s may be found in "The Western Avernus," a book written by Morley Roberts, an English novelist, about his experiences as a hobo in America.

In 1884 Roberts and his friend Ray Kern found themselves in Elmore, Minnesota, with only $7.50 between them. They found that a train would be leaving for St. Paul shortly after midnight. Kern "went over to the conductor of the train and made a bargain with him to take us to Kasota (which was as far as he went with the train) for 1 dol. 50 cents each, which was much under the regular fare. This is very commonly done in the States by the conductors, who put the money in their own pockets," Roberts informed his English readers.

At Kasota the travelers boarded a freight train and persuaded the conductor to take them both to St. Paul for $3.50. Some of their money had to be spent for food on the way, and when the two hungry tramps arrived in St. Paul they had twenty-five cents with which to buy bread and butter for breakfast.

The great problem then was to find work. Roberts went to an employment agency, where he was offered a job at the city waterworks if he would pay a fee of one dollar. Roberts reports: "Well, mister, said I, 'I have not got a dollar.' 'What have you got?' was his answer, thinking, I suppose, that I might have 99 cents. I surprised him. 'I've got a partner'." Finally the employment agent got jobs bor both men with the understanding that the fee was to be paid by the boss at the waterworks.

For twelve days Roberts "worked with the pick and shovel, rigged derricks, spliced ropes, and mixed mortar for the bricklayers." Then, after earning a few dollars, he decided to move westward, and he left St. Paul with a railroad construction crew.

In later years, back in his native England, Morley Roberts was the author of many popular short stories and novels based upon his travels.

AS YOUR DEALER let me talk to you about

Large Roundworms

This common kind of worm affects poultry indoors as well as out. Warm houses and deep litter can make a snug home for parasites, costing you many dollars in unthrifty production.

My Recommendation: Give laying birds regular treatments with Wasine®, Dr. Salsbury's quality piperazine medication for large roundworms. Liquid Wasine goes in the drinking water, provides quick, easy treatment for about one-fifth cent per bird. Works for hogs, too. Get dependable Wasine now.

Co. Board Buys 7th Big Motor Patrol Grader

Buys Unit Tuesday from Phillippi at $16,000 and Trade-in

After considering five bids on a heavy duty motor grader, the Pennington county board at its December session Tuesday voted to accept the proposal of the low bidder, the Phillippi Equipment company of Fargo, to supply a Galion unit at a price of $16,000 in addition to the trade-in of an old grader.

The new equipment when received will make a total of seven such units now operated by the county highway department.

Supt. B. E. Youngquist and Dr. Soine of Northwest School, representing the Red River Valley Development association, sponsor of the Valley Winter Shows at Crookston, requested the board to increase its annual contribution to the support of the shows to $150, compared to the $100 voted in recent years.

The board reserved action on the request until its January meeting.

Approved by the board was the assignment of new numbers to Pennington county highways in accordance with the new state aid plan put into effect following the adoption of Amendment No. 2.

Also approved was Arthur Forsberg's rearrangement plat for a small tract of six lots east of the Dr. Edward Bratrud property, and outside the city limits.

The board authorized the transfer for the remainder of the year to Sylvester Grabanski of the 3.2 beer license formerly held by Morris Fimrite.

Former Resident Visits Here after 50 Years Absence

J. W. Rayson, Shelton, Wash., Finds Former Home Town Greatly Changed

J. W. Rayson of Shelton, Wash. a one time resident of Thief River Falls, returned for a visit last week after an absence of more than half a century. Born on the farm north of Newfolden which his father homesteaded, Mr. Rayson came to this city in 1900, being employed in the mill of the Thief River Lumber co. He moved to the west coast in 1906.

Mr. Rayson was a brother of Louis Rayson, for many years a Soo Line employee, and Mrs. John Collins. He arrived Wednesday and has been visiting at the C. J. Collins home and with old time friends.

Accompanying Mr. Rayson were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Baley, also of Shelton, who proceeded from here to eastern points, visiting friends in Delaware. Mr. Rayson is leaving here tonight, returning to Washington by way of California.

Needless to say, Mr. Rayson had difficulty in recognizing the community he had lived in fifty years ago.

21 Herds Tested in Two-county DHIA

The second monthly report of the Red Lake-Pennington Dairy Herd Improvement association has been completed, Supervisor Oscar Torkelson, reported. There were 21 herds on test. There has been some increase in average milk and butterfat production. This has been partially due to more attention to feeding and care of the livestock.

There were 402 cows in the 21 herds with 278 cows milking. 94 cows produced 40 pounds or more of butterfat, 47 cows produced over 50 pounds and 14 cows produced over 60 pounds of butterfat. The five highest herds, as far as butter fat production is concerned, averaged from 28 to 39 pounds per cow.

Of special interest is the fact that several of the dairymen have already shown a savings in feed costs by regulating the amount fed to each cow. In other words, said Torkelson, they are learning to feed according to production using the proper grain mixture.

Ice on River Pool Continues Unsafe for Young Skaters

Police Chief Cummings Reports Sheet Is Now Four to 7 Inches Thick

Police Chief Elton Cummings warned parents today that ice on the river here definitely is unsafe and that, until the temperature takes a permanent downturn which leaves a much heavier sheet of ice on the river, children should do their skating elsewhere.

Cummings said he, Fire Chief Roy Langevin, and Alderman Bob Carlson ran a thickness test on the ice about 11 a.m. Wednesday and that thickness ran between four and seven inches in the four holes chopped in the sheet.

On the last hole, Cummings stated, the ice began to buckle and they had to flee to safety.

Although seven inches would normally be safe, considered fairly, Cummings said the thickness was not uniform and that there are hollow pockets under the ice caused by lowering of the water, which creates an additional hazard.

The test Wednesday came as a result of the police getting so many telephone calls asking if the river is safe for skaters. The recommendations are that skaters play safe until conditions are more favorable for safe skating.

Principal matter scheduled for Monday's session will be regarding the watershed adjoining the Middle River from Argyle east. Numerous ditches in the area east of Argyle have their outlets in the Middle River. The hearing is being held to determine whether or not the entire watershed can be assessed for the improvement for the outlet ditches.

Rotary Informed of Rehabilitation Unit at Hospital

Harold W. Peterson, Don Lawrence and Fred Endres Address Group Monday

Plans for the rehabilitation unit that is in the making at Northwestern Hospital were explained to Rotarians at their regular Monday luncheon. Harold Peterson, superintendent, reviewed the general problems of hospital operation and the considerations that led to the decision to establish a specialized rehabilitation service.

Don Lawrence, board member, spoke as a member of the committee that had visited hospitals in the Twin Cities area where such a service is available, the tour having been arranged under the direction of state health officials.

He outlined the general purpose of such a service, explaining the types of treatment and their purposes that would be made available, and emphasizing the need for limiting such treatment to patients for whom it would be helpful. The rehabilitation unit is not to be confused with an ordinary nursing home service, he stated. The average stay of patients would be of short duration.

Fred Endres, hospital engineer, reported on the alterations that are contemplated in the hospital plant. The second floor of the old section is being rearranged to provide for the special needs of a rehabilitation program, under which patients are encouraged to help themselves. He also covered the changes that will be made in the physical therapy room, which he said, is already quite adequate.

Lincoln High School Carnival Slated for Saturday Night Dec. 7

The third annual Lincoln high school carnival will be held at the high school Saturday evening, December 7, at 7:45 with a short program in the auditorium preceding the usual carnival games and attractions in the gymnasium.

The event is planned in part as a fund-raising affair for the school yearbook which is sold below cost to students. Many other school organizations are sharing in the planning of the carnival and will also share in the proceeds.

Sandra Nabben heads a student committee preparing the program. Bill Racker is faculty adviser to the concessions committee, headed by Ruby Waale, who is also yearbook editor. Various work, entertainment, and selling projects have been underway for some three weeks in support of the candidates. The class showing the most profit from its projects and contributions will have its candidates crowned carnival king and queen. The project was completed Saturday after over a week of preparations in which power was cut off in some parts of the city for short intervals. Lines carrying the power into the city were erected by Minnkota REA Co-op.

Few Reports Filed to Date in Chest Drive

Solicitors Hopeful of Ending Drive Well Before Christmas

Chairmen of the various phases of the 1957 Community Chest drive in Pennington county reported their drives in full swing this week but all said there was little concrete information available at this time on which to base predictions as to the drive's outcome.

However, all chairmen say solicitors who have reported in thus far have shown encouraging results, although not enough solicitors have completed their work to establish a definite trend at this time.

A check with M. C. Gulbranson, chairman of the industrial drive in the city, revealed that returns have been coming in very well, with the results satisfactory, generally. Most returns will be in by Saturday and the drive will probably be finished there sometime next week, he stated.

Very few business district solicitors have reported in thus far, according to co-chairmen Orin Green and George Kildahl. No indication of the drive's success is available here, Green said. This phase will probably require another week for completion, he said.

Paul Anderson, governmental offices chairman, said it is too early for a report from that drive but that solicitors are busy.

Mrs. John C. Wettestad said about 25 per cent of the workers in the residential drive have reported in with very encouraging results thus far. She expects this phase to be completed Saturday. Better results than from the 1956 drive were reported in many instances by Mrs. Wettestad's solicitors.

Paul Engelstad, rural drive chairman said township clerks are bearing the brunt of the work in rural areas, with each acting as chairman of his individual township. It is too early to note any definite trend here, Engelstad stated, although reports to date have led him to expect at least as good results this year as in 1956. He has been pleased at the few reports made thus far.

The drive in the rural areas is now in full swing but will take at least another week before it is cleaned up, Engelstad said.

Highway Patrol Adds Another Man

Keith Pearson Is Now Stationed at R. L. Falls

Capt. Walter Anderson, head of the 8th district highway patrol headquarters here, reported another patrolman has been assigned to work with the local station.

Keith Pearson, 28, has been assigned to work out of Red Lake Falls and will be making his residence there, although working with the Thief River Falls headquarters.

Anderson said Pearson completed the 10-week patrol training course at Camp Ripley the past summer, and until assignment to Red Lake Falls had been working with patrolmen at various locations for two months as a kind of apprenticeship.

Pearson is a native of Hallock, is married and has two children, Captain Anderson said. He is one of several new patrolmen assigned to locations in the 8th district.

New YCC Agent Now Serving This District in TRF

Milton Olson, a native of Welch in Southern Minnesota, recently took over the position of Youth Conservation Commission agent in Thief River Falls, succeeding Alton Anderson, who was transferred to Faribault.

Olson had recently been serving with the American Red Cross in disciplinary baracks at several army camps. During World War II, he served with the Seabees in the South Pacific.

He is a graduate of River Falls State college in Wisconsin, and took graduate work in therapeutic counseling at the University of Wyoming.

PUBLIC OPINION

Editor Times:

In regard to the hearing that is coming up Dec. 9th on ditch No. 13 and No. 3, I would like to briefly comment that in the first place, if it is necessary the cost should be mostly borne by the state, rather then the county, as it is too big a project to be paid for by the already over burdened tax payers of Marshall county.

Secondly nintey-five percent of the people of Marshall county who are affected by proposed project, are against it. And it has been clearly brought out in the hearing already held, that only in flood years, has there been any flooding.

I would also like to point out that we in the east end of Marshall county have always paid for our own ditching, when we needed any, and have not asked the western end to help pay or maintain our drainage. If we in the east end of the county can do that, surely those in the western part, who boast of their land being worth from $125 to $200 an acre, can afford to pay for their own drainage.

It may be well to go back in history a little, before we go hog wild over drainage, and consider the case of Mud Lake, where the people were ditched and taxed clear out of their homes, so let us hope the honorable Judge will make a decision in favor of the majority of the taxpayers.

Rep. E. McCarthy, DFL, Speaks Here

Accuses Eisenhower of Favoring Big Business

Congressman Eugene J. McCarthy of St. Paul, who is currently engaged in a speaking tour in Northern Minnesota, was the guest speaker at a dinner in the Rex Cafe Monday evening, attended by nearly 80 persons. In charge of arrangements for the dinner were Mrs. Alfred M. Johnson and Mrs. Agnes Israelson.

State Senator Roy E. Wiseth of Goodridge presided, and called on Rep. Ben Wichterman of Plummer and Attorney H. O. Berve of this city for brief remarks.

McCarthy commented on the failure of what he called the Eisenhower big-business government, and said the time has now come to review the record.

Leaving out considerations of foreign policy," he said, "Let us look at this record of business and fiscal management of government and national affairs. Farm income has declined steadily from $15.1 billion in 1952 to $11.8 billion today. Business failures, and especially small-business failures, have increased at distressing rates.

"The general rate of economic growth of the United States has slowed down. Tax collections are running about $4 billion a year higher than in 1952, and budget expenditures about $3 billion above the 1952 budget."

Rudolph's nose blinked continually during the song.

Farm-city Forum Set for Oklee, Crookston

Farmers, businessmen, housewives and other Minnesota citizens will take part in a series of 20 farm city forums to be held around Minnesota this winter, according to Luther Pickrel, extension agricultural economist at the University of Minnesota.

These events will be similar to the 30 farm forums held in the state in early 1957. Visitors will hear public policy specialists, other agricultural experts and local people discuss current problems facing farmers and city people alike, and some of the possible solutions for these problems.

Visitors at each forum will be urged to ask any questions they wish on public policy problems, no matter how controversial the questions may be.

"The idea behind the forums," Pickrel explains, "is that by sharing and exchanging knowledge and experience we are better able to arrive at the system of public policies which is best for everyone.'

He says that the way in which these forums are to be conducted was developed after consultation with state leaders of three general farm organizations—the Minnesota Farmers Union, the Minnesota Farm Bureau and the Minnesota Grange.

These organizations are participating in forum planning at county and regional levels.

Forums in each county are being coordinated by county agricultural agents in cooperation with local civic and business groups, farm organizations and other groups.

Forums are scheduled in this area on February 25 and 26 at Crookston, (Red River Valley Winter shows); and on March 19 at Oklee, Red Lake county. Other forums will be scheduled later.

No Clues to Cause of GF Plane Crash

Fargo Man Dies in Crash of National Guard Jet

Air National Guard officials announced Monday they had been unable to determine the cause of the jet plane crash Saturday afternoon, 15 miles south of Grand Forks, which killed 2nd Lt. Loren J. Lorenz, 25, of Fargo.

The inquiry team is led by Maj. R. Marshall Johnson, commander of the 119th Fighter Group in Fargo. Johnson said that disintegration of the jet was so complete there is no hope of determining cause of the crash by study of the plane's remnants. The team is checking eyewitness accounts in the study.

Funeral services for Lt. Lorenz, the husband of the former Sandra Kay Maier of Grand Forks, were held Tuesday at 8:30 a.m. at St. Mary's Cathedral in Fargo.

A second service and interment was held later in Oriska, N. D. where his parents reside.

The crash occurred southeast of Thompson near the Red River, burying the plane 15 feet deep in a stubble field.

Marshall County Soil Conservation Supervisors Act

Dispose of Numerous Items of Business at Meeting November 26

The board of supervisors of the Marshall County soil conservation district met on Tuesday, November 26 at the courthouse in Warren.

The board was advised that members' farms have been soil mapped.

The board was also notified that there will be soil surveying help available from the Thief River Falls area office with a possible goal of from 10 to 15 thousand acres of soil survey to be completed by the winter of 1958.

The board approved plans to start the survey in the eastern end of the district, which will be undertaken by surveying several square mile blocks at a time. This is done to make the most efficient use of time.

In the event of a special request or several requests from one area in another location in the district, it would be possible to switch the soil surveyor to that area for a limited time.

In order to be a supervisor, each man on the board is required to be a cooperator with the district and have a farm plan. The farm of Norman Anderson, supervisor from the Middle River area, is badly in need of drainage. A group project to drain the fields on Mr. Andersons and his neighbor's land, Ervin Peterson, is under planning. This is planned to give relief to approximately 500 acres of water-logged fields between the two neighbors. Plans call for nearly two miles of field surface type ditch by the time the project is completed.

Another item approved by the board was a request by Verne Green of Newfolden for assistance of John Polley, district farm planner, in helping him to design plans for a damsite in construction of a farm pond.

Another main item handled by the supervisors was the planning of the work program with Mr. Polley for the coming year.

4 Crookston Boys Admit Mail Theft

Took Letters from Bag at Depot in Crookston

Action in a mail theft case in which four Crookston boys — the oldest 14 — admitted filching letters containing approximately $22, awaited the arrival in Crookston of a postoffice inspector.

The boys admitted the action, according to Police Chief Harry Dillabough, in questioning after Walt Bougie, Great Northern Railway ticket agent at Crookston, reported the discovery of a number of empty envelopes in the station washroom. The envelopes were addressed to the residence of the Rev. Emil Salveson, who died Nov. 22.

A roundup of youngsters who had been seen playing in the vicinity of the station Friday, when the theft occurred, resulted in the arrest of four boys, aged 14, 11, 10 and 7.

The boys said they had taken a bundle of letters from a mail pouch left for a few moments on the station loading dock, according to Dillabough. The boys said they then went into the station washroom where they opened letters and disposed of the envelopes. Two checks totalling $8 and $3 in cash were recovered.

The funds taken from the letters were memorials to the Rev. Salveson, who had been visitation pastor of Trinity Lutheran Church in Crookston.

Northwest Breeders Improving Services

"Any sire on any day" will be the program of Northwest Breeders of Roseau in meeting the needs of its members thru out the Northwestern Minnesota and Northeastern North Dakota counties where their service is available.

This change has been made possible thru the use of frozen semen and the storing of a considerable supply with each technician rather than depending upon shipments four times a week to meet the needs in every area, as was the case heretofore with liquid semen being used.

The experience of Northwest Breeders over the past two years indicates that very satisfactory results are attainable. In addition to producing their own frozen semen, Northwest Breeders has shipped in frozen semen with very good results. Storage facilities now available make it possible to use any sire available in the United States or Canada.

The number of sires maintained at Northwest Breeders will be reduced somewhat during the next six months as this program will make it possible to do the job with a few less than on the previous program, and will offset some of the increased costs of operation under a frozen semen program.

Members are urged to become better acquainted with the sires available for service and place calls with a choice of sires being expressed. This will enable the local Technician to carry the desired sires.

The technicians serving Pennington county are David Youngblood and Clifton Johnson, with service calls being placed at Thief River Falls Co-op. creamery.

King's Messengers to Appear at Free Church Dec. 10 to 15

Evangelistic Team Is Noted for Top Quality Music, Says Rev. Swan

The King's Messengers, musical evangelists, will be guest artists at a series of meetings conducted at the Evangelical Free Church of Thief River Falls, from Tuesday, December 10 to Sunday, December 15.

The best of gospel music is their specialty, but the ministry of this evangelistic team sparkles with a rare combination of varied abilities, said Rev. Joseph Swan, pastor. Red Lindquist's original gospel cartoons are widely recognized for their appeal to young and old alike. Lin Lindquist's personal testimony entitled, "Forty-eight Hours to Live" is a modern miracle story of faith and power of prayer.

The gospel messages of the Lindquist brothers are enriched by experiences as pastor, youth director and chaplain, and their features in harmony will bring listening delight, said Mr. Swan.

The public is invited to attend these services each evening at 8:00 o'clock, with Sunday services at 11:00 a.m. and 7:45 p.m.

Clothing Drive Here Gets Excellent Response

Harold Rasmussen, left, and Henry Dahlen are shown surrounded by a few of the many boxes of used clothing donated by local residents to be sent overseas by Church World Service and Lutheran World Relief. The clothing was hauled to Grand Forks in a semi-trailer, Wednesday, where it was put into a boxcar, along with clothing donated by people in other communities, for shipment.

Before going overseas the clothing will be processed and repacked so that every item is clean and in good condition, ready for some less-fortunate person to wear. Local Boy Scouts, under the direction of Alvin Christofferson, helped load the semi-trailer, services of which were loaned by L. B. Hartz Wholesale.

The clothing drive just concluded is an annual event here.

Survey of Flood Stricken Area Set

Started This Week and to Be Completed by Dec. 15

Governor Freeman announced today that he has requested several of the state departments to join in making a study of the distressed conditions in parts of Beltrami, Clearwater, Kittson, Marshall, Pennington, Polk and Red Lake Counties, resulting from the excessive rains which destroyed crops in the area.

Arthur Hanson, commissioner of securities, is chairman of the committee composed of representatives of the departments of agriculture, business development, conservation, employment and security, highway, Iron Range resources and rehabilitation, and public welfare. Dr. Hancock of the school of business of the University of Minnesota is consultant to the committee.

The study will include a survey of conditions relating to retail sales, production and sale of agricultural commodities, and a farm-to-farm census to obtain data for a factual report to be submitted to Washington in an effort to obtain federal funds to alleviate the hardships caused by reduction or total loss of 1957 crop income.

The physical survey will be launched on December 4 in the communities effected, and it is planned that the survey will be completed by December 15.
